... Good Teeth are the Elixir of LIFE ...

Dentistry, considering its vital importance, does not hold its proper place in public estimation. We think little about the benefits that will be conferred upon a community by increased dental attention. People are willing to spend money on dress and jewelry but begrudge dentists' fees. From time immemorial, beautiful teeth have been a valuable feminine asset. Notwithstanding this great tradition, comparatively few women pay due attention to their teeth.

Not only must health be considered, but personal appearance is often sacrificed by poor treatment and care of the teeth. Indeed it would be a wise move if every community could have a "TOOTH DAY" once each year. On this occasion, public speeches should be made in favor of better attention to the teeth. Indeed, they could well become smaller "Independence Days" with the general public sounding out their declaration of independence against the ravages of DENTAL DECAY by establishing new and higher standards of personal health and hygiene.

To Conduct Constitution Garden School

pride the citizens take in their beautiful gardens. Mrs. Crown pointed out yesterday. The same creative spirit which led earlier Georgians to hew homes out of a wilderness is the sound and commendable urge which prompts present-day citizens to surround their homes with the beauties of nature.

It has been said that there is something lacking in the person who does not take a pleasure and a pride in getting out and working with his hands in the warm, productive earth. And this pleasure, not to mention pride, can be a hundredfold enhanced by working with a knowledge of the latest and most productive methods.

For this reason, The Constitution first inaugurated its garden school last fall. Every session of the school was fully attended by Atlanta men and women who were looking forward to the spring season when garden work and care would show its results in the form of brilliant and striking blossoms.

And now the spring season, the season when the most enjoyable and productive garden work can be done, is at hand and the spring school promises to eclipse by far the success of the fall sessions.

In keeping with its policy to give its readers the greatest and best possible service for the city and its homes, The Constitution is proud to present such an experienced expert as Mrs. Crown as the lecturer and demonstrator for the garden school. The highly successful cooking school recently brought to Atlanta by The Constitution gave its readers unending pleasure in fine foods and tempting table preparations. Now the spring garden school promises to be just as valuable and efficient in creating beauty to surround the home.

A word about Mrs. Crown to those who might not be familiar with her work and her accomplishments. She began her highly instructive garden school lectures in 1929, speaking before clubs, churches and schools. When The Constitution opened its garden school last fall, the first garden school to be conducted by an Atlanta newspaper, by the way, Mrs. Crown was promptly selected as the best qualified person in this section to solve the householders' gardening problems, and the facilities for larger audiences, furnished by The Constitution, enabled more people to profit by her experience and store of knowledge.

Mrs. Crown was presented the "Pasture Achievement Medal" by the Garden Clubs of Georgia for her outstanding work in 1930. She attended the School of Horticulture for Women, in Ambler, Pa., in 1932, and in 1933 took an extended horticultural tour of Europe, studying the century-old gardens of various continental countries.

Returning to the United States, she took a course in flower arrangement in New York in 1934.

These extensive studies have made Mrs. Crown eminently qualified to give valuable instruction in garden planning, planting and care and culture of garden plants.

Again, let The Constitution say "welcome" to the spring garden school. Remember the date: from 10 to 11:30 o'clock each morning, March 24 to 26, at the Atlanta Woman's Club. Plan to attend every session and let Mrs. Crown help you make your garden this year the most beautiful ever.

SAFETY GROUP TO SET PERMANENT PROGRAM

75 Civic and Business Leaders
Expected at Meeting
Friday Afternoon.

Representatives of more than 75 business and civic organizations of Atlanta and DeKalb, forming the Atlanta Citizens' Safety Committee, will meet at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce building in the first full committee meeting since the group for the promotion of safe driving was organized during the latter part of February.

Permanent organization plans will be completed at the meeting Friday and a definite program of procedure will be considered. A subcommittee of the executive board has been appointed to present specific recommendations to the members for consideration and immediate action.

The Atlanta Citizens' Safety Committee was organized to enlist the concerted efforts of the various organizations of Atlanta and surrounding territory to combat the traffic hazards of the city and to seek better control of congested traffic movement.

The executive board, pro tem, of the safety committee, is composed of Major General George Van Horn Moseley, Preston S. Arkwright, Walter E. Hendrix, Robert E. McLeary, J. A. Harper, Jere Wells, Mrs. Leonard Haas, Malcolm N. Flemming, A. L. Myers and Russell R. Whitman.

HUGE ICE PACKS RUSH TO SEAN IN GREAT FLOOD

Androscoggin river. Destruction of the 750-foot span, railroad officials said, cut off service on one of its main lines between Portland and Bangor.

Merimack Hits Massachusetts.

While the Merimack river receded in New Hampshire, it rose above flood stage in the Massachusetts industrial communities of Lowell, Lawrence and Haverhill.

The mighty Connecticut river, sweeping ice flows toward Long Island sound, was rising at Hartford, waters backed up to Northampton, Mass., where some 200 per cent were evacuated from adjacent lowlands.

In Pennsylvania all the large rivers were gradually receding, but the Susquehanna continued to menace riverfront streets in Harrisburg.

Rain forecasts threatened to hamper relief work in the stricken Wyoming valley, where an estimated 500 families were routed from their homes.

The deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Boop and their two children at Kingston were blamed on the flood.

New York and New Jersey reported one death each.

A sudden drop in temperature in Canada's maritime provinces was believed to have ended the danger there.

LONGINO, RAGSDALE SEEN AS NEW POWERS

ter political enemies, Longino and Ragdale, an approximate two-to-one vote in the election results. Ellis B. Barrett, mayor pro tem, and Roy L. Crow, former candidate for mayor, whom Johnson wholeheartedly supported in their race for the commission posts.

Nor have Dr. Adams and Commissioner Almand made public their sentiments on the election results. The major and minor candidates maintained a front of solid silence so far as the press was concerned.

Rumors of a change in political alliance, with the names of Adams and Almand prominent, are flying thick and fast in political circles.

At Crucial Point.

Experienced observers have no hesitation in saying the political future of Adams and Almand hangs in the balance and that the course they pursue within the next few months will finally determine whether or not they will align themselves with Longino and Ragdale or will remain in the Johnson camp.

Political prophets could see no possible healing of the breach between Longino and Johnson, who have fought each other bitterly at strident meetings of the commission.

The break between the two board members began in early 1933 when Dr. Adams was named chairman of the commission while precedent called for the election of Ragdale as chairman with Longino heading the public works committee, the position which was given Almand by the controlling bloc.

Charge Hurled.

Events following this departure from custom in the board's committee set-up included charges by Longino that "big three" exceeded the budget; every month in a wild orgy of spending public funds; that "parasites" studied the county pay roll as payments for political debts; and that the county would be bankrupt unless extravagance was stopped. These charges were sustained emphatically by the July-August grand jury last year after investigation.

Longino and Ragdale based their plea for re-election on their promises to continue the fight against the policies of Johnson, Adams and Almand. Their victory was county-wide and included every home ward of Johnson, Adams, Almand, Barrett and LeCraw.

With the vote of confidence given the minority members by the people, observers of politics prophesied that a number of changes in personnel would come almost immediately. They pointed to the Ralph Pharr fee case as an example of probable action by the triumphant minority members.

No political observer predicted continuance of the majority faction's control, as now constituted.

SUPPLIES ARE SOLD TO CHINESE REPUBLIC

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(UP)—China, now fighting communist armies and bandits, was the largest purchaser of arms and munitions from the United States in February, according to a report issued today by the State Department.

Last month the United States exported war materials worth $1,315,582.10. Of these, goods worth $490,325.20 were sold to the Chinese republic.

Abyssinia and Italy, now at war, did not appear among the list of purchasers inasmuch as the United States has embargoed sale of munitions to them.

Germany, whose relations with its neighbors now are strained, spent $58,220 here in February for munitions of war. Among its purchases were rifles, machine guns and artillery.

Hundreds of Sleepers Are Aroused As Meteor Lights Up Eastern States

Celestial Skyrocket Turns Night Into Noonday Brightness in Trek Across Eastern Skies; Landing Spot Is Yet Undetermined.

NEWARK, N. J., March 14.—(AP)

The most brilliant meteor to flash across eastern skies in recent years turned night into noonday brightness early today and roused hundreds of sleepers from their beds with its tremor.

The phenomenon occurred a few minutes before 3 o'clock and although apparently centering over New Jersey, was visible throughout a large part of the eastern seaboard.

Its course was uncertain, its "landing spot" as yet undetermined, but all those who viewed it—police on night duty, airplane pilots and other nocturnal workers—agreed that the bright lights dimmed street lights to the strength of candles and that the rumbling which followed a few seconds after the "ball of fire" disappeared into the east, rocked buildings.

Telephone exchanges were flooded with calls by excited hundreds, many of them awakened by the rumble or shock and fearful that there had been an explosion in one of the several arsenals in the state.

Police on patrol in shore towns said the meteor apparently hurtled into the ocean far off shore, but an airplane pilot reported from over Virginia that it appeared to drop to earth near Norfolk, Va.

Two reports indicated that portions of the disintegrating meteor might have fallen into the Hackensack river near New York bay.

There was a "hissing, sizzling noise like hot metal being thrust into cold water," as the meteor passed over Secaucus, according to Robert M. McGinn, of Lyndhurst, a yardmaster for the D. & W. Railroad. McGinn believed it came from particles dropping into the river.

Lehigh Valley Railroad police said a piece of the meteor fell into the bay over the Jersey City shore line in the vicinity of the famous Black Tom explosion of 1916.

Like all meteors, which travel at the rate of more than 80 miles a second, this one gave scientists no chance to make a study of it in action.

However, Dr. Charles P. Olivier, director of the Flower observatory and professor of astronomy at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, said reports reaching him by telephone indicated today's meteor was the most brilliant seen in this country since March 28, 1903, when a large one crossed the southwest skies and fell in New Mexico.

KNOTTY TAX PROBLEM

no grounds for saying we will get out of here by May 1."

One major hurdle on the tax legislation was being with the subcommittee in tentative agreement on a schedule for a graduated tax on undistributed corporate earnings.

Senate Lobby Probe to Resume.

Back by troubles in the senate, senate lobby investigators arranged to resume their inquiry Monday.

Some possibility that open hearings would be held on the tax legislation next week was seen by Chairman Doughton, democrat, North Carolina, of the full ways and means committee.

"Anybody that has a right to be heard will get a chance," Doughton promised.

The subcommittee was expected during the week to reach a decision on a bill to treat foreign stockholders and dig into the question of a "windfall" tax to recapture unpaid, or refunded, AAA processing taxes.

The administration has suggested a 90 per cent tax on income derived by processors from the returning, or withholding, of the processing taxes. President Roosevelt proposed to cut the budget by invalidation of AAA.

He suggested the corporate tax revision to bring in about $620,000,000 more than existing corporation taxes which would be repealed, and thus finance the new farm program and the cost of bonus prepayment.

That the corporate tax program tentatively approved in the ways and means subcommittee represents a reversal of the idea that big business has an advantage by reason of size alone was admitted by Chairman Egan.

He said in response to questions of reporters that last year's tax bill which imposed a graduated rate on corporate income recognized the idea that big business in itself is an advantage by giving preferential treatment to small corporations.

The rate ranged from 12 1/2 per cent on income up to $2,000 to 15 per cent on income of $40,000 or more.

Furtwaengler Postpones Trip to N. Y. Following Anti-Nazi Protests.

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP)—Wilhelm Furtwaengler will not conduct the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society orchestra next season, the society announced tonight after the receipt of a cable from the German conductor whose appointment raised a storm of anti-Nazi protest.

"I propose to postpone my season in the interest of the Philharmonic Society and music until the time the public realizes that politics and music are apart," said his cable from Luxor, Egypt.

Furtwaengler is director of the Prussian State Opera. He would have conducted here in the place of Arturo Toscanini, Italian maestro retiring at the end of this season.

The executive committee of the society said it "most regretfully accedes to the wishes expressed... although it involves the loss to New York of the artistic services of one of the foremost conductors of the world."

Furtwaengler fell out with the Nazi government because of his appeals for ousted Jewish musicians in Germany, resigning as leader of the Berlin Philharmonic orchestra and conductor of the Municipal Opera in a dispute over playing a composition by Hindemith, a Jew.

He pitched up his quarrel last year, however, and returned to the Berlin Philharmonic in April, 1933.

UNIVERSAL FILMS
SOLD BY LAEMMLE

Picture Corporation Purchased by Standard Capital Company.

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP)—Carl Laemmle, founder and president of Universal Pictures Corporation, and J. Chester Cowdin, president of the Standard Capital Company, announced tonight through the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Company that operating control of Universal Company's "world" production and facilities have been sold to Standard Capital Company and Charles R. Rogers.

The price of the sale was not announced.

The advertising agency said that Cowdin had announced that with Laemmle's retirement, R. H. Cochran, vice president of Universal since its inception, will become president of the present corporation.

The announcement read in part: "In exercising our option which the purchasers have held for nearly five months, the new group obtains control of 90 per cent of the Universal stock and will take over the active management of the entire Universal production and distributing organization within 20 days."

PRESIDENT REMITS FINE OF DUNLAP

Former Democratic Leader
To Be Released Monday
From U. S. Hospital.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(AP)—Remission by President Roosevelt of a $10,000 fine assessed against Millard F. Dunlap, one-time treasurer of the democratic national committee, was announced today by the Justice Department.

He will be released Monday from the federal hospital at Springfield, Illinois.

Dunlap, 78 years old, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment for violation of the national banking act. He was president of the Ayers National Bank at Jacksonville, Illinois, which failed in 1932.

Several unsuccessful efforts to obtain a pardon for Dunlap were made. Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, minister to Denmark, interested herself in his behalf because of his friendship for her father, the late William Jennings Bryan.

ITALIAN PLANES PRESS TOWARD BRITISH ZONE

Ethiopian Detachment Bombed Within 23 Miles of Lake Tana.

ROME, March 14.—(AP)—Mussolini's planes pressed forward tonight over terrain dotted by aerial bombs in a two-pronged drive toward Lakes Tana and Ashangi.

Dispatches reaching Rome said one column of troops was but 100 miles from Lake Tana, headwater of the blue Nile and within Great Britain's sphere of influence in Ethiopia. The first and third army corps moved on toward the Lake Ashangi district which is north of Quorom. Preceded by an aerial bombing attack, they marched south of Amba Alaji, captured by the Italians and north of Dessale where Emperor Haile Selassie has his field headquarters.

Ethiopian troops, the "Black Eagles" of the Engatib section, were reported to have been bombed. The district is about 23 miles from Lake Tana.

Still another column of troops crossed the Takazze river and pushed on into the Telleliti region, northeast of Lake Tana.

The government here released figures showing that 360,000 men, 20,000 animals, 6,500 motor vehicles and 3,000,000 tons of material had been shipped to Africa during the past year.

"BROWN CONDOR" URGES U. S. RED CROSS AID

CHICAGO, March 14.—(AP)—Mobilization of Red Cross units for service in war-torn Ethiopia was urged upon American agencies today by Colonel John C. Robinson, the "brown condor" of Emperor Haile Selassie's flying corps.

Organizing such units would do more good in uniting the negroes of America and Ethiopia "than any other undertaking in the next 50 years," Robinson wrote to Janet H. Waterford, a negro friend, and registered nurse.

Although uncommunicative about his army duties, Robinson casually mentioned that he narrowly escaped death last January when he encountered two Italian planes.

Robinson, who was an instructor at a flying school here and at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., succeeded Hubert Julian, of New York, the "Black Eagle of Harlem," as commander in the emperor's air force.

Robinson's letters disclosed there were few doctors in the country. He injured along Ethiopia's war front.

"It requires from two to three weeks to get the injured soldiers to hospitals because of the poor modes of transportation," he wrote. "For that reason medicine having pain-killing effect is needed badly."

The flying colonel said that to reap maximum benefits from the war, it would be necessary for five doctors, 10 nurses and 20 first aid men to accompany each Red Cross unit sent to Ethiopia.

Ethiopia has an almost inexhaustible supply of man power, but lacks funds to equip its soldiers with machines of war, Robinson wrote. In a population of 15 millions every man and every boy above 10 is a soldier, he said.

I.C.C. FREIGHT HEARING SLATED HERE IN APRIL

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today fixed seven hearings at points throughout the country on an application of Class 1 railroads to continue indefinitely emergency freight surcharges scheduled to expire July 1.

Hearings set include: Fort Worth, Texas, March 26; Baton Rouge, La., March 28; Salt Lake City, March 30; Atlanta, April 2; Minneapolis, April 3; Chicago, April 7; Washington, April 15.

The commission urged that witnesses interested in the same phases of the hearings co-ordinate their presentation of testimony to expedite the taking of evidence and to avoid duplication.

Wraiths of Mankind, Drug Addicts, Haunt Federal Trial of Physician

By LAMAR Q. BALL

Their minds are dulled and their bodies are wasted; their colorless skin testifies the ravages of squandered health; their drawn faces bespeak the misery and distress within their hearts. Strange crowds have gathered in the halls outside the United States district court, but none so strange as this restless, anxious crowd of morphia addicts, witnesses and onlookers at the trial of Dr. Jephtha S. Freeman.

Devoted most of them through no fault of their own, branded as convicts by the federal government before it will attempt half-heartedly to lift them out of the squalor of disease and poverty and the quickens of drugs.

Victims of a fierce, tormenting appetite for that slow, sure poison that destroys judgment, happiness, usefulness; that wrecks families and directs the dragging footsteps of its moral bankrupts toward poverty, crime, madness and death.

Some addicts seldom gather around the federal building. Last week and this week, however, while the government tries to convict Dr. Freeman on charges of illegally issuing prescriptions for drugs, they are interested and many of them involved in the testimony that is being unfolded to the jury. So, the usual terrors of the federal building, and the narcotics agents busy with Dr. Freeman. No one finds time to harass the addicts. They find sanctuary in the marble halls that are always crowded, where the stately magnificence has always frightened and never impressed them.

Law Never Kind.
The law has never been kind to a doctor found guilty of an unaccountable mistake of the government develops his shiftness and his eagerness to avoid observation or the merest chance of recognition by the government's agents.

They are outlaws. They must creep into corners, friendless fugitives from justice, for the government shift for themselves. If they are caught they are tossed into jails, deprived of the drugs for a few months and tossed out of jail—never cured. A cure takes time and the government has too many of them to handle in its limited number of jails.

This trial of Dr. Freeman and the other doctors who are to be tried afterwards, and the addicts it attracts, reveals conditions in Atlanta that few citizens understand. Money and arguments have been wasted on the problems of liquor, but little public attention is directed toward the more sinister problems of drugs.

An addict is called to the stand. He tells of the incurable ravages of disease that rack the body. Nothing but morphia can quiet his shrieking nerves. The doctor has prescribed for him—morphine. He hates morphia, he tells the jury. He must work to support his family and he can't work unless he has his morphia to quiet him.

Fantastic Economies.
He makes $20 a week. He uses five grains of morphia a day. Each grain costs a dollar at a drug store or $2 from a street peddler. His prescriptions cost him $2 every three days, the usual prescription being 15 grains. Figure it out yourself. He is paying twice his income for the drug. Where does he get the money? How does he contribute to the support of the family?

He never worked a day in his life, comments another addict in the hall outside.

The addicts know one another. They can detect their own symptoms in the eyes of another. They are not even loyal to one another, except when one has an over-supply of the drug and sees another in need.

As one victim answered a question from Judge E. Marvin Underwood in court some time ago:

"The craving is this, your honor. This man standing here with me is my best friend. He and I have been pals for years. But if you were to lock us in a cell together and put

"And, the government must remember that morphia is the least dangerous of all the drugs. The really vicious drugs are the barbiturate derivatives, chloral, amtal and all those preparations that actuate persons crazy much more quickly than does morphia."

"Morphine is dangerous in the hands of a man, but there are other drugs that are more dangerous and hundreds, right here in Atlanta, are addicted to them."

The addicts will continue to flock to the third floor of the old postoffice building, all of them obviously fortified with "shots" of morphia, to witness their own wretchedness as they try to justify their weakness. It is solemn and appalling to view these uniformed men from whom the hope of redemption has fled forever and whose only hope is to be able to satisfy their craving for the drug.

One of this crowd last week, a thin shell of a man was selected to go to prison for 35 months. He had bought drugs on Dr. Freeman's prescriptions and did not need quite so much as he had obtained from the drugist. He tried to bolster his finances by peddling his excess supply at 100 per cent profit. He was arrested and convicted for selling drugs.

For Thorough Cure.
Judge Underwood said to him: "I dislike locking you up; my sentence may appear excessive. But I want you put into the government's new farm for narcotic addicts at Lexington, Ky., and given a thorough cure. I hope you can regain some responsible position in life."

A 65-year-old mother appeared with him. She was all he had and he was all she had. The pride of mother love and the despair of one who sees her only son in a hopeless situation were stamped on her face. She watched him as he marched him off to the prison wagon. She bit her lips and tears were in her eyes. She has lived through many weary years. She is growing old and she has bitter recollections from which she shall never escape. He had a fixed smile on his lips, this slight caricature of a man, weighing 110 pounds, he had once held a responsible position in Atlanta. Twice, he has taken the cure which he is to try again. Never has he been given the cure properly.

Inside the courtroom, the fight goes on to solve whether a doctor should let them die slowly by their own hands or wrest the poison from them as one wrests a pistol from the hands of a madman.

Use of Taxing Power Thusly Is Basis of New Revenue Measure.

(Copyright, 1936, by United Press.)
WASHINGTON, March 14.—(UP)—Attorneys for two Ohio corporations filed a protest before the board of tax appeals today which may affect legal questions arising from President Roosevelt's corporate surplus tax proposal.

The suit, aimed at Section 104 of the revenue act of 1932, raised a question as to whether the government, through its taxing power, had the right to force corporations to pay dividends thereby, in effect, regulating the management of the corporations.

The $820,000,000 tax bill now being drafted in congress at the President's suggestion would tax corporate surpluses which are not distributed as dividends, thus preventing the corporations, it has been contended, from building up reserves for use in time of depression.

The suit, filed by the Howard Paper Co., of Urbana, Ohio, and the Maxwell Paper Co., of Franklin, Ohio, attacked a section of the 1932 law which has been considered virtually unenforceable. There was little chance that the suit ever would reach the supreme court for final ruling, and it admittedly was not filed for the purpose of testing the new tax law in advance.

There was some evidence to indicate, however, that it touched on questions of law which might conceivably be raised against the new measure, although it could not be certain until wording of the new law is disclosed.

Basis of Suit.
The suit contended that Section 104 of the 1932 revenue law is unconstitutional because it attempts:

"To regulate the internal affairs of corporations created by the states and to compel members of the boards of directors of such corporations into declaring dividends for the purpose of creating taxable income for the federal government; thus, in effect, regulating and in practice destroying the discretion, care and management" of the corporations.

Section 104 of the 1932 act, which has been incorporated in revenue laws since 1921, provides that:

"If any corporation, however created and organized, is formed or operated for the purpose of preventing the imposition of the surtax upon its shareholders through the medium of permitted gains and profits to accumulate instead of being divided or distributed, there shall be levied upon the net income of such corporation a tax of 10 per cent."

President Roosevelt reminded congress that the government had been unable to collect much revenue under the law, and that it was difficult to prove that surpluses were withheld to evade income tax payments on distributed earnings. He suggested that the new bill tax net earnings not reserved against hard times. In either case, the government will collect a tax.

High Court Test?
Whether the new measure might be subject to attack as attempting to "regulate the internal affairs" of corporations as in the action filed by the Ohio companies, was uncertain.

However, it was pointed out that the new measure will provide for a graduated tax on all net earnings with reference to whether the corporation is in the business of avoiding income taxes or corporations presumably will be free either to distribute their earnings or to withhold them as reserves against hard times. In either case, the government will collect a tax.

A supreme court decision on the points at issue in the action of the Ohio companies appeared improbable. The high court was asked to rule on Section 104 some years ago in the United States corporation case, but refused.

The decision of the board of tax appeals, upholding the treasury's claim, was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals and it was later refused a writ of certiorari by the United States supreme court.

In their own defense, the companies claimed that "any accumulation of surplus" during the year 1933 was inspired by business conditions in the industry and for the welfare of the corporation on the part of the board of directors and was not prompted or inspired by any desire or purpose to accumulate surplus for the purpose of avoiding the imposition of surtaxes upon its stockholders."

Reasonable Distribution.
During the year 1933, the companies claimed, they distributed a "reasonable distribution of its accumulations under all the circumstances."

The capital stock is almost entirely owned by the Howard family. H. M. Howard possesses 4,295 of the 5,000 shares issued and the only owner of the remainder is the late Mrs. Howard. The late Mrs. Howard's estate, owned by 50 shares.

The petition also alleged that Section 104 violates the fifth amendment of the constitution by depriving the petitioners of their property without "due process of law" and also, Section 9, Article 1, by laying "direct taxes without apportionment under the guise of income taxes."

A further charge of violation of the 16th amendment was levied, on the basis that "it is not the imposition of income tax within the meaning" of the law.

Ownership of the Maxwell Paper Company's capital stock is also in the hands of the Howard family. Of 100 shares the Howard Paper Company owns 2,250, and all but two of the seven holders bear the name Howard.

DEMOCRATS PLAN JEFFERSON DINNERS

Nationwide Series of Dances, Meetings Will Raise Campaign Funds.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(AP)—The democratic national committee announced tonight plans for a nationwide series of meetings and dances on Thomas Jefferson's birthday, April 13, to raise money in the same manner as the Jackson Day dinners.

The committee said the center of the observance would be at Baltimore, where President Roosevelt already has announced he will make a speech that will be carried to hundreds of meetings and dances in every section of the country.

W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the committee, said 250,000 people contributed to the party through the Jackson Day dinners and forced $50,000 would participate in the Jefferson celebration.

"Truly the democratic party is not being financed by the people but by a wealthy few," Morgan said.

Tired Stair-Climbers in New York Hope Strike Will Be Settled Soon

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP)—Manhattan rounded out its second week of stair-climbing because of hampered elevator service today with a vague hope that striking building service employees and realty owners at last might get together over a conference table and settle the far-flung labor dispute.

The police set the number of buildings affected at 2,463.

A five-man board continued negotiations for the peace Mayor F. H. LaGuardia was unable to obtain in two weeks of embittered statements by representatives of the Employees' Union and the real estate lords of New York's towers.

Hopes for the truce lay in the welcome James J. Bambrick, president of the union, gave the mayor's mediation board and a compromise stand promised by the building owners at re-employing strikers.

After today's surveys, the mayor's jury of businessmen and public officials hoped to get faction leaders across a common table for a final settlement.

Strike Started March 1.
The building service workers—elevator operators, porters, chambermaids, boiler room engineers and some superintendents—went out in a mass movement Sunday, March 1, in their fight for a 15 per cent raise in their working hours to 48 from an ascertained six and seven-day schedule of as high as 12 hours daily.

Quickly the strike spread throughout the city. Mayor LaGuardia proclaimed a state of emergency. Bambrick threatened to call out more than 100,000 men in the city's 9,000 elevator buildings, and to back it up with a nation-wide building strike and New York city general strike if needed.

There were breaks in the reality group's front. Some 755 buildings capitulated, some on the basis of hiring only union men when future replacements were to be made.

Bambrick Willing to Arbitrate.
Bambrick said he was willing to arbitrate on the basis—a "preference shop"—but the reality owners refused.

Ferdinand A. Silcox, chief United States forester, was approved as an arbitrator to act when an arbitration board could be agreed on.

The dispute narrowed finally to the question of hiring back the men who struck.

Bambrick demanded the ousting of all replacement workers, whom he said the reality owners paid $14 a day with food and lodging.

Police handed out 24 hours and then said that perhaps 85 per cent of the replacement workers were men who would not be satisfactory under ordinary circumstances. He proposed that 15 per cent of the replacements be retained.

"That," retorted Bambrick, "proves how utterly incompetent a crew the real estate board has lined up. The figure is probably nearer to 99.9-10 per cent."

In some buildings tenants circulated petitions demanding the rehiring of the strikers and expressing their fear of the men who had been substituted.

SUPREME COURT NEARS 2 NEW DEAL DECISIONS

Tribunal Expected To Rule on Sugar Institute Wrangle Monday.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(AP)—The supreme court was believed tonight in legal circles to have reached at least tentative decisions on the constitutionality of the Guffey coal control and the 1935 "truth in securities" acts.

Cases involving these two New Deal laws constituted the principal business before the nine justices at their regular Saturday afternoon private conference.

In addition, they had the task of deciding 21 other cases argued in the last two weeks, and whether to review 13 disputes appealed from lower courts.

Brief Meeting.
They will meet briefly Monday for announcement of opinions. The only case of general interest likely to be decided is the government's anti-trust suit against the Sugar Institute. This is an organization of sugar refiners to regulate trade practices within the industry.

Opinions on the Guffey and securities litigation—the only pending New Deal cases—may be announced as early as March 30. It is generally believed, however, that they are unlikely to come later. The court will recess Monday for two weeks during which it will prepare opinions.

Only 15 days have elapsed on March 30 since arguments on the coal case were completed last Thursday. The securities case was submitted Wednesday. The time between arguments and opinions on other New Deal disputes this term was: Agricultural adjustment act, 28 days; Tennessee Valley act, 80; Bankhead cotton control law, 84; rice millers' processing taxes, 28.

If justices agreed this afternoon on how to dispose of the cases, two of the nine were assigned the task of preparing the opinions. If there were dissents to the majority views, justices also were selected to write minority opinions.

Two other New Deal cases may be appealed in time for final rulings before the summer quits for the summer in early June.

They involve constitutionality of the public utility holding company act and the right of the federal government to provide P.W.A. funds for publicly-owned hydro-electric projects.

ICKES LOSES APPEAL
Department of Justice Wins in Island Litigation.

PHILADELPHIA, March 14.—(AP)—The control of the district court of the Virgin Islands and the appointment of its government attorney by the Department of Justice was upheld today by the United States circuit court of appeals.

Harold C. Ickes, secretary of the interior, rejected Ickes' claim to the department of justice to control the court and appoint the attorney, contending it was a usurpation of power.

The case came before the court in an appeal of the conviction of Leonard Walter McIntosh, clerk in the island, on a minor larceny charge.

Ickes' counsel asked the conviction be set aside, contending it was unjustified, and criticized Judge T. Webster Wilson, appointed by Homer S. Cummings, attorney-general, for his conduct of the trial.

In two concurring opinions the court rejected Ickes' claim to authority over appointment of the attorney, and dismissed his contention the conviction was unjustified.

TRAFFIC STUDY GROUP TO BE ASKED BY WHITE

Creation of Commission Will Be Proposed at Council Session Tomorrow.

Creation of a joint council and citizens' commission to study the Atlanta police department and traffic ordinances with a view of changing the present set-up will be proposed in city council tomorrow.

Councilman John A. White, fourth ward, who has advocated creation of a post of director of public safety to supplement Chief of Police T. U. Sturdivant, will urge approval of the measure, and will file with city council reports of 25 leading cities of the nation regarding the conduct of police affairs and regulation of traffic.

Under the plan, Mayor Key would appoint four members of city council and three citizens from the city at large to membership on the commission. After a painstaking study of local conditions as compared to those in other communities, a report carrying commission recommendations will be filed with council, it is anticipated.

A summary of White's studies yesterday revealed that nine of the 25 cities have safety directors, six have police commissioners, eight have safety commissioners, one a chief administrative officer and one a commissioner of police.

Atlanta Alone.
"In the entire set-up of cities I find none which has the same system prevalent here," White said yesterday. "This alone is conclusive of sufficient indication that our system is more to blame than anything else for our troubles. We could not be right and all the others wrong."

"Other leading cities of the nation have learned as we have that crime is well organized. Traffic is another serious problem and enforcement should be placed under an efficient, capable and well-trained leader with full authority, power to train, discipline, select and promote men without outside interference. I am confident that the people of Atlanta who are paying the bills and who are suffering because of the selfish operations of politicians will feel that some change is necessary. City council should authorize the study without a dissenting vote."

"Would Save Lives."
"Traffic laws of other cities are a revelation and if applied to Atlanta would react to save the lives of hundreds of citizens and may save thousands of dollars a year through elimination of accidents. The time has come for Atlanta to modernize its police system, institute an efficient system and keep pace with other cities of the nation in the battles against traffic accidents and in suppression of crime."

Included in the list of cities on which White based his action were the following:

New Orleans, Richmond, Pittsburgh, Memphis, Cincinnati, Birmingham, Miami, Jacksonville, Detroit, Dallas, Washington, Baltimore, Knoxville, Philadelphia, Rochester, Jersey City, Portland, Boston, Fort Worth, Norfolk, Oklahoma City, Kansas City, Columbus, Ohio, and the city and county of San Francisco.

MYSTERY ATTACK FATAL TO PAINTER
Thomas Stubblefield Succumbs to Injuries Received in Train Tuesday.

Mysterious injuries suffered Tuesday night when he was stabbed and thrown from a train near Cartersville resulted in the death of Grady Stubblefield early yesterday morning of Thomas F. Stubblefield, 43, of 14 Eagan avenue, a painter.

Stubblefield was found near the railroad tracks, and brought to the hospital, suffering from a broken right arm and stab wounds of the chest, which penetrated the left lung. Bartow county and Atlanta police are investigating.

Stubblefield is survived by his wife; three sons, Louis Stubblefield, Owen Stubblefield and Leroy Stubblefield; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Stubblefield; four brothers, Edward Stubblefield, Cliff Stubblefield, Eugene Stubblefield and J. W. Stubblefield; and four sisters, Mrs. Roy Lester, Mrs. John Clark, Mrs. James McGee and Miss Rachel Stubblefield.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by Harold H. Sims.

Life Expectancy Increased Here By Medical Work of Chest Agencies

Thousands of Persons in Fulton and DeKalb Counties Receive Expert Service Every Year in Numerous Organizations Supported by Charitable Contributions.

(Editor's Note: This is another in the series of articles on Atlanta's welfare needs and how the community is meeting them.)

By BOYCE M. EDENS, Executive Director, Atlanta Community Chest.

In the field of health, the welfare services that Atlanta provides for those unable to help themselves comes closest to the ideal of prevention that is the guiding principle of all this activity.

Here, in busy clinics, in the constant work of research and education, trained men and women seek to get the jump on developing ailments before they become powerful factors of destruction in human lives and relationships.

Good health is an essential foundation on which is based all work of rebuilding damaged human lives. Without it, the effort in individual cases is a structure built on shifting sand.

The question of health enters into every phase of welfare work. In the family welfare field, disease is a potential cause of breakdown when it moves the breadwinner, or the homemaker, or in the case of children becomes an economic drain and a factor tending to the sense of family security.

Health a Fundamental.
Health is fundamental in the field of youth guidance, where it is in action that the building of character and leadership must begin with sound bodies and sound minds.

In all Atlanta's fields served by Community Chest agencies, the question of health plays a major part. But there are a group of Chest agencies that deal directly with problems of health and health education as their major responsibility.

Few people in Atlanta know that the Morris Hirsch clinic, the non-sectarian clinic of the Jewish Federation for Social Service on Capitol avenue, maintains one of the largest dental clinics for needy persons in the south.

Dental Aid Provided.
Thousands of men and women have been given dental care here through the volunteer service of the city's leading dentists. These men conduct also a special children's dental clinic where the lessons of oral hygiene are taught early and soundly.

This is only part of the great work of this clinic, founded many years ago and converted into a memorial to one of Atlanta's most public-spirited citizens. In this clinic is an eye, ear, nose and throat department manned by a skilled volunteer staff and equipped for the removal of tonsils. There are also departments of general medicine and minor surgery, and of diseases of women.

Although conducted under Jewish auspices, this clinic supported by community dollars, serves the needy regardless of creed, Jewish patients being in the minority.

Child Service Active.
The clinic of the Child Welfare Association on Juniper street also does a work, the scope of which is little known. Through its doors pass streams of mothers with children in need of expert care. A volunteer staff of specialists in the ailments of children, including some nationally known, give careful individual service to those who must have it, but who cannot afford to pay for it.

Problems of diet, so important in the proper development of children, and the great work of immunization from diseases that once took heavy toll of young lives, are just part of this constant activity.

No picture of the health work that goes on in Atlanta is complete without turning a strong light on the Atlanta Tuberculosis Association. Through its clinic, staffed by men who have devoted years of study to one of the most insidious diseases of all times, it has brought hope to hundreds who, not so many years ago, would have been doomed.

Homes Held Together.
Its nursing service has held homes together, caring for countless ones for whom there are no facilities available in sanatoria, and doing a work of prevention that has caused a sharp drop in the number of tuberculosis cases among white people.

Perhaps the greatest work done by this organization is the extensive tests, particularly among children, that reveal the presence of tuberculosis even in its earliest stages, so that prompt treatment damps the current of the disease and prevents years of suffering to the individual and the menace of infection to all around him.

That is the significant thing about this community health work. Day after day, year after year, it drives toward making Atlanta a better place in which to live by building sturdier individuals, by stamping out sources of infection, and by getting the jump on disease before it is too late to do very much about it.

There is no way of telling of the real accomplishments of this work in terms of the individual. But in the aggregate, it means the average age of death in Atlanta is being raised.

In other words, Community Chest dollars spent in health services are bringing returns in the form of increased expectancy of life for every man, woman and child living in Fulton and DeKalb counties.

S. R. O. SIGN PUT OUT FOR MOORE CONCERT

Revised Program for Event Here Thursday Night Is Announced.

A sold-out house will greet Grace Moore, America's beautiful soprano of Metropolitan opera, concert, radio and picture fame, when she appears here in concert at the Fox theater next Thursday night as the closing attraction of the current All-Star Concert Series.

Every seat in the house, including 500 special chairs to be placed in the orchestra pit and on the stage, has been sold and standing room only is now available for those who wish to attend his outstanding event.

Marcel Hubert, a violinist of international renown, will assist Miss Moore in her concert here, and the two soloists will be accompanied by Gibner King at the piano.

The revised program is: "Adagio," Tartini; "Sonata in A," Boccherini—Mr. Hubert; "Air de Lia," from L'Enfant Prodigue; Debussy; "Ouvre ton coeur," Bizet; "Valse," Arensky-Koshetz; "Piano marcia," Nin; "Seguidilla," De Falla—Miss Moore.

"Air from Louise," Chappentier—Miss Moore.

Intermezzo from Goyescas; Grandioso; "Andantino," Kreisler; "La Source," Davidoff—Mr. Hubert. "Who'll Buy My Lavender," Edward German; "Iris," Daniel Wolle; "Wild Geese," James H. Roger; "By the Bend of the River," Clara Edwards; "Serenade," John Alden Carpenter—Miss Moore.

Plans for First Dogwood Festival Will Go to Committee on Tuesday

161 Members of Group Expected to Attend Session in Council Chamber of City Hall; Mrs. Robert L. Cooney Will Outline Program.

Plans for Atlanta's first annual dogwood festival, to be held here the week of April 19, will be presented to the Atlanta Dogwood Festival Commission at 11 o'clock Tuesday, when the 161 members of that body meet in the council chamber at city hall. Invitations to this meeting have been issued from the office of Mayor Key, honorary chairman of the commission, and full attendance is expected.

The Atlanta dogwood festival is the outgrowth of plans laid during the past several years by the garden clubs of Atlanta, under the leadership of Mrs. Robert L. Cooney, director of the 1936 festival, and the program will be outlined to the commission by Mrs. Cooney, for discussion by the meeting.

Robert Strickland Jr., treasurer, will report on finances, and will make public for the first time the honor roll of underwriters who have pledged funds to date in support of the movement.

Many Visitors Expected. According to festival officials, the seven days from April 19 to April 25 will be crisscrossed with entertainment for Atlanta and her guests from all over the southeast, who are expected here. The entertainment will be such as to appeal to whole families, and to families in every walk of life. The entertainment ranges from the appearance here of Metropolitan opera's luminaries and the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra on the one hand, to costumed dancing in downtown streets, roped off and specially decorated for the occasion. Prizes will be awarded the most unique costumes.

A great parade is in preparation in which each Atlanta garden club will enter a float in competition. The parade will wind through downtown Atlanta to formally mark the opening of the festival. Those who wish to dance will find plenty of opportunity to do so at various times during the week, when internationally famous dance music will be offered. Atlanta school children will play their part in the affair when a great pageant is held in Grant field.

On other occasions there will be special events for children. Fetes Planned. Fetes will be held at various points throughout the city in the public gardens developed by Atlanta garden clubs, and private gardens will be thrown open to the public during regularly organized garden tours. The Junior League of Atlanta is planning a carnival for one night during the week. The leaders in golf, tennis, polo and other athletic fields are preparing special matches, which will be scheduled during the period. And a wide variety of other events is planned in order to make the festival as full and as balanced as possible.

The program is expected to meet with the hearty approval of the commission at the meeting Tuesday, and contracts will then be executed promptly with the various artists whose time is now under option to the festival association. Committees will be appointed to complete the organization of the various phases of the week, and the work has been carried to such a point that the plans should proceed smoothly and without delay of any kind to a gala and successful event, is the opinion of experienced observers.

MRS. FRED J. ALLEN FUNERAL RITES HELD
Final rites for Mrs. Fred J. Allen, wife of the late former mayor and postmaster of East Point and a resident of that community for more than 50 years, were held at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the residence, 316 East Point street.

Dr. J. Spore Lyons officiated and burial was in Oakland cemetery under the direction of Howard L. Carmichael.

Mrs. Allen, who died Friday at the age of 80 years, was one of the oldest members of the First Presbyterian church, of Atlanta, and active in church affairs.

PRIME FRIGERS ARE STOLEN.

20 SCHOLARSHIPS TO EMORY OFFERED

Senior High School Boys of Eight States Eligible for Tests.

An offer of 20 scholarships, of $300 each, has been made to senior high school boys of eight southeastern states by the alumni association of Emory University. The examinations will be taken Tuesday, April 14.

States entering the contest include Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee. The awards will be divided between students in geographical districts so that as nearly as possible an equal number of students will compete for each scholarship.

Winners of the awards must enter Emory in September, 1936. Of the fund, $200 will apply on tuition and fees for the freshman year, and the remaining $100 will go toward expenses of the second year, provided the freshman record of the winner is satisfactory.

The scholarships have been given by the alumni association for several years. Tests, composed by the faculty committee of Emory, are given to all entrants on the same date under the supervision of an "administrator" appointed by the alumni office.

BOOKMAKING LAID TO FIVE HELD HERE

Police Raid on Downtown Hotel Nets Alleged Book Paraphernalia.

Five men were arrested and held on charges of bookmaking and disorderly conduct yesterday following a raid by police on a room in a downtown hotel in which a quantity of alleged bookmaking paraphernalia was found.

A squad under the direction of Lieutenant J. A. McKibben made the arrests.

Those arrested gave their names as Charles Silver, of a Luckie street address; P. Marcus George, of a Pryor street address; N. W. Manur, of a Parkway drive address; R. H. Chestnut, of a Boulevard address, and C. R. Kennedy, of a Woodward avenue address.

The five men will be tried tomorrow morning in recorder's court.

Martial Law Rumored as Court Rules Against Talmadge

Majority Opinions.

In their majority opinion, Judges Pomeroy and Moore held:

1. That the state of Georgia is not necessarily a party to the litigation. All actions against the money involved in the money of the state.

2. That the court has jurisdiction to decide between Hamilton and Daniel as to which of them is entitled to legally act as treasurer.

3. That the court recognizes the separation of the executive, the legislative and the judicial branches of the government, holding that neither can interfere with the other while acting within the law. The phrase "within the law" was taken to mean that the court did not feel that matters are now within the law.

4. That there has been no collusion between Hamilton and the banks holding the state funds. (Daniel's lawyers had charged collusion existed.)

5. That the claim of Daniel that Hamilton can only seek to regain his office through legal proceedings is denied by the court. Hamilton contended that even though the court act as a court of equity it could determine on the legality of his ouster.

6. That the court concluded it can by the injunctive proceedings (now in litigation), control and direct the manner in which funds on deposit may be paid out.

7. That all parties are enjoined from paying out any of the funds in the three Atlanta banks except under lawful appropriations.

8. That if the parties involved cannot agree upon a legal appropriation the court will give direction on application.

Bonds Not Available.

The court also directed that nothing be done toward removing the $7,400,000 in bonds Hamilton has placed in the vaults of the Federal Reserve Bank. These bonds were deposited by banks with the treasurer to insure deposits placed in them. Shortly before his removal Hamilton placed the bonds in the reserve bank and is holding a receipt for them. Daniel, in a summary proceeding coupled with the entire litigation before the superior court, sought to obtain an order forcing Hamilton to place the bonds in his custody.

Judge Humphries, in his dissenting opinion, agreed with the contentions of Daniel and attorneys named by the Governor to represent him.

The judge's dissenting opinion, of course, had no effect because it was overruled by his two colleagues. In his opinion, Judge Humphries held:

Points of Dissent.

1st. That Governor Talmadge's suspension of Hamilton stripped him of all right to discharge the duties of treasurer during his suspension.

2d. That the appointment, commissioning and qualification of Daniel clothed him with the right to discharge the duties of treasurer.

3d. That if the banks should deliver the funds in question to the state treasury and the court, the court would be relieved of all responsibility regarding the same.

4th. That the funds in question are the funds of the state and that Hamilton cannot impound the money through the court while he litigates with Daniel over the right to the office of treasurer.

5th. That the general assembly has reserved to itself the question as to the justification of the suspension of the treasurer and the court is without jurisdiction to determine that question.

6th. That if funds are paid out by the banks on authority of the court, such payment into the court and control of it would not bind the state. That the bank would not be protected by an order of that kind.

7th. That if hazard exists in the present situation, as to which Humphries said he was unable to agree, the hazard would be much greater if the court undertook to control the state's money, illegally. That Judge Humphries believes such action by the court would be fatal.

8th. That no suit for the custody of the funds under litigation could be prosecuted in the name of either Hamilton or Daniel. That it would have to be prosecuted in the name of the state.

9th. That the court is without jurisdiction to take possession of the funds of the state.

10th. That as to Judge Humphries, views the case, it is not material whether the general assembly passed a general appropriation bill for the current year or not.

Rushed to Capitol.

Governor Talmadge, accompanied by W. S. Mann, of McRae, his personal attorney, had just started for Telfair county when he heard the announcement of the decision over the radio.

He rushed to the capitol, where he read copies of both opinions.

The Governor then sent the opinions to the Department of Law, where they were digested by Mr. Mann, by Special Assistant Attorney-General Samuel D. Hewlett, chief of Daniel's counsel; Hugh Howell, Talmadge lieutenant and chairman of the democratic state executive committee, and the regular assistants in the Department of Law. Attorney-General M. J. Yeomans, who has not joined in defending or representing Daniel, was not in the conference.

After studying the digest the Governor issued his statement. In it he made particular reference to the allegation that Judges Moore and Pomeroy have taken their pay from the state. Whether they have drawn pay since Daniel was set up as treasurer could not be learned. If they accepted Daniel-signed checks they were not cashed by the Atlanta banks. Their status on their pay checks is understood to be the same as that of Judge Humphries and other judges over the state.

Styles Opinion "Amusing."

The Governor's statement said that Judge Humphries had decided the law of the case.

The chief executive referred to that portion of the majority opinion holding that as to which the legal appropriations as "amusing."

He wound up by addressing the "joys out in the country" and telling them not to be disturbed.

Governor's Statement.

The Governor's statement follows in full:

"I have just read the opinions of the three judges in Atlanta—Judges Humphries, Judge Moore, and Judge Pomeroy.

"Judge Humphries clearly decided the law of the case. Judge Humphries recognized the code section which gives the Governor the authority to suspend the treasurer and to appoint a treasurer, and report to the next regular session of the general assembly his reasons for so doing.

"Judge Humphries clearly decided that J. B. Daniel was not the de facto treasurer, but the de jure treasurer.

"This is all that was before the court to be decided. The petition for

Text of Judge Humphries' Opinion

The dissenting opinion of Superior Judge John D. Humphries, upholding the legality of J. B. Daniel as state treasurer, follows in full:

I regret my inability to agree with the majority opinion. The trial of this case in the decision they have reached, and deem it my duty to state the reasons why I have not been able to agree with them.

The Governor, by an executive order, suspended George B. Hamilton as state treasurer, and caused him to be forcibly ejected from the office of the treasurer.

By executive order J. B. Daniel was appointed and commissioned to discharge the duties of the treasurer during the suspension of Hamilton. Daniel gave bond and took the oath of treasurer, and took possession of the offices of the treasurer, and is now acting as treasurer.

Petition by Bank.
The First National Bank of Atlanta filed its petition for interpleader, alleging that it is in custody of funds belonging to the state of Georgia, which it received as a state depository from Hamilton as treasurer; and that it is claiming to be state treasurer, and each is making demand upon it regarding the funds in its custody as state depository.

The petition prays that it be permitted to deposit said funds with the court, and that Hamilton and Daniel be required to litigate between themselves their respective claims to the right of custody of said funds.

Hamilton and Daniel each filed a response to the petition, each claiming the right to discharge the duties of treasurer. Hamilton offered in his response to co-operate with the court in its payment by the court from funds in the custody of the bank of legal obligations against the state as a result of permanent or continuing appropriations.

Four Questions.

The petition of the bank and the answer of Hamilton present four questions, the answers to which should decide this case:

1. Could Hamilton maintain on his own behalf a suit to impound in court the funds of the state in the custody of the bank, while he litigates with Daniel the question of who is entitled to discharge the duties of treasurer?

2. If not, can the bank, by interpleader, cause said funds to be impounded by the court while Hamilton and Daniel litigate as between themselves the question of who is entitled to discharge the duties of treasurer?

3. Is this suit in effect a suit against the state, which for its maintenance would require the consent of the state?

4. Has the court the jurisdiction to take custody of funds belonging to the state, at the instance of the plaintiff bank, then at the instance of Hamilton undertake to apply said funds to the payment of legal obligations against the state?

Status of Hamilton.

The question of Hamilton's status before the court depends upon whether or not the court can inquire into the sufficiency of the order of suspension by the Governor; whether the court can go behind the order of suspension and determine if the same was done with legal justification.

The constitution of 1868 was silent as to the authority of the Governor to suspend the treasurer. By act of February 25, 1876, (Acts 1876, Page 126), the legislature authorized the Governor to call a council to be composed of the attorney-general, secretary of state and comptroller general, in circumstances named, and upon the findings of a majority of the council, to suspend the treasurer from office until the next session of the general assembly, when he should submit to that body his actions and the reasons therefor.

In the event of suspension, the Governor was authorized to appoint some fit and proper person to discharge the duties of said office during the period of suspension. Code 1933, Section 40-1301.

The constitution of 1877, Par. 18, Sec. 1, Art. 5 provides as follows: "The general assembly shall have authority to provide by law for the suspension of either of said officers (state treasurer or comptroller general) from the discharge of the duties of his office, and also for the appointment of a suitable person to discharge the duties of the same." Code 1933, Sec. 2-2618.

Provision in Effect.

By act of September 30, 1879, (Acts 1879-9, Page 30), the general assembly put into effect this provision of the constitution. The caption of that act is as follows: "An act to carry into effect paragraph 18, Section 1, Article 5 of the constitution of 1877: to provide for the suspension of the treasurer or comptroller general of the state, and also for the appointment of a suitable person to discharge the duties of the same."

Section 1 of that act authorizes the general assembly to suspend the treasurer and comptroller general. Code 1933, Sec. 47-701.

Section 2 provides as follows: "Whenever the Governor shall have trustworthy information that the state treasurer or comptroller general is insane, or has absconded, or grossly neglects his duties, or is guilty of conduct plainly violative of his duties, or demeans himself in office to the hazard of the public funds of credit of the state, the Governor shall suspend said treasurer or comptroller general, as the case may be, and report his reasons for such suspension to the general assembly. Said suspension shall continue until the general assembly shall otherwise direct." Code 1933, Sec. 46-296.

Section 3 provides for the appointment by the Governor of "some suitable person to discharge the duties of the office until the suspended official shall be restored by law or his successor elected and qualified." Code 1933, Sec. 46-297.

Section 4 repeals all conflicting laws.

Treasurer Only.
The Act of February 25, 1876, still retained in the code, dealt with the treasurer only. The constitution of 1877 authorized the general assembly to provide by law for the suspension from office of both treasurer and comptroller general. The act of 1879 must affect the provisions of the constitution, and recorded for the suspension from office of the treasurer and comptroller general. It was under the latter act that the Governor acted in suspending the treasurer from the discharge of the duties of that office.

Counsel for Hamilton contended that the order of suspension was illegal and void for three reasons: First, because it is claimed, there were no grounds for suspension; and the order of suspension does not specify specific grounds for suspension. Second, because a council had not passed upon the question as provided in the act of 1876. Third, because the suspension was made without opportunity to be heard.

Counsel for Hamilton contended that the act of 1876, which provided for the suspension of the treasurer, was repealed by the act of 1879, which provided for the suspension of both the treasurer and comptroller general.

The act of 1879, which provided for the suspension of both the treasurer and comptroller general, was repealed by the act of 1876, which provided for the suspension of the treasurer only.

The act of 1876, which provided for the suspension of the treasurer only, was repealed by the act of 1879, which provided for the suspension of both the treasurer and comptroller general.

The act of 1879, which provided for the suspension of both the treasurer and comptroller general, was repealed by the act of 1876, which provided for the suspension of the treasurer only.

The act of 1876, which provided for the suspension of the treasurer only, was repealed by the act of 1879, which provided for the suspension of both the treasurer and comptroller general.

The act of 1879, which provided for the suspension of both the treasurer and comptroller general, was repealed by the act of 1876, which provided for the suspension of the treasurer only.

The act of 1876, which provided for the suspension of the treasurer only, was repealed by the act of 1879, which provided for the suspension of both the treasurer and comptroller general.

plaintiff bank is not entitled to maintain its petition for interpleader as between Hamilton and Daniel.

If the bank should deliver the funds in question to the state treasury it would be relieved from all responsibility regarding the same.

Right to Action.

Could Hamilton by equitable proceeding against Daniel, cause the funds of the state in the possession of the plaintiff bank to be impounded by the court while he litigates with Daniel the question of the right, as between the two, to discharge the duties of the treasurer?

I am of the opinion that he could not. If he has the right to file a suit in court to have adjudicated the question as to who is entitled to discharge the duties of the office of treasurer, it does not go that far.

The funds in question belong to the state. Neither Hamilton nor Daniel, as individuals, has any right or title to the funds. The question of the right to discharge the duties of the office of treasurer is a question between Hamilton and Daniel as individuals. It does not carry with it the right of either to cause the funds of the state in the possession of the bank to be impounded by the court while that question is being adjudicated.

Neither can the bank cause that to be done.

Without Jurisdiction.

Besides, the general assembly has reserved to itself the question as to the justification of the suspension of the treasurer, and the court is without jurisdiction to determine that question.

Is the suit of the plaintiff bank in effect a suit against the state, which for its maintenance would require the consent of the state?

The suit is brought against Hamilton and Daniel as individuals. Their respective claims to the right to discharge the duties of treasurer are set forth in plaintiff's petition, and the demands that each is making upon the plaintiff bank are likewise set forth. But it remains that the suit is against the two as individuals. It is filed against them as individuals.

Process has issued against them as individuals, and the rule nisi is directed to them in the same capacity.

This suit, being brought by the bank against the defendants individually, praying that they be required to have adjudicated in this case as between themselves their respective claims to the right to discharge the duties of treasurer and that in the meantime the court impound the funds of the state in the possession of the bank, I am of the opinion that the suit is not one against the state, and that the court is without authority to deal with the funds in question, or to require the bank to deliver them into the custody of the court.

Would Not Bind State.

I am of the opinion, also, that if the funds in question should be paid into court, as prayed by the bank, and the court assumed to control them while the defendants undertook to litigate their respective claims to the right to discharge the duties of the office of treasurer, such payment into court and control by it would not bind the state, and the bank would not be protected by an order of that kind.

If hazard exists in the present situation, as to which I am not able to agree, that hazard would be much greater if the court undertook to control the state's money, illegally, as I believe it would be under the order issued. No suit for the custody of those funds could be prosecuted in the name of either defendant. It would have to be done in the name of the state.

Response of Hamilton.

The response of the defendant Hamilton, in which he indicates a willingness to co-operate with the court in causing the funds in the possession of the plaintiff to be applied to legal obligations of the state, will now be dealt with.

In the case of Ramsey et al. vs. Hamilton, treasurer, 182 S. E. 392, decided October 19, 1935, the court held that a suit against the state treasurer, the comptroller general, and the regents of the University of the State of Georgia, was in effect a suit against the state, and not maintainable without the consent of the state.

The present case is not against the two individuals named in an official capacity, and for that reason is not a suit against the state, and would not justify the court in attempting to handle funds of the state. But if the suit were against the defendants as officers of the state, it could not be maintained for the reason that, in effect, it would be a suit against the state, and the state has not consented to the prosecution of the suit.

For this reason the court is without jurisdiction to take possession of the funds of the state, as asked by the plaintiff bank.

Not Court Duty.

The defendant Hamilton in his response has asked the court to assume control of the funds in question and with his co-operation apply them to the payment of legal obligations of the state. Has the court jurisdiction to undertake a task of that character? I think not.

The duties referred to belong to the executive department of the government, of which the treasurer is a member. Paragraph 23, Section 1, Article 1 of the constitution provides as follows: "The legislative, judicial and executive powers shall forever remain separate and distinct, and no person discharging the duties on one shall at the same time exercise the functions of either of the others, except as herein provided." Code 1933, Section 2-123.

The officers of the executive department shall consist of a governor, secretary of state, comptroller general and treasurer." Paragraph 1, Section 1, Article 5 of the constitution; Code 1933, Section 2-2601.

"The executive power shall be vested in a governor." Paragraph 2, Section 1, Article 5 of the constitution; Code 1933, Section 2-2602.

Governor's Right.

The Governor may require information in writing from the officers of the executive department on any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices; and it shall be his duty quarterly, and oftener if he deems it expedient, to examine under oath the treasurer and comptroller general, on all matters pertaining to their respective offices, and to inspect and review their books and accounts. Paragraph 18, Section 1, Article 5 of the constitution; Code 1933, Section 2-2618.

The Governor may exercise a general superintendence over the office of state treasurer, not inconsistent with the provisions prescribed for it by law, and may at any time appoint some competent person to examine into the state of such office, for any period of time he may designate, and report its condition to him; and shall have power to require in writing of such treasurer the withdrawal of public funds from any place of deposit deemed unsafe by him. Code 1933, Section 30-1302.

The constitution and laws of the state not only make the treasurer a member of the official family of the Governor, but give the Governor the right of inspection and general superintendence over that office, not inconsistent with the provisions prescribed for it by law.

Executive Duty.

The duty therefore of administering the office of treasurer is an executive duty, which belongs to the executive department of the state under the supervision of the Governor himself, and the courts are without right, authority or jurisdiction to undertake to administer any part of the affairs of the treasurer.

As I view the case it is not material whether the general assembly adopted a general appropriation bill for the current year or not. The judgment entered opposes such assumption. The issues involved might have arisen as readily under either contingency. This is not a suit to enjoin the treasurer from paying out state funds illegally. As to the plaintiff it is merely a suit to have the court to impound the state funds in question while Hamilton and Daniel undertake in this case to have adjudicated the question of who is

Union of Majority Holds Courts Can Adjudicate Dispute

Code Cited To Support Contentions Of Banks on Danger of Payments

The decision of Judges E. E. Pomeroy and Virlyn B. Moore holding that the courts have authority to inquire into the present state financial status and continuing the injunction preventing withdrawals of funds now in Atlanta banks, follows in full.

Each of the petitioners has filed a petition in this court asking that George B. Hamilton, state treasurer, and J. B. Daniel, claiming to be state treasurer, and Carlton Mobley, claiming to be state treasurer, be removed from office and that the state funds be placed in the possession, custody and control of certain large sums of money on deposit with each bank.

Carlton Mobley files a disclaimer, so that he may be eliminated as a party.

In the main, each petitioner, except as otherwise stated, alleges that each petitioner is a qualified depository of the state of Georgia; that these moneys were deposited by George B. Hamilton, state treasurer, until February 24, 1934, when he was removed by executive order, and J. B. Daniel appointed by such order.

That said Hamilton has notified petitioners that he attempted removal is illegal; that no one else has authority to check on state funds, and that checks of others would be paid at the peril of the depository, and that securities left with him have been placed in bank vaults where no one else may reach them.

That on February 26, 1934, said Daniel, claiming to be treasurer, drew certain checks payable to the superintendent of schools.

That the general assembly of Georgia has passed no appropriations bill for the year 1934, and the constitution of the state provides that no fund shall be paid except upon an appropriations bill.

That the petitioners are in doubt and should not be required to determine whether the sums represented by said checks can legally be paid out of the state treasury.

That on March 2, 1934, the Governor notified petitioners of his action in appointing Daniel, and if the banks refused to recognize his checks, Carlton Mobley was designated to receive from the banks all funds belonging to the state. As stated Mr. Mobley has disclaimed any right to the possession of the funds.

Petitioners claim no interest in themselves in said deposits and should not be placed under the duty of determining the conflicting claims of Daniel and Hamilton.

That the petitioners are not to be placed under the risk of being under a duty to pay 7 per cent interest on the deposits pending litigation which they claim is not within their power to start otherwise than by a bill of interpleader, and that they have no adequate remedy at law.

By amendment, petitioners set up a letter from Hamilton stating that he will not resist a court order for him to interplead, that he will assert his claim to the funds and reasserting his position to the effect that his removal was unlawful, and that payments from the state treasury cannot be made by any one in the absence of an appropriations bill, and making certain other claims, that Daniel is not qualified to be treasurer by law, by giving a legal bond, and so forth.

Petitioners desire for an order requiring Daniel to interplead to interpose as to their specific rights and that petitioners be allowed to pay the deposits into court, and that Hamilton and Daniel be enjoined from disposing of the bonds deposited as security.

In the case of the Marietta National Bank, the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta is made a party, and it is alleged that Hamilton as treasurer, has deposited with the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta a large amount of bonds held by him as treasurer for the performance by petitioners and other parties of certain official duties, and the prayer of injunction, as to Marietta National Bank, extends to the Federal Reserve Bank as to those bonds.

Respondent Daniel files demurrer to the original bill claiming that the suit is one against the state and that the state cannot be sued without its consent; that the only question involved in title to the funds, and that quo warranto is the proper remedy and not interpleader, and that petitioners have a proper remedy at law; that there is no adverse claimant as a matter of law, or uncertainty of ownership of the funds, or the officer entitled to control the same, and that petitioners are public officers and that the courts cannot fix or prescribe their duties.

Hamilton Answer.

George B. Hamilton files answer, response and cross-bill in which he does not resist the interpleader and seeks the protection of the court, claiming that he is the lawful treasurer; that money cannot be withdrawn from the state treasury without an appropriations bill, and since he refused to draw checks without such a bill, that his suspension for that reason is illegal; that the comptroller general did not countersign the warrant, and that he had no notice of his removal and opportunity to be heard, and that he could not be removed by the Governor except upon recommendation of a council appointed under Code Section 40-1301; that Daniel has deposited all bonds which were held by him in the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

With reference to a certain summary proceeding lodged with a judge of this court seeking an order for Hamilton to turn over to the petitioner therein, Daniel, all books, papers, money and bonds in his possession, Hamilton denies that the bonds constitute books or papers so as to come within the customary proceedings statute, and denies that Daniel is entitled to them, and says that the scope of the investigation under the summary proceedings statute, Code Section 50-604, is so narrow that it is impossible to make adequate determination of the matter, and that no bill of exceptions can be taken in an order in such summary proceedings, so as to secure a final determination of said matter by the supreme court of the state, and claiming that the bonds ought to be disposed of under the same principles as control and return the disposition of the deposits which they secure; that it would be unjust and inequitable to determine the disposition of the bank deposits in one suit and determine in another summary proceeding the disposition of the bonds which secure said bank deposits.

Asks Injunction.

Said Hamilton therefore prays that the court take jurisdiction of the whole subject matter; that Daniel be enjoined and restrained from prosecuting the summary proceeding, but be required to assert his claim to the bonds, and praying further that the court under its equitable powers, whereby the funds involved in this suit may be applied to such lawful appropriations as exist in this state, and to the order of suspension, and that the summary proceeding is not cognizable in a court of equity; that the cross-bill is a suit against the state and not maintainable; that the cross-bill sets forth a new cause of action, and Daniel not a party, since he is a Petitioner. Noted.

To this cross-bill Daniel files answer and also demurrer, claiming that there is nothing germane in the cross-bill to the original petition; that it seeks to try title to office, which cannot be done by a court of equity; that the court cannot review the order of suspension, and that the summary proceeding is not cognizable in a court of equity; that the cross-bill is a suit against the state and not maintainable; that the cross-bill sets forth a new cause of action, and Daniel not a party, since he is a Petitioner. Noted.

Daniel, in his answer to the main bill, claims that he is the legally appointed treasurer and is entitled to the control of the funds, and claims further that the petitioners are in collusion with Hamilton, and that the checks added reason, they are not entitled to maintain the cross-bill.

Facts Not At Issue.

Evidence was heard by the court, but in the main, the facts are not at issue, except there is an issue as to whether or not there has been collusion between the petitioners and the respondent Hamilton.

The court must consider and determine the questions raised by the particular hearing only certain questions, these questions not involving the ultimate and final adjudication of the rights of Hamilton and Daniel. These general questions are as follows, to-wit:

(a) Have the petitioners the general and basic right to invoke the statute relative to interpleader as against the respondent, upon a consideration of all of the questions raised by the respondent Daniel?

(b) If the petitioners have this general and basic right, then, are there such doubtful and dangerous questions involved as would authorize a court of equity to require interpleader by Hamilton and Daniel to establish and determine those rights?

Questions Involved.

The court will first discuss the general and basic questions involved.

(1) Is this a suit against the state? It is admitted by all parties that the state of Georgia is the owner of all of the deposits.

The question then arises as to whether or not a suit against the official or contending official relative to the control and custody of this money is in reality a suit against the state in the sense that the state is to decide between the contending parties.

Of course, the state cannot be sued without its consent. It has been held that the mere absence of the state as a party to a suit would not be sufficient to deny the relief sought against officials who are officers of the state, if it is not a suit against the state if the officer named as a party has no right to maintain the action or to defend it, but if the sole relief sought is against the officer, it is maintainable although the state might be affected by the result.

State Not Party.

In 186 Georgia 789, it is held that the act done by an official in his official capacity, but without lawful authority and beyond the scope of his official power, is not an act of the state, and therefore the state is not a necessary party to the suit.

Under the constitution of this state, the only official, agent or representative of the state who can possess and control its funds is the lawful and constitutional state treasurer. Since the state must act through agents or officers, and since no officer but the one so designated by law can act, and since there is no question but that such lawful officer is acting solely for the state, it would seem that a court of equity could determine the rights of two claimants to so possess and control funds, since it unquestionably, under such circumstances, must be held that one is acting constitutionally and the other is acting unconstitutionally.

As to which one of these two claimants is acting within the constitution and which is acting without the constitution, it would seem to be clear under the authorities cited, that while the right of the state, in a certain sense, might be affected, nevertheless, the real question is which one of these officials has the right to act for the state and which one has not the right to so act.

The right of the state in the res is not at issue.

All Claimants in Court.

It is conceded in this case that all possible claimants to the possession and control of this money are before the court.

The court recognizes the separation of the executive, the legislative and the judicial branches of government. Neither can interfere with the other while acting within the law, but the courts can and should determine as between disputed officials, which one is acting within the law and which one is not.

It is held in the case of German Exchange Bank vs. Excess Commissioners—New Cases, 394, (New York, 1879), that a bank could interplead as to adverse claimants to a deposit, and where, through the channel of public officers, the title to money held on deposit in the name of officials, is questioned, the person with whom the funds are deposited may interplead the contesting parties, so that the funds may reach the proper hands.

The right of the court to determine and apply constitutional provisions and state laws has been long established both by this court and by the federal court.

No Collusion.

(2) It is asserted that the petitioners and Hamilton colluded in bringing this bill and that therefore petitioners are not entitled to require parties to interplead. While there is evidence that officials of the petitioners conferred with Hamilton as state treasurer, and that they discussed among themselves certain rights and duties, the court is of the opinion that each one of such parties was merely discussing the question of their own right and liability and that no such collusion existed between them as was in bad faith, or as would authorize the court to deny them the remedy sought.

(3) Relative to the question of whether or not petitioners have full, adequate and complete remedy by law by quo warranto proceedings against Daniel. It is of course, conceded that the petitioners could bring quo warranto, but does this necessarily mean that they have no other remedy.

Code Section 37-1503 is as follows: "Whenever a person shall be possessed of property or funds or owe a debt or duty to which more than one person shall lay claim of such a character as to render it doubtful or dangerous for the holder to act, he may apply to a court of equity to compel the claimant to interplead."

It would seem that under the foregoing, that one who is possessed of property or funds or owes a debt, or duty, that if it is doubtful or dangerous for him to act he may apply to a court of equity.

More Involved.

It seems to us that there is more involved than the mere question as to who has the right to perform the duties of an officer.

The petitioners have money in their hands. They owe it to someone, and they are under a duty to pay it to someone, and it is not merely a question of one who has been illegally ousted from office pending suit against the temporary possessor of the office, for in such a case, the affairs of government go on and the applicant does not find himself in a difficult position with reference to property to money on hand, but he merely seeks to regain possession of the office.

The petitioners do not seek the office. They merely seek direction as to whom to recognize as the lawful officer, and until that question can be decided they cannot recognize either.

It would seem to us therefore that code section relative to interpleader has special application in this case in a proceeding brought by the holder of funds and one who owes a duty, but who is not himself a claimant to the office in dispute.

Bank Law.

If it is necessary to go beyond the obligation of the petitioner and the difficulty in which it finds itself, there has been shown in this case that the bank is in a position of interest upon its failure to pay to the lawful state treasurer upon demand.

If suit were brought against petitioners by both of these claimants, then the latter would not be protected in such suit he had named as a party, and the suits were consolidated, and either proceeding would in effect be the same as that which the law directly allows by interpleader.

It would seem that a court in quo warranto proceedings could not give direction and afford security to the petitioners.

Petition Maintained.

The court concludes, therefore, that relative to the questions named concerning the subject matter, that the petition for the interpleader can and should be maintained.

If, as the court concludes, the petitioners have the general and basic right to maintain the action, then arises as to whether or not as to these petitioners there are doubtful and dangerous questions involved. The court will discuss these questions.

(1) The court does not now decide the question as to who is the lawful state treasurer. That will be necessary only when a plea has been made and the issue is formed.

The court must now decide whether it is doubtful and dangerous from the standpoint of the petitioner, of the petitioner, to decide these questions.

Contentions Made.

Perhaps a brief statement of the contentions made will be helpful. These questions are asserted on the one part and denied on the other.

(a) Is Hamilton entitled to notice and hearing? If the sole relief sought is a recommendation of the council provided for under Section 40-1301 a necessary prerequisite for removal by the Governor?

(b) Is there a distinction in the law, as applied to this question, between suspension and removal?

(c) Is the question involved as to whether or not Hamilton could be removed because he refused to pay out money on what he considered an illegal basis without any appropriation? Is it illegal to pay out any particular money when there is no appropriation? Could a lawful treasurer have paid out the money upon that particular warrant as presented to Hamilton, without an appropriations bill?

There can be no doubt that there exists in the state at this time serious legal questions as to its financial status and administration, and who is the lawful treasurer, and under what conditions payment can be made.

To sustain the general demurrer of Daniel, and dismiss this proceeding would place all the parties in the same position as before the suit was brought, and the legal status of the administration of the finances of the state would continue in its present uncertain and perplexing condition. The court is of the opinion that as all of the parties at interest are before it, and it is the duty of the court to inquire into the questions raised, and judicially determine the same.

The court is of the opinion that the summary proceedings should be enjoined and restrained from proceeding by Mr. Daniel and by Mr. Hamilton should be determined in this proceeding.

Court Can Control.

The court concludes that it can, by injunctive proceedings, enjoin and direct the manner in which funds on deposit can be paid out.

It is conceded by all that the departments of the state should function with as little difficulty as possible, and the court is of the belief that all the parties hereto will cooperate in carrying into effect as speedily as possible the rulings and findings of the court.

Accordingly orders will be entered in the respective cases as follows, to-wit:

(1) That George B. Hamilton and J. B. Daniel be directed to interplead in this cause within 10 days from the date of this order.

(2) That the demurrers of J. B. Daniel to original petition and to the cross-bill filed by George B. Hamilton be overruled.

Payment Stopped.

(3) That all of the parties to these causes be enjoined and restrained from paying out or causing to be paid out any of the money on deposit with the petition, except upon order of the court, and that the parties cannot agree as to what are lawful appropriations or as to how the money may be made, then the court, upon application of any party will give detailed directions as to these matters.

(4) All of the parties to be temporarily restrained and enjoined from interfering in any manner with the bonds now deposited in the safety deposit vaults of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, and the Federal Reserve Bank to be served with a cross-bill filed by George B. Hamilton be required to file under oath with this court within five days from the date of this order a list of the bonds on deposit as security in the vault of the Federal Reserve Bank, and any party dissatisfied with said list may apply to the court ing except appropriations fixed by previous laws, the ordinary expenses of the executive, legislative and judicial departments of the government, payment of the public debt and interest thereon, and for support of the public institutions and educational interests of the state. All other appropriations shall be made in separate bills, each embracing but one subject."

Constitution code Section 2-1811 provides, "No money shall be drawn from the treasury by any appropriation made by law, and a regular statement and account," and so forth.

Some Confusion.

There would seem to be some confusion as to whether or not, even though there were a special permanent or continuing appropriation, whether payments could be made under it unless those appropriations are included within the general appropriations bill for the current year.

If suit were brought against petitioners by both of these claimants, then the latter would not be protected in such suit he had named as a party, and the suits were consolidated, and either proceeding would in effect be the same as that which the law directly allows by interpleader.

It would seem that a court in quo warranto proceedings could not give direction and afford security to the petitioners.

TALMADGE MAY ENTER RACE FOR THIRD TERM

man of the state democratic executive committee. His friends maintain that he has a prior claim on Talmadge's support over such men as Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Lindsey, Senate President Charles D. Redwine and Adjutant General Lindsey W. Camp. But the state chairman's friends also say that Talmadge has a prior claim on Howell, that it is certain that whatever Talmadge wants does Hugh Howell will do it. Lindsey Camp, as far as can be learned, has never asked anyone to boom him for governor. Doubtless he'd like to be a more doer than a seer, but he'd make the race if Talmadge directed.

But it begins now to look definitely like Talmadge is going to run for governor himself and let some one else, a friend to be sure, but perhaps not a camp follower, run for the senate against Russell. To the Talmadge people Russell must be given opposition.

His hands must be tied. There is not the only likely prospect on the other side of the fence. There is considerable talk about Hamilton. There is much concerning Abit Nix, of Athens, no little about Marion Smith and scattered reports about a few others.

Then there is the Philip Welner movement. Welner has announced he wants to get a citizens' candidate. It is pretty generally understood that Welner does not want to run himself. Who he has in mind, if anyone in particular, is not known.

Opposed to Talmadge and pro-New Deal is the remnants of the Talmadge opposition of 1934, headed by Judge Claude C. Pittman, of Cartersville, and John Mangham, of Bremen, plus the ever anti-Talmadge Paul Talmadge, of Decatur. At present the candidate of this group is W. Y. Atkinson, of Newnan, the solicitor-general of the court in the Talmadge case.

There are two other possible candidates in sight.

One is W. W. Larsen, of Dublin, a former congressman, at present holding a New Deal position. Larsen's friends have been active and he has shown some signs of activity himself.

Sanford Mentioned.

The other is Dr. S. V. Sanford, the chancellor of the University of Georgia. Dr. Sanford occupies a unique place in the picture as it appears now. No one appears to know whether he is anti-Talmadge, pro-Talmadge, or generally regarded as a supporter of the President. Dr. Sanford's name has been mentioned several times but he has been so far from the picture that he has not given up his place at the pinnacle of the education heap to take a chance on running for governor. It has taken him years to get to the top of the position and it is generally felt that he will devote the remainder of his life to the cause of education. The doctor is known to feel complimented by the talk, however.

Governor Talmadge will continue to fight the New Deal in Georgia and of the state would be going to Washington Saturday to make a radio speech Saturday night against the New Deal. It will be broadcast over a national hookup.

Yesterday the Governor said that he would be campaigning in Georgia this summer.

"The issue will be de facto and de jure," he said. "The country boys in the country and the country boys in the city will learn all about that this summer. The people will render the verdict between de facto and de jure."

HAMILTON LAUDS DECISION OF COURT

Ousted Treasurer, in Statement, Acclaims "Victory for Principle."

George B. Hamilton, suspended state treasurer, yesterday issued the following statement immediately after the Fulton superior court had announced its assumption of jurisdiction over litigation growing out of his removal from office.

"I have held to the belief that one of the fundamental duties of the state treasurer of Georgia was to conserve the funds of the state to the end that they should be disbursed only through proper legal channels.

"Since my forcible ejection from the room physically occupied by the treasurer, I have to the utmost of my ability carried on this function of the office and I shall continue to do this to the end. I have laid aside any personal action to regain physical possession of the room in which the treasurer usually sits at the state capital.

"I feel that the decision of the court has been a great signal victory for the above principle and for the commonwealth of Georgia.

"I must take this opportunity to again express my humble, but heartfelt appreciation to the overwhelming majority of the citizens of Georgia who have indorsed my action in the interest of the constitution and laws of our state and to say to them that I shall continue in my humble way to serve with all that I have, not myself, but my state and its best interests."

entitled to discharge the duties of treasurer. The judgment entered commits the court to undertake to do that.

Precedent Important.

It is not important whether one person or another act as treasurer, but it is highly important to constitutional government whether a precedent shall be established which would permit the judiciary to assume duties of the executive department, when the state constitution declares that "the legislative, judicial and executive powers shall forever remain separate and distinct."

The judgment entered goes beyond the prayer of the plaintiff, and by its very terms pledges the court at the instance of Hamilton to undertake not only to preserve the state funds in question but also to determine generally what are legal obligations of the state and to direct the payment of them from the funds in question—a duty which rests with the executive department. In response to a direct question counsel for Hamilton declined to say that he thought that could be done legally, but suggested the possibility of an agreement among the parties that it be done. No such agreement was made.

I am of the opinion that the demurrers to the petition and cross-petition of Hamilton should be sustained and both the petition and cross-petition dismissed.

GOVERNOR IS BARRED FROM OIL TAX FUNDS intended action came from the oil companies but it was learned that leading lawyers representing the companies in Georgia had decided on their course after a series of conferences and after telephonic communications with the general counsels of the major companies.

The lawyers are understood to have advised the oil companies that if they pay their taxes to Carraker they are running a risk of having to pay them again.

Some formal action is expected before the payments are due on March 20. The payments to be made represent February collections. They will total approximately $1,400,000. January collections were paid February 20 to Harrison shortly before his removal from office.

A number of important projects are included in the letting scheduled for Friday. Chief among them of interest to Atlanta is the new $75,000 underpass under the tracks of the Southern railway on North Side drive. Another major Atlanta project is the construction of a new bridge on the Cheshire Bridge road which is a part of the new Atlanta-Buford highway.

"If the legislature meets at the city hall and any effort is made to prevent the convention, I'll call in as many police officers as are necessary to preserve order," the mayor said.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Charged as Unfit As Fight Over Gloria Is Resumed

Mrs. Whitney Opposes Mother of Child in Battle Over Custody of Young Heiress; High Court Asked To Review N. Y. Decision.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(AP)—The sometimes sensational legal battle over custody of the 12-year-old heiress, Gloria Vanderbilt, was resumed in the supreme court today with an accusation that "evidence of immorality" showed her mother to be an unfit person to have charge of the child.

The assertion was made in a brief presented by Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, wealthy aunt of the child. She opposed the effort of Gloria's mother, Mrs. Flora Morgan Vanderbilt, to have the tribunal review a decision of New York courts awarding principal custody of the child to Mrs. Whitney.

Gloria's mother was permitted to have her two days a week, on Christmas Day and during the month of July.

Whether the supreme court will pass on the protracted dispute probably will be announced March 30. If it declines, the arrangement approved by New York courts will remain in effect.

The brief charged the mother had "devoted herself to the pleasures of a gay continental life abroad," spending "chiefly" on herself and partially on "Prince Hohenlohe" a $48,000-a-year allowance for support of the child.

Mrs. Whitney's brief added: "The evidence of immorality of the mother, of her association with a certain type of woman, of her predilection for obscene literature, of her unconventional friendship for and intimacy with Prince Hohenlohe, of her relations with A. C. Blumenthal, a married man, of her fondness for the gaiety of night life, are merely indications of the character which has permitted her so to neglect her child and force upon her a life which has been condemned by every court which has considered the facts of this case."

There was no further reference to this statement in the 21-page document. During the two months' hearing on the case before the New York supreme court the testimony became so spicy at times that the public was excluded.

The courts recognized that the petitioner (Mrs. Vanderbilt), the sole heir to the child's large fortune, had an interest in the child which was mercenary only and which was inimical to the child's health and welfare."

At one time in 1934, it said, Gloria became "hysterical with grief and fear" when her mother tried to keep her from returning to her aunt.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's mother and father were said to have protested against "neglect" of Gloria. The child was described as "on the brink of a complete collapse" when placed in Mrs. Whitney's custody.

Mrs. Whitney said Gloria inherited from her grandfather, Cornelius Vanderbilt, an estate of $2,500,000 and between $750,000 and $800,000 from her grandmother, Alice G. Vanderbilt. The child's father, Reginald C. Vanderbilt, died in 1925.

SUSPENDED SENTENCES GIVEN IN STRIKE TRIFE

Nine persons, arrested during recent labor disorders at the American Hat Factory, were under suspended sentences of $12 fines or 20 days in jail yesterday following hearings in recorder's court.

They were booked as Sue Veal, Emma Pace, Ruby Ezzell, Maggie Traynor, Gertrude Shockley, Mrs. C. C. Atkins, Mrs. E. J. Waldron, C. E. Fitts and Sarah Estes.

They were arrested as a result of strike between workers and pickets over a strike now settled.

'DEAL' HELPS WOMEN KEEP FAMILY TOGETHER

U. S. Contributes To Support of 75,167 Children in Own Homes.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(AP)—Twelve states and the District of Columbia are receiving funds from the Social Security Board to pay for the care of 75,167 children who have no means of support.

These children, under 16, are living with some specified relative, usually their mother, in a place maintained as a home.

Estimates gathered by the Social Security Board from the 12 states and the District of Columbia, disclosed today that in addition to the 75,167 now receiving aid, upward of another 40,000 are involved in plans that are being worked out or have been submitted by 11 other states.

Under the law, the board contributes one-third of the amount for each child, plus one-third of the administrative expenses, with the limitation that the federal government shall not contribute more than $6 a month for the maintenance of the child in a family, or more than $4 a month for the second child.

The chief purpose of the plan is to contribute help which will allow women to hold their families together after the death or disability of their husband, permitting the homes to be maintained without the necessity of sending the children to institutions.

Of the plans that have been approved, the District of Columbia has the highest average monthly payment. It averages $16 monthly for each of its 4,733 fatherless or dependent children.

Among the states, Maryland, Wisconsin and New York are the highest average payments. They each average $15 a month for 5,000 children in Maryland, 20,000 in Wisconsin and 1,000 in Idaho.

The average amount paid monthly and the estimated number of children in other states receiving funds are: Mississippi, $10.50 for 4,000; Alabama, $10 for 10,000; New Hampshire, $13.41 for 937; Maine, $12 for 4,700; Nebraska, $11 for 10,000; Wyoming, $15.92 for 207; Washington, $14.48 for 7,915; New Mexico, $7.50 for 2,577; Arizona, $14.33 for 3,000.

A close checkup of the workings of the plan now being made by investigators for the board to aid in the formulation of policies that will govern the distribution of funds during the next quarter year.

SUSPECT LEADS POLICE TO VICTIM'S SKELETON

Recluse Says 2 Men Beat and Boiled Father, Mother and 2 Children.

ATLANTA, March 14.—(AP)—George Patton, 54, charged with killing a man and wife and their two children, dug up the teeth and skull of a child on his farm today after leading officers to the spot near a gatepost.

In charging Patton with the murder of the J. W. McGeehee family, authorities recently said their case could not be prosecuted unless visible proof of death could be produced.

Patton, a recluse, was quoted in a statement by Sheriff Jess Sweeten early this week as saying he killed McGeehee in 1932 after the latter had bludgeoned Mrs. McGeehee and their two children to death.

The Dallas Times-Herald said it learned that after he was returned to the Athens jail late today, Patton retracted his previous statement as to how the McGeehees met death.

His new statement was obtained from the sheriff by the Times-Herald.

"Two men I did not know beat Mr. and Mrs. McGeehee and their two children to death Thanksgiving eve, 1932," he witnessed. "It was so terrible I cannot describe it."

"I saw the whole thing. They beat the father and mother to death with a piece of iron pipe. One child they killed by beating it with that rock we pulled from the grave. The other one was strangled with a rope."

The Times-Herald quoted the statement as saying that after the family was killed the two men forced Patton to boil their bodies in a meat vat and then bury the broken up skeletons.

COTTON STANDARD BODY HOLDS MEET

Approves Copies of Universal Grades for Use by Trade.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—(AP)—The International Cotton Standards conference today approved copies of the Universal Standards for use by European cotton associations and the Agriculture Department during the next three years, but announced descriptions of the new grade would not be available until later.

A general revision of the Universal standards was placed in effect in August, 1935, effective for one year.

The conference also sealed and deposited in the United States treasury the "first reserve set of 1936 principles" which will be the basis at the next conference for preparing copies of the standards for international distribution.

The delegates agreed that in the future, meetings to approve copies of the Universal standards will be held at three-year intervals instead of biennially. The next conference is scheduled for the second Monday in March, 1939.

Delegates included representatives of the nine principal cotton associations of Europe and of American producers, merchants and manufacturers organizations. Japan also was represented.

PATTERSON, GAMBLE TRIAL SET MARCH 26

Joe Patterson and Henderson Gamble, arrested recently in Little Rock, Ark., and charged with the daylight robbery of R. K. Carrington, assistant manager of an Atlanta five and ten-cent store, will go on trial Thursday, March 26, before Judge Eugene D. Thomas of the Fulton superior court.

Patterson was released under $3,000 bond but was rearrested last week questioning in connection with a $1,000 robbery in Birmingham.

The superior court tomorrow will attack a heavy calendar composed of questioning what is termed "jail business." The county jail is reported again filled with untold offenders, although two criminal divisions of court have been running constantly.

'Cotton Plantin' Time' Indefinite, Says Court

RECORDERS' COURT, S. C., March 13.—(AP)—Recorder Wyatt Aiken is considering a special penalty for negroes who don't know their negroes, and charged with the nuisance.

He told hearers in his courtroom, "one day we have a strapping man in here who says he is 15 or 16 years old, and the next we have a negro three feet tall who swears he is 21."

The judicial self-control reached a breaking point when two negro boys charged with stealing were asked whether they were minors or adults. One replied only that they were born "about cotton plantin' time."

RICHBERG DENOUNCES CRITICS OF ROOSEVELT

President Is Seen as 'Protector and Defender of Constitution.'

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 14.—(AP)—Firing at constitutional critics, Donald B. Richberg today named President Roosevelt "protector and defender of the constitution."

The former administrator of the defunct NRA told the City Club that the chief executive's program involving "vast outpouring of public credit" has been aimed at the protection of "millions of citizens in private ownership of property, and in the conduct of private enterprise, so that they may remain independent and might not be regimented into the increasing army of renters and employees who become dependent year by year on the centralized control of wealth in fewer and fewer hands."

The specific purposes of such agencies as AAA, FIA, TVA, and the other government bureaus set up in the last three years, he said, have been to retain the constitutional outlines of liberty set down a century and a half ago.

Citing the administration for doing the "first thing first," he said the country arrives on an election year "with the most important feature is increased wealth and national income."

The four years' administration of Hoover saw the national wealth shrink by 150 billion dollars, he declared, and national income sank about 40 billions.

The Roosevelt term has increased production, pay rolls, and employment more than half-way back to normal in contrast, he said.

Blasting at critics of the New Deal's economic program, he cited figures to show increased values in stock and bond listings, real estate, factories and farms and a 50 per cent boost in income.

"It doesn't make good sense," he said, "for men to argue that we are in a deadly peril because we have borrowed money, when we have increased our income 20 billions a year and added over 75 billions to liquid wealth of the nation."

Under the fire of the Richberg guns for creation of "red" scares and fears of state socialism.

President Roosevelt's candidates of the national election, he said, are for only one thing: to preserve the president's illness, the promise they will balance the government budget and borrow no more money whether the present day or not, he said, while Roosevelt has maintained his role as protector of the constitution and balanced the much more important national economic budget.

Fort Valley Attorney Seeks Bench Vacated by Judge Jenkins.

Sam M. Mathews, of Fort Valley, Ga., yesterday made formal announcement of his candidacy for judge of the court of appeals to succeed Judge W. Frank Jenkins, who has announced for the supreme court of Georgia.

Mathews is an attorney at law, has served as a member of the state senate, is a graduate of Emory University and of Mercer University law school.

For several years he was secretary-attorney of the state highway board. He is a son of the late Judge H. A. Mathews, who was judge of the superior courts of the Macon judicial circuit for 19 years, and who passed away in 1931.

Mathews is 37 years old and is married. His wife is the former Miss Evelyn Gibson, of Thomson, Ga. They have three children, Sam Mathews Jr., three years, and Mary and Beth Mathews, two daughters, age nine months.

He is a member of the Methodist church, a Mason and a member of the Woodmen of the World. He is also a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Boy Wins Glenn Art Essay Prize; Last in Series Is Presented Today

Thomas Owen Duvall, a tenth grader at Tech High school, carried off the $10 prize in last week's contest in Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn Art Essay Contest, which has been sponsored by the High Museum of Art.

Thomas was the first boy to win since the opening contest of the series and did so on his first try, which should encourage more boys to enter this week's contest, the tenth and last.

The rotating section of the Constitution will be used to present the contest picture and those desiring to compete should look it up immediately.

The last painting of the series is a group of women washing clothes, and while totally different from anything offered earlier, should not discourage contestants for that reason.

The contest is a part of the interest in the impressionist methods when they examine the painting and study its background. The customary $10 prize will be offered to the high school student turning in the best essay.

Again, the museum suggests that a visit be paid to the institution for a better study of the painting, although the rules do not require this.

(1) All junior and senior high school students are eligible.

(2) Essays must be limited to 500 words.

(3) Essays must be received at the High Museum, 1282 Peachtree street, not later than the Thursday following the publication of the photo.

(4) Standard size typewriter paper, 8-1/2 by 11 inches, must be used. Contestants must write on one side of the paper only, using a typewriter pen and ink. Neatness is essential.

(5) Signature should be placed at the bottom of the essay, accompanied by the names of parents or guardian, home address, telephone number if possible, name of the school attended, grade enrolled in and age of contestant.

Citizens' Safety Group Has Power To Halt Deadly Traffic Menace

One of Atlanta's newest organizations, the Citizens Safety Committee, is given a cordial welcome by the Constitution Safety Council, which believes that the organization of citizens' representatives of all the leading civic, business and social organizations of the city, can do an unlimited amount of good in fighting the greatest peril of our day—death and horrible injury from automobile crashes.

Representatives of more than three score such organizations of Atlanta met in a meeting of the Citizens Safety Council on Friday afternoon.

An executive board was named and the board has called a meeting of the full council for Friday afternoon.

Plan Is Proved One.

Just what such an organization can accomplish has been proved in Milwaukee, Wis., in a few short years, changed from one of the most dangerous for drivers and pedestrians to the winner of the National Safety award for driving safety.

And the major portion of that record is due to the efforts of a citizens' committee, the Milwaukee Safety Commission was organized at the request of the mayor, who appointed 15 citizens to form the commission to correlate the disconnected safety activities of all groups of the city, just as the Atlanta committee plans to do here.

Members were sought from all groups in Milwaukee concerned with safety and the commission set to work to discover the cause of the city's tragic record. Just what this body was able to do is evidenced by Milwaukee's top place in the "safe" cities of the nation.

Studied by Committee.

Main requests for traffic control improvements are sent to the commission by individuals or groups of citizens. All requests for the elimination of dangerous spots, installation of mechanical traffic regulators, changes in street lighting, erection of signs and the like, are referred to a special committee.

The committee makes a thorough investigation, after which it reports to the commission what it has learned, together with the recommendation as to what, if any, should be done. The commission's own recommendation, in turn, is sent to the city council, or whatever bureau of municipal department is concerned.

And they get action.

The Constitution Safety Council believes the same thing can be done in Atlanta by the new Citizens Safety Commission working in co-operation with all its citizens and with the municipal government.

But neither the Milwaukee commission nor the Atlanta committee has forgotten the actual basic unit of any

PAINTINGS PRAISED AT HIGH MUSEUM

Extensive Exhibit of Student and Alumni Work Is Commended.

Six paintings out of the extensive exhibition being sponsored by the High Museum of Art League at the museum have drawn particular comment from the many who have viewed them since the opening last Sunday. These are the winners of prizes in three classes, and the pictures, virtually as fine, which received honorable mention in the same classes.

To Miss Marietta Miller went the award presented by Mrs. Floyd W. McGee Jr. for best landscape painting, entitled "Still Quarters," was found to be the best in color and composition. Howell Foreman received the prize for his unusual "High Bridge Trestle," in which he depicted interestingly a prosaic subject.

The Samuel C. Dobbs' prize for portraiture was won by Miss Rosa Underwood for her study, "My Sister," a fine piece of striking portraiture. In this class Miss Dorothy Jean Alexander was given an honorable mention for her striking work of "Julia," a portrait of a negro woman in a jade green dress.

Miss Virginia Haire took the Beverly DuBois award for still life with "Fruit in candlelight," a painting in which the texture of the fruit and the effect of the candlelight are brought out in vivid fashion. Miss Emerine Jackson took the honorable mention with "Lilies," a lovely study of a group of calla lilies.

Judges were Elliot Clark, New York artist who recently held an exhibition at the museum and lectured there; Mrs. Herbert D. Oliver, Atlanta artist, and L. P. Skidmore, director of the High Museum of Art. The art league is composed of graduate and former students of the museum's art school and a number of present students. All work on exhibition was done outside of classes and with-out assistance.

Miss Irene Weir, noted artist, writer and lecturer, will deliver one of her popular lectures at the museum next Sunday, Mr. Skidmore announced yesterday. The subject will be "Garden in Color in Art," the lecture will be continued through March 20.

The art league exhibition will be continued through March 20.

BUG TRAP YIELDS CORN TO SQUAD OF OFFICERS

One gallon of corn whiskey was all that police netted yesterday from an elaborately planned trap to catch suspected "bug" car, records revealed.

The suspected lottery automobile was spotted at Ashby and Simpson streets by three cars loaded with lottery and vice squad officers. The police cars gave chase and finally overtook the "bug car" on the Maynard-Turner road.

Yielding to the expected lottery paraphernalia, the officers found only a gallon of corn liquor, records showed. The alleged driver of the machine gave his name as John Mullins, of a Marietta street address. He was booked on whiskey and speeding charges.

$1,000,000 WORTH OF FOOD CANNED IN STATE IN 1935

Plants in 252 Communities in State Preserved Several Million Tins of Farm Produce.

ATHENS, Ga., March 14.—(AP)—Community and home canning under the supervision of home demonstration agents brought foodstuffs worth nearly $1,000,000 to the tables of Georgia farmers during the past year, it was estimated here today.

Reports tabulated by the agricultural extension division showed about 3,700,000 cans were filled with surplus farm produce at community canning plants in the state and more than 2,700,000 cans and jars were filled in the homes of home demonstration club members in 77 counties.

Officials said the canning plants in 252 communities in the state with at least one in practically every county.

Most of the plants are directly or jointly under the supervision of county and home demonstration agents or teachers of vocational agriculture.

Harry L. Brown, director of the extension service, said a rapid development of community canning plants over the state in the last two years is the logical outgrowth of a home canning movement begun in Georgia 25 years ago.

Better canning equipment and methods have been perfected in recent years, he said. He added that the problems brought on by the depression, along with the help of relief agencies, has stimulated activities at the community canning plants.

Through the community plants the county and home demonstration agents and vocational teachers have been able to carry their live-at-home program a step further, Brown said. Farmers can now get together at community centers and can the products needed to live at home on a much larger scale than was formerly practicable.

HALL TO VOTE TUESDAY ON NEW COURTHOUSE

Bond Issue To Be Settled and County Officers Elected.

GAINEVILLE, Ga., March 14.—(AP)—Hall county voters will decide on a $75,000 bond issue for a new courthouse, and elect 10 county officials in the quadrennial election to be held Tuesday.

There are 28 candidates seeking the 10 offices. Only two officials, Coroner J. B. Vickers and School Superintendent W. L. Walker, are unopposed.

The bond issue, advocated by a number of civic organizations, would go into construction of a $150,000 courthouse to replace the present 63-year-old structure.

In the primary election itself, great interest appears centered in the sheriff's race in which the incumbent, I. L. Lawson, is opposed by Arthur W. Bell and Price Reed.

J. T. Phillips, veteran tax receiver, is opposed by the Rev. L. McNeal, Parks Roper, D. O. McKinney, Henry D. Tanner, John T. Smith and Eston Young.

Eight seats open on the county commission. They are Boyd Holland, R. G. McConnell and Fred O'Keller, incumbents; and W. F. Peck, Erskine Holland, W. N. Lott, Homer Langford and Charles Stanton.

For clerk of court, R. W. Smith, incumbent, is opposed by Samuel Dunn.

Seminole County Names Roosevelt Delegates

R. E. WHEELER.

ELLISON DUNN.

J. L. HARALSON.

G. L. REYNOLDS.

Seminole county, Georgia, as far as known, leads every county in the United States in selecting delegates to renominate President Roosevelt. Following the election held in that county March 4, between President Roosevelt and Governor Talmadge, when the President received 662 votes to 122 for Talmadge, Representatives to the state convention to select Georgia's delegates to the Philadelphia convention were named from the friends of President Roosevelt.

Wheeler is a Donaldsonville attorney; Dunn is chairman of the Democratic executive committee of the county and editor of the Donaldsonville News; Haralson is secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and Reynolds is county clerk of superior court. R. L. Cox, Donaldsonville attorney, was delegated to personally present the President with the official result of the election, which he did Friday. Cox is a brother of Congressman E. E. Cox, of Camilla, and Seminole is in his district.

IMPROVED COTTON GROWN ON FARMS IN 53 COUNTIES

Sale of Seed Indicates Large Increase in Production Will Be Shown in Georgia in 1935.

ATHENS, Ga., March 14.—Distribution of one-variety cottonseed among the farmers for 1935 planting forecasts a substantial increase in acreage in Georgia this year, E. C. Westbrook, extension cotton specialist of the State College of Agriculture, states.

Mr. Westbrook states that already several carloads of seed have been ordered, which indicates a large increase in acreage and production in long staple cotton in the state this year.

Growing of the long staple lint has had phenomenal growth in Georgia, says the extension specialist. Beginning in 1931 with the organization of three communities in the state, the plan has grown in magnitude to such extent that last year 16,984 farmers in 118 communities in 53 counties planted approximately 150,000 acres in the improved varieties and grew 75,000 bales, according to records of the state and federal cotton authorities.

A survey of the one-variety communities for 1935 shows the premiums paid on the extra-length staple above the average yield of the shorter lint grown in the surrounding areas, averaged $8 an acre, or a total of $600,000 to all the one-variety communities. This gave each of the 16,984 farmers an average of $30 extra profit on his cotton crop, the survey revealed.

Many farmers outside the one-variety communities also grew the long staple line which was sold to advantage, the auction being estimated at $600,000, which would mean that the growers in Georgia of long staple cotton last year received a bonus of $1,500,000 over the amount the same crop would have brought had it been sold for short staple, it is pointed out.

The effect of the one-variety plan is strikingly shown in the Georgia report. In 1930, only 16 per cent of the crop was 15-16-inch and longer as compared with 48.3 per cent in 1935. Only 2.3 per cent of the 1930 crop was 16-inch and longer, as compared with 21.4 per cent for 1935. Success of the one-variety plan has been due to the co-operation of the farmers, the ginners and the textile mills. Where a community is organized and agreed to plant only the improved seed, a ginnyer also agrees to give the ginners the seed, which insures the seed being kept up, mixed and pure, thus enabling the farmers to keep their seed varieties intact.

Many cotton mills in Georgia are co-operating with the plan, agreeing to buy all the improved cotton grown. In 1930, only 10 per cent of the crop was 15-16-inch and longer as compared with 48.3 per cent in 1935. Only 2.3 per cent of the 1930 crop was 16-inch and longer, as compared with 21.4 per cent for 1935.

118 Communities Grow One-Variety Cotton

Georgia is making rapid strides in the production of long staple cotton. Begun in 1931, the plan has grown until last year farmers in 118 communities, shown above, planted the one-variety seed. It will be noted that most of the communities are in north Georgia, one south Georgia county, Randolph, representing the southern part of the state in this project. The figure indicates the number of communities growing the improved lint in each county thus marked.

Voluntary Religious Association Elects New Officers at University

ATHENS, Ga., March 14.—The Voluntary Religious Association of the University of Georgia held its annual election here this week and Walter Wise, Fayetteville, was elected president of the University Y. M. C. A. to succeed John Bond, Toccoa.

Grace Winston, Athens, was elected president of the Y. W. C. A., to succeed Jane Miller, Rome. Marjorie Mann, McRae, was elected president of the Co-ordinate College Y. W. C. A., to succeed Isabelle Reid, Madison. Madeline, Atlanta, and Tap Bennett, Griffin, were elected vice presidents of the Y. M. C. A. Frances Knapp, Atlanta, and Mary Lucy Horn, Toccoa, were elected vice presidents of the Y. W. C. A.

Other officers elected for the Y. M. C. A. are James Curtis, Toccoa, secretary; J. D. Bolton, J. Alton Hoeft, G. D. Marchworth and Miss Elizabeth Todd, all of the University of Georgia; Mrs. R. P. Stephens, Boyce M. Grier and Robert R. Gunn, Athens; Walter Cochran, Rome; D. R. Cumming, Griffin; and E. D. Kenyon, Gainesville.

Huge Recreation, Game Project Being Developed in North Georgia

CORNELIA, Ga., March 14.—Much progress is being made on the huge northeast Georgia upland game and recreation project located in Habersham and Stephens counties, with headquarters at Cornelia.

The project contains approximately 50,000 acres of land, the project when fully developed, will provide a recreational area of vast magnitude for northeast Georgia and will be one of the largest and most extensive centers of its kind in the south, it is claimed.

The development was started by the Resettlement Administration under its program of better land, use of the land utilization division.

Lying among the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains, the rugged topography of this section provides exceptional advantages for the construction of recreational lakes and stream improvement. The beautiful valleys, shadowed by the mountains, with close shut-ins offer game sites where costs of construction will be low, and the swift, clear streams, when improved, will furnish excellent trout fishing. All lakes and streams will be stocked with species of fish best adapted to the waters where they will be placed.

Many structural improvements will include vacation cabins which will be located near the lakes. The cabins will be equipped with furniture and fixtures made by handicraft workers now employed on the area.

Wayside parks with recreation sheds and comfort stations will be located along the highways. These parks will be located where little, if any, landscaping is needed, and the profusion of wild flowers and shrubs which are indigenous to this section will serve as the principal attraction.

Many types of game, including deer and rhododendron, redbud, dogwood, trailing arbutus and various other flowers brighten and beautify the hills and valleys from early spring until late summer.

Picnic places will be located in attractive sections of the interior of the State. Structures and improvements will provide barbecue pits, seats, swings and other conveniences.

CHURCH AT OXFORD WILL GET MARKER

Tablet To Be Unveiled at Historic Building Next Sunday.

OXFORD, Ga., March 14.—A marker at "Old Emory church," at Oxford, will be unveiled on Sunday afternoon, March 22, at 2:30 o'clock, central time, by the women's organizations of Covington and Oxford, assisted by Dean George Roach, of Emory University Junior College, at Oxford.

Musie will be furnished by the glee club of Emory Junior College. Addresses will be made by Dr. M. L. Brittain, an alumni of Emory and new president of Georgia Tech, where this marker was made, and by Bishop W. A. Chandler, who secured the co-operation of the alumni in 1932 in restoring this historic building, where many graduates of old Emory received their degrees.

Alumni members and the public are invited to attend the exercises.

PLANS ARE ANNOUNCED FOR ATHENS 'Y' CAMP

W. T. Forbes, Director, Gives Personnel Set-Up for Summer Season.

ATHENS, Ga., March 14.—Two Georgia athletes, one a student at Vanderbilt and the other attending the University of Georgia, will assist "Bobby" Hays, director of programs at the Athens Y camp this summer, W. T. Forbes, director, announces.

Bob Bowden, colonel of the R. O. T. C. unit at the University of Georgia, where he is also captain of the varsity basketball team, will have charge of the camp. Mr. Forbes, a member of Vanderbilt's varsity track team, will have charge of land sports. Both have been added to the Y camp for several years.

Bowden's home is in Atlanta and Mayson hails from Buford. The Y camp program is being expanded this year, Forbes announces. He points out that two features will be continued this year. They are the lectures of Dr. Minor L. Blackford, of Emory Medical College and Ralph T. Jones, columnist of The Atlanta Constitution.

A music and art department have been added to the camp. Mr. Forbes states. Jack J. Brooks, member of the English faculty of Bass Junior High school, Atlanta, will again be camp tutor and director of dramatics, as well as editor of the Y Camp News. Jack Reid, of Athens, will be assistant editor of the camp newspaper.

John B. Whitaker, Y. University of Georgia, will be director of the nature study department in the camp this year. He was appointed German tutor and director of drama, and laboratory assistant and tutor in the botany department at the University of Georgia.

Ralph Smith, of Jefferson, student at Georgia Tech, will have charge of the photography department; music, Robert Gaines, Emory University; Dupree Hunnicutt, University of Georgia; and Robert R. Gunn, Athens, will be in charge of the younger boys' unit; George Heider, University of Georgia, will have charge of the art craft department; Logan Irwin, of Pennsylvania, will be in charge of the girls' unit; Charles E. Stone and Robert T. Jones, Jr., Emory University, camp infirmaries.

REYNOLDS RESIGNS STATE CLUB POST

King Dixon Succeeds Him as President of Young Democrats.

R. J. Reynolds, Atlanta attorney, resigned yesterday as president of the Georgia division, Young Democratic club of Atlanta, which he had held since 1933.

His resignation, which was accepted, was tendered at a specially called meeting of the board of executive directors, held at the Georgia Hotel.

Reynolds, he declared, because business matters demanding his attention, had decided to resign. He gave to the presidency the time he felt it should have.

After accepting Reynolds' resignation, the board unanimously elected King Dixon, of Savannah, to fill the unexpired term.

Reynolds has been president for four years. His Georgia division was organized. His present term would have run until the next convention, which is to be called within 90 days after adjournment of the national democratic convention in Philadelphia in June.

WOMAN INJURED IN 3-CAR CRASH

Negroes Flee After Side-swiping Auto of Stone Mountain Resident.

One woman was injured and three other persons suffered bruises in a three-car smash-up on the Covington road, near Avondale, last night.

Henry J. Prichard, of Decatur, Route 2, told police his car was side-swiped by a machine containing five negroes as he was driving west on the Covington road shortly after 8 o'clock last night. The negroes' car then careened into another auto, driven by E. L. Crow, of Stone Mountain, police said. Mrs. Crow, riding in the car, suffered a fractured neck cap and minor lacerations.

Crow and two small children, riding in the back seat, were also bruised and shaken up. The Crow's were taken to Emory University hospital, but all were dismissed except Mrs. Crow, whose condition was reported as not serious.

All the negroes except one woman, listed as Lucille Freeman, of Scottdale, jumped out of the wrecked car and fled.

ROME MAN IS KILLED IN HIGHWAY ACCIDENT

ROME, Ga., March 14.—James DeWitt Thacker, 28, was instantly killed and Howard Echols was believed badly injured this morning when the automobile in which they were riding overturned on the curve at the Six-Mile station on the Rome-Care Spring highway.

Mr. Echols was rushed to a local hospital and his condition tonight was declared to be critical with little if any hope for his recovery.

As far as could be learned there was no eyewitness to the crash of the auto, and it is believed that the driver lost control of the car on the curve and it left the highway.

Mr. Thacker was born and reared in Rome. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mattie Conn Thacker; his parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Thacker; three sisters, Mrs. Evelyn Kilgore, Mrs. C. J. Benson and Miss Margaret Thacker; three brothers, Charles, Carl and Howard Thacker, all of Rome.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Emmett Cole funeral home with Rev. H. F. Joyner officiating and interment will be in East View cemetery.

London Camp Active. This was the first state, outside of Kansas, where a London-planned delegation had been entered in a primary. The move was typical of the increased activity in the London camp, marked also by the announcement of John Hamilton, general counsel of the republican national committee, that he would open headquarters here Monday.

Roosevelt and Knox won the democratic and republican primary campaigns in New Hampshire. The President was given a pledged delegation, Knox an unpledged but friendly group of delegates.

COUNTY BOARD HEAD SUSPENDS CRAWFORD

Special Agent Laid Off
Pending Trial on Charges of Intoxication.

Louis Crawford, special agent of the Fulton county commission, who was arrested Friday morning on charges of intoxication, disorderly conduct and fighting, was suspended yesterday by Dr. Charles R. Adams, chairman of the county board.

Dr. Adams was emphatic in his denunciation of drinking among county workers.

"I absolutely will not tolerate drinking among county employees," he declared, "especially among those charged with law enforcement. Every employee found guilty of drinking will be summarily dealt with."

Crawford was named as a county pay roll "parasite" by George F. Longino, minority faction leader, before the July-August grand jury investigation last year.

Dr. Adams asserted, if the board sustains the charges he will be dismissed.

Observers attached considerable political significance to the action taken by the board chairman, himself a member of the majority faction.

PEACH TREES NOW MOST BEAUTIFUL

Fort Valley Orchards in Full Bloom; Highway Directions Given.

Advice has just been received from the "peach belt" at Fort Valley that the orchards are now in bloom. They may be seen to best advantage now, according to Jack Strouss, secretary of the Atlanta Motor Club.

Major A. C. Riley, of Fort Valley, also states "the peach trees in this section are in bloom now and can be seen to the best advantage on Sunday, March 15."

There are hundreds of thousands of bearing peach trees in the orchards of Georgia from which annual shipments of fruit are made.

Several noted varieties have been developed by the Georgia peach growers, namely, the Elberta, the Hiley Bell and the Georgia Belle.

Due to construction work on the shorter route through Barnesville, the Atlanta Motor Club suggests an all-paved route of 134 miles to Fort Valley as follows:

From Atlanta through McDonough and Jackson to Forsyth over State Route No. 42, thence over U. S. 41 to Macon and Perry, thence to Fort Valley over State Route No. 7.

Motorists may obtain additional, detailed information by calling the office of the Atlanta Motor Club at any time.

125 ENROLLED.
One hundred and thirty-two men and women have enrolled for graduate study this year at Atlanta University, the largest graduate enrollment in the university's history and an increase of 40 per cent over 1934-1935, according to figures made public by Registrar John F. Whitaker.

The total enrollment, 75 are doing full-time work for their advanced degrees, and 57 are registered for part-time work, the registrar's report stated.

To Sing With Glee Club

Rose Bampton Guest Artist With Emory Club.

Making her first appearance in Atlanta, Rose Bampton, mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will sing as guest soloist of the Emory University Glee Club at the club's annual Atlanta concert at 8:30 o'clock March 25 in Glenn Memorial auditorium.

A protégé of Stokowski, Miss Bampton has won fame in her grand opera roles and also as an artist on the national radio networks. She has the distinction of having sung as guest artist with both Stokowski and Toscanini, appearing with the latter on the program of the Philharmonic Society of New York last Sunday.

The Glee Club has recently returned from its annual winter tour which included concerts in North Carolina and Virginia and a final appearance in Washington at the Shoreham hotel. Featured on the last concert was a program of negro spirituals.

Head injuries suffered Friday afternoon when he was struck by an automobile at Fifth and Juniper streets caused the death in Grady hospital early yesterday morning of John Lewis, negro, 45, rear of 120 West Peachtree street.

This death marked the fourteenth traffic fatality within the city limits of Atlanta since the first of the year, and the second motor fatality this month.

John Dickinson, of 947 Juniper street, N. E., alleged driver of the car, was held on a charge of reckless driving and accident.

Other fatal injuries, Lewis suffered a fractured left leg.

VALDOSTA IS WINNER
IN BILLIARD TABLE TAX

The city of Valdosta has the right to tax billiard tables for ad valorem regardless of any other taxes assessed against them, the Georgia supreme court held yesterday.

The supreme court did not pass on the constitutionality of an ordinance in Valdosta, holding that it was unnecessary because of the decision holding the tables could be taxed.

The supreme court reversed the Lowndes superior court in the decision.

Atlanta's World Hitch-Hiker Found

After Months of Eventful Silence

Arthur Cain, Last Reported in New York, Writes From Morocco of Days in Jail, Jumping Ship and Attributes Silence to Distaste of Incarceration.

A world hitch-hiker's trials, troubles and little inconveniences, such as going without meals, being tossed into jails—not the best of the best—and being "knocked out" with sunstroke and cholera while laboring on a tramp steamer were disclosed yesterday in an unexpected letter from Arthur Cain, Atlanta, boy who started out on a catch-as-catch-can world tour last spring.

Cain's descriptions of his zig-zag thumb-trip to New York were carried in The Constitution and created considerable interest among Atlantans. His last letter to The Constitution advised that he had booked passage (as an officer's mess-boy) on a freighter bound for Ireland. And then the name of Arthur Cain became only a memory and his whereabouts were speculation.

He didn't even drop us a postcard saying "Wish you were here." But from the resume of his experiences during the months of silence, recounted in his letter received yesterday, a "wish" would have been considered an insult. His experiences have been that unpleasant and precarious, for the most part.

Wayfarer's Letter.
The scourge of many adventures without funds, the much-publicized "authorities" have kept Cain silent as to his whereabouts and identity. Now he declares he feels safe in communicating with Atlanta and here is what he writes from Casa Blanca, Morocco:

"Editor The Constitution:
"Well, I must seem rather like the forgotten man or a lost soul popping up like this again, but I assure you that the lengthy silence has been very necessary to preserve the good health and liberty of your wayfarer hitch-hiker. Like a good philosopher (and a very poor correspondent) I have taken to my heels to save my poetic neck and consequently 'mum' is indeed the word. And since it's a long story, let me begin where I left off. Let's see...

"After writing you last from New York—it seems centuries ago—trouble began promptly and without further ado. As I told you, young Cain was bound for Ireland the following day aboard a tramp freighter. Young Cain was the officer's mess-boy. All well and good. But young Cain, the unrepentant, completely missed the ship, job, trip and all.

Longshoremen Blush.
"I am told that longshoremen for blocks were blushing at my reminiscences of the mate who set the sailing time two hours ahead. Then, like Napoleon, I contemplated suicide.

"Following this crowning misfortune, your scribe went into such doldrums that the idea of breaking down and confessing it all was unthinkable. I spent two wretched months in that boulevard of all deliriums—the Bowery. My impressions during that miserable period were not only unlikable, but unstable as well.

My morale hit its lowest ebb after a term in that historic but inhospitable bastille, the Tombs. Being charged with petty larceny (passing a phony nickel in an elevator station turnstile), assault and battery with intent to kill (jabbing fist the homely proboscis of a plain-clothesman whom I thought was a Bowery bum) and resisting arrest, I looked dolefully forward to a lengthy visit with the blue-coated boys of Franklin street. Upon trial, however, matchless eloquence saved the day.

Judge Believes Story.
"Averting my eyes from the bridge of sighs, I began a tale of woe that made even Bob seem like a carefree capitalist. I had just hopped up from Georgia, had never seen none of them overhead trolley cars before and didn't mean no harm when I bought the checked suit. Crops were bad and paw was ailing. I reckoned I'd

Atlanta's World Hitch-Hiker Found After Months of Eventful Silence

Arthur Cain, Last Reported in New York, Writes From Morocco of Days in Jail, Jumping Ship and Attributes Silence to Distaste of Incarceration.

A world hitch-hiker's trials, troubles and little inconveniences, such as going without meals, being tossed into jails—not the best of the best—and being "knocked out" with sunstroke and cholera while laboring on a tramp steamer were disclosed yesterday in an unexpected letter from Arthur Cain, Atlanta, boy who started out on a catch-as-catch-can world tour last spring.

Cain's descriptions of his zig-zag thumb-trip to New York were carried in The Constitution and created considerable interest among Atlantans. His last letter to The Constitution advised that he had booked passage (as an officer's mess-boy) on a freighter bound for Ireland. And then the name of Arthur Cain became only a memory and his whereabouts were speculation.

He didn't even drop us a postcard saying "Wish you were here." But from the resume of his experiences during the months of silence, recounted in his letter received yesterday, a "wish" would have been considered an insult. His experiences have been that unpleasant and precarious, for the most part.

Wayfarer's Letter.
The scourge of many adventures without funds, the much-publicized "authorities" have kept Cain silent as to his whereabouts and identity. Now he declares he feels safe in communicating with Atlanta and here is what he writes from Casa Blanca, Morocco:

"Editor The Constitution:
"Well, I must seem rather like the forgotten man or a lost soul popping up like this again, but I assure you that the lengthy silence has been very necessary to preserve the good health and liberty of your wayfarer hitch-hiker. Like a good philosopher (and a very poor correspondent) I have taken to my heels to save my poetic neck and consequently 'mum' is indeed the word. And since it's a long story, let me begin where I left off. Let's see...

"After writing you last from New York—it seems centuries ago—trouble began promptly and without further ado. As I told you, young Cain was bound for Ireland the following day aboard a tramp freighter. Young Cain was the officer's mess-boy. All well and good. But young Cain, the unrepentant, completely missed the ship, job, trip and all.

Longshoremen Blush.
"I am told that longshoremen for blocks were blushing at my reminiscences of the mate who set the sailing time two hours ahead. Then, like Napoleon, I contemplated suicide.

"Following this crowning misfortune, your scribe went into such doldrums that the idea of breaking down and confessing it all was unthinkable. I spent two wretched months in that boulevard of all deliriums—the Bowery. My impressions during that miserable period were not only unlikable, but unstable as well.

My morale hit its lowest ebb after a term in that historic but inhospitable bastille, the Tombs. Being charged with petty larceny (passing a phony nickel in an elevator station turnstile), assault and battery with intent to kill (jabbing fist the homely proboscis of a plain-clothesman whom I thought was a Bowery bum) and resisting arrest, I looked dolefully forward to a lengthy visit with the blue-coated boys of Franklin street. Upon trial, however, matchless eloquence saved the day.

Judge Believes Story.
"Averting my eyes from the bridge of sighs, I began a tale of woe that made even Bob seem like a carefree capitalist. I had just hopped up from Georgia, had never seen none of them overhead trolley cars before and didn't mean no harm when I bought the checked suit. Crops were bad and paw was ailing. I reckoned I'd Georgia Group To Inaugurate Intensive Drive for New Members.

Plans for an intensive campaign for new members were announced yesterday by the Georgia Conference on Social Work, which holds its annual meeting in Atlanta April 14 to 17, inclusive.

The goal of the campaign is active participation by every social agency, every social worker, representatives of each county welfare board, and outstanding leaders in the social work in social work in every part of the state.

Miss Mary Dickinson, executive secretary of the Atlanta Tuberculosis Association, is chairman of the finance committee in charge of this campaign.

The conference had 561 individual members and 29 agency members in 1935 and has grown steadily to $100 for other agencies, and $25 for sustaining members.

The fees support the work of the conference and finance the convention. The meeting in Atlanta is expected to draw about 1,500 interested persons for a discussion of social problems of Georgia. Outstanding speakers appear on the program, which is being arranged by a special committee. Thomas P. Mims, director of the state department of public welfare, is president, and Mrs. Mary Kate Dusk is executive secretary.

The theme of the conference will be "Responsibility for a Social Security Program in Georgia."

TECH CLASS PLANNING TO PRESENT PORTRAIT

With the presentation of a portrait of Dr. Lyman Hall, second president of Georgia Tech and prominent southern educator, by the class of 1936, the series of portraits of Tech presidents will be completed.

The portrait of Dr. Hall will be placed in the M. L. Brittain dining hall alongside portraits of the present and past presidents of the institution, according to Oliver Kidd, class president, who announced the proposed presentation.

Dr. Hall succeeded Dr. I. S. Hopkins as president of Tech in 1896, serving in this capacity until his death in 1905. Along with his portrait will be that of Dr. Hopkins, Dr. K. G. Matheson, third president, and Dr. M. L. Brittain, who now holds the position. The portrait of Dr. Matheson was presented the school by the class of 1935.

WOMEN TO SPONSOR
PERSONALITY COURSE

A personality course in the form of six lectures will be sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Club of Atlanta, the first lecture to be given during national business women's week at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the club headquarters in the Grand Theater building.

Miss Lauretta Fancher will be the speaker, according to Mrs. Flora S. Osburn, president of the Atlanta organization. The first lecture, dealing with external appearance, will be illustrated by a fashion show. The five additional lectures to be given on successive Monday nights, will be on the following topics: "Fears and How to Get Rid of Them," "Inferiorities," "Introverts and Extroverts," "Getting Along With People," and "Your Personality and Your Life."

HEADS VETERANS' COUNCIL

Cecil R. Hall Elected President; Co-ordination of Activities Sought.

The Veterans' Council of Atlanta, a body composed of representatives of the various veterans' organizations of Atlanta, was organized Friday afternoon.

The purpose of the new organization is to promote the welfare of ex-service men, to eliminate fiction and misunderstanding among veterans' organizations and to co-ordinate their activities.

The council is composed of representatives of the Atlanta Post No. 1 and the Fulton County Post No. 134, American Legion; the Marcus W. Beck Jr. Post No. 3027 and the Greater Atlanta Post No. 390, Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States; the Betty Harrison Jones Chapter No. 1, Disabled American Veterans of the World War; the Lee-Roosevelt camp, United Spanish War Veterans and Atlanta Post No. 112, Jewish War Veterans of the United States.

Officers elected at the organization meeting include Cecil R. Hall, Georgia commander of Disabled American Veterans, president; Trammell Scott, Fulton County Post No. 134, first vice president; Ralph Withner, commander Atlanta Post No. 112, second vice president; William L. VanDyke, commander Marcus Beck Jr. post, secretary, and Charles M. Bernhardt, Georgia commander, United Spanish War Veterans, treasurer.

Other members of the council are: Robert A. Garner, commander Atlanta Post No. 1; W. Frank Moore, commander Betty Harrison Jones chapter; A. E. Cutler, commander Lee-Roosevelt camp; W. M. Gilliland, commander Greater Atlanta post, and Harry Wenzlow, judge advocate, Atlanta Post No. 112.

The council is declared to be non-sectarian and non-political in nature, with veterans who hold elective or appointive political offices, or candidates for such offices, disqualified for membership in the council.

HIGH COURT GRANTS PERMISSION TO SUE

Wesleyan College Loses in Case Involving Muscogee County Property.

The Georgia supreme court held yesterday that the heirs of W. J. Proctor have the right to sue Wesleyan College and Mrs. Keating Proctor Redfern for $100 a month income on property deeded by their father.

The record shows that W. J. Proctor executed a deed to certain College property, conveying certain Muscogee county real estate to the institution. The college agreed in accepting the property that $100 a month rent would be paid to J. B. Proctor, brother of W. J. Proctor, during the latter's lifetime.

On the death of W. J. Proctor, his brother for a $1 consideration conveyed the property to the children of W. J. Proctor. A few months later Wesleyan College for a $1 consideration conveyed the property to Mrs. Keating Proctor Redfern to the Muscogee county property.

GROGERS WILL STUDY
PENDING FOOD LAWS

Meeting Here To Participate in National Retail Celebration Week.

Legislation pending in congress of importance to retail food dealers will be discussed by Atlanta retail grocers at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce building Tuesday night.

The organized celebration marks the first attempt of the National Association of Retail Grocers of the United States to honor the retail food dealer, it was said. There are 400,000 retail grocers in this country.

The great strides forward made in the retailing of food products in the last 75 years was pointed out yesterday by Mrs. Audrey Hargett, acting secretary of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' Association.

In 1862 there were only 16 imported articles for sale in grocery stores, she said, while among all articles listed in the store there were only 30 principal lines of food. Today a grocery house in one of the smaller inland towns of the country lists more than 50,000 different items for sale.

The retail grocer, she said, must be a highly specialized buyer. Meetings similar to the one being held here will be held by grocers throughout the country, beginning tomorrow and lasting through Saturday.

DR. WILLIAM EVANS
TO SPEAK ON BIBLE

Eight-Day Session Will Open Today at Baptist Tabernacle.

Dr. William Evans, of Los Angeles, noted Bible scholar, teacher and minister, will conduct an eight-day Bible session at the Baptist Tabernacle, beginning today.

He will speak at 10:50 o'clock this morning on "Is Prayer a Force or a Farce?" He also will preach at 3 o'clock tonight. His subject tonight will be "What Did Jesus Say About Himself?"

Dr. Evans for many years was associated with the late Dr. Lan G. Broughton in conducting Bible conferences. Dr. W. H. Knight, pastor of the Tabernacle, describes him as being a brilliant speaker.

Services during the week will be held at 10:30 o'clock in the morning and at 7:30 o'clock at night. The theme for the nightly services will be "The Face of Christ." The musical program for the conference is under the direction of William E. Young.

AX USED TO SUBDU
INTRUDER IN HOUSE

Scalp wounds inflicted with the blunt end of an ax resulted in treatment at Grady hospital for a burglar suspect early yesterday morning. He was surprised in the kitchen of a rooming house at 339 Tech place, police reported.

The suspect gave his name as Robert E. Vickers, 24, of a Venable street address. He was held on a charge of suspicion of burglary.

E. N. Barron and A. J. Atkinson, roomers, told police they were the suspect when they went to the kitchen to investigate a noise. Police said Atkinson struck the suspect with a small ax when he made a move toward a pocket.

COMMERCIAL GRADS TO ORGANIZE ALUMNI

Final organization of an alumni association will feature the alumni home-coming of Commercial High school at 8 o'clock Thursday night, March 26, according to Miss Mildred Converse, chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Special invitations have been sent to alumni of the old commercial department of Girls' High school, which in 1910 became English Commercial High School for Girls, and in 1915, Commercial High school. Exhibits and presents depicting the progress of the school since its founding in 1915, class reunions and speeches by prominent alumni and school officials will compose the program.

TO PRESENT PLAY.

A large group of men from Morehouse College, assisted by several students, are preparing to take part in the production of the annual Morehouse Shakespearean play, "Much Ado About Nothing," which will be presented at the stage of the Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium on March 26 and 27. For the occasion the stage of the Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium will be rebuilt to resemble the stage of an Elizabethan theater, and the play will be presented in the simple fashion of Shakespeare's time.

U. S. RELIEF PROJECTS
DEFENDED BY HOPKINS

Failure of Hoover Administration Attacked in New York Address.

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP)—The Federal Relief Administration has "no apologies to make" for projects criticized by "boon-doggies," Administrator Harry L. Hopkins declared here today.

Speaking at a luncheon of the United Neighborhood Houses, Hopkins attacked relief "failure" of the Hoover administration and said that Roosevelt relief work is under fire of critics acting maliciously for political and selfish personal reasons.

About 40 persons, many bearing placards asking the government to "get rid of" Hopkins and Victor Riddler, city WPA director, marched on a sidewalk in front of the Hotel Biltmore at which the luncheon was held. Hopkins entered by another door.

He declined to comment on the demonstration or upon Riddler's dispute with Robert Moses, city park commissioner, who has refused to permit WPA project signs to be erected in parks. The administrator indicated, however, that Riddler would be supported as his agent.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, fortified by a corporation counsel's opinion that the projects must be "clearly defined and identified" under relief rules, said he would insist upon "full, complete, happy and harmonious co-operation between the city hall and Washington" in relief.

In his address, which was broadcast, Hopkins said:

"The record of the previous administration is characterized by failure to provide food and shelter for the unemployed, the failure to take one substantial step to allay the fears and misgivings of a nation."

Under Roosevelt policies, he said, there has been food, clothing and housing, and many public works have been accomplished.

Turning to "white collar" projects and the criticism of them, he said:

"We have no apologies to make for giving employment to tens of thousands of professional men and women. Rather do we resent, on their behalf, the malicious efforts made to deprive these men and women of security which these jobs give them."

Mayors said WPA funds are not wasted, he said.

RHINELAND ACTION DEFENDED BY HITLER

only with August of 1914, when Bavaria was wild with war fever. The city's population of 750,000 was augmented by 45,000 "power-of-joy" tourists brought in 45 special trains and more than 50,000 others, who, taking advantage of a 75 per cent fare reduction poured in from various parts of Bavaria and elsewhere to the birthplace of the Nazi movement.

Only 6,000 could crowd into the exhibition hall where Hitler spoke, but several hundred thousand were massed in the enormous Theresia meadow round the hall and in adjoining fields where they heard the speech through loud speakers.

Two hundred loud speakers connected by 16 miles of specially laid cable carried Hitler's words through every important street in the city.

Streets for miles around the hall were closed to ordinary traffic and filled with columns of troops and Nazi organizations in black, brown and blue uniforms, contrasting to the sombre costumes of civilians and working men, jammed in a vast mass trying to get as close as possible.

When the cheering had died down sufficiently for him to be heard, Hitler told his audience of previous nationwide votes in which he had asked for all Germany's confidence. "I asked you for your confidence because we withdrew from the League of Nations," he reminded them. "You know why we withdrew. The League did not give us the same rights as others. It is impossible for us to play second fiddle."

"Now I am asking again for your confidence. Between now and March 29 (the date of the parliamentary elections) I will take the responsibility for what I have recently done."

"I assumed this responsibility. It was not always easy, for I took over a regime that was in a state of collapse."

"I assumed the heaviest burden it is possible for any man to assume. I doubt whether anyone else would have had the courage to take the full responsibility in his name alone."

"I did not hide behind majorities. I took my mandate from the German people and to the people I am responsible with my head."

"With it, I stand or fall."

"In three years," said Hitler, "we succeeded in bringing Germany's economy in order."

"If this or that critic tells me things ought to have been done differently, I reply:

"I had the courage to do something: Millions were crying for bread; they demanded action; I acted."

"Der Fuehrer then went into a long harangue against the parliamentary system of government, criticizing it with biting irony."

Said Hitler: "It is impossible to have good international relations if one is a helot and slave in foreign affairs. I care far less for sympathy than for respect."

Seek Respect.

"I am trying to restore to the German people the respect of the world, for I do not believe you can have sympathy for something you do not respect."

"It is so difficult to make clear to the rest of the world that this is a different Germany from that of former days; that it has become a common with the November republic. (The republic immediately after the overthrow of the Kaiser)."

"The nationalistic think they can do with us what they please. I am suffering from the contempt which my predecessors brought upon Germany. We must succeed in making Germany free again."

"I tell you it took much courage to do what I did in these three years. Every step I took was a step toward the freedom of the German people."

"Nobody Shall Tell Me—"

"attempted in the last three years to direct the political policy of the nation toward the reconstruction of the army."

"I cannot represent the German people so long as they are second-class."

"Apparently referring to the Rhineland, demilitarized by the Locarno treaty, Hitler declared he would tell me there is such and such an intention which I must respect. God Almighty has created me a German, therefore with my grace, I will act for them and their interests."

"He then served notice: 'I cannot be forced to change what I have done either by menacing or by flattery.'"

"The one of Hitler's voice now became defiant. Shouting at the top of his lungs, he cried:

"We will not stand for being treated as you treat the German people. We demand the same exit and entrance in the world as the rest."

"Germany will not stand for being called a second-class nation. We demand the same exit and entrance in the world as the rest."

"After an hour and 10 minutes of his forceful speaking, Hitler became hoarse and he coughed frequently."

Nevertheless, he took up the question of the Locarno pact, explaining that the German people have spoken and expounding his arguments against it. He also went at length into the Franco-Soviet pact of mutual military assistance to demonstrate how, in his opinion, it conflicted with the spirit of the Locarno pact.

After explaining that the conclusion of the Franco-Soviet pact compelled him to renounce the Locarno treaty, Hitler referred to his peace offers to the rest of Europe.

"I made the biggest gesture any European statesman ever made," he declared. "Europe must be rebuilt on a new basis. Mutual trust must be its foundation."

"But I am stretching out my hand to the French people, but we do not want Germany, anywhere or anyhow, discriminated against."

"We want to be masters in our own home. We do not want others to sit in judgment on our internal affairs."

"Above all human judges is the Almighty God. He alone can decide God's voice is the people's voice and therefore you alone are my judges."

"On March 29 the German people will make their gesture. Its import will be: For German liberty and equality and therefore for peace."

"After the election is over, I can tell the world that I speak, but that the German people have spoken."

Hitler finished speaking after one and a half hours without even alluding to the invitation of the League of Nations and without making any reference to the League of Nations.

Hitler Recites His Achievements, 'Asks' Approval of Program

MUNICH, Bavaria, March 14.—(UP)—The virtually complete text of the speech of Adolf Hitler here tonight follows:

"For the third time I call on you publicly to state your faith in the third Reich. The first time was in February, 1933. The reason for that was that I had been appointed head of the German government on January 30, 1933. Our enemies here and abroad falsely said the German people were weak."

"In this event, I decided to hold elections. The second time was when we left the League of Nations. I called the German people to elect representatives when we withdrew from the League."

"Other nations refused to give us our equal rights. Here I ask you to give Europe the thunder of your approval. I cannot do otherwise. I ask you to vote in order to show I do not stand alone."

"I have the whole nation behind me. In this confidence in your sound sentiment of honor I have decided to hold elections."

"The German nation must place its faith in me. Then I will be its courageous champion. I am not going to assume responsibility. I do not know that prior to 1933, repeatedly refused to participate in the government. I was not then afraid of responsibility for him to be heard."

"When I finally accepted responsibility it was not lighter but heavier. I have borne the responsibility of a man."

"It has not always been easy. I took over a country on the verge of a breakdown. None of my critics then did not give me the same rights as others. It is impossible for us to play second fiddle."

"Now I am asking again for your confidence. Between now and March 29 (the date of the parliamentary elections) I will take the responsibility for what I have recently done."

Germany restored her own rights. "God Almighty created me a German. It is His will that I belong to this nation. I did not seek to separate this nation from others. On the contrary, I want to bring it nearer to the others, but they should not try to treat us as a second-class nation. I shall follow the road that Providence orders me to follow."

"I have been honest in what I have done these three years. I represent the rights of the German nation. Never will it be possible to bring about an understanding with Germany so long as there is no equality based on her inferiority. Inequality leads to revolt and hatred in one hand and to fear and mistrust in the other. If there is peace possible if one is animated by hatred and the others by mistrust?"

"The unfortunate Treaty of Versailles, which was designed to bring peace to the world, was unable to bring peace because it was based on the division of peoples into inferior and superior nations. Its principle is violence."

"The territorial clauses of the Versailles were unreasonable. We know that every modification of territorial clauses requires sacrifices. However, I am not willing to wage eternal war for modification of frontiers. You must know that—namely, we do not want to wage eternal war in order to enlarge the nation. We know a more simple method to enlarge the nation—by having a surplus birth rate."

"Five hundred thousand births a year constitute rejuvenation without harming others."

"We are of the opinion that problems of peace should be solved reasonably and that of colonies to time, which might bring a reasonable solution."

"However, the second tendency of Versailles, to divide the nations into inferior and superior groups, was unacceptable."

"We are a great power in Europe. We have allowed others to treat us as a negro tribe can be treated. Germany never tolerated this and we will not tolerate it."

Techwood Model Shows Detail of Housing Project

In the offices of the Techwood Housing Project is a model installed last week to help in showing prospective tenants the location of each apartment. The model, in scale, is worked out in minute detail, a faithful reproduction of everything that the government has put into this $2,575,000 slum clearance project. Mrs. Lillian K. Ramsey, secretary to D. A. Calhoun, superintendent, is shown inspecting the model. Staff photo.

First steps toward a definite occupation of the Techwood housing project in the country side for the housing of stores in the area will be received by D. A. Calhoun, district manager of the F. W. A. housing division.

Bids must be received by noon, next Friday, March 20, at Calhoun's office in the Citizens & Southern Bank building.

Each store, built by the government as a shopping center for the Techwood project, is being offered to merchants and retailers from the area who will be apportioned a reduction of rents of the dwelling units.

"We expect to provide a couple of grocery stores, a delicatessen, a beauty parlor, a dry cleaning and shoe repairing shop and other miscellaneous businesses for the convenience of Techwood residents," Calhoun said yesterday.

Text of Address by Flandin To League on Rhineland Crisis

LONDON, March 14.—(AP)—The text of French Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin's address to the League of Nations council today on the Rhineland crisis follows:

The events which led to this special meeting of the council are too well known for it to be necessary to go over them again at length. One week ago today, the diplomatic representatives in Berlin of powers signatories with Germany to the Locarno pact were received by the German government."

The government, he declared, has widened the breach between itself and the League of Nations by its long-time ally, Belgium. In addition, he asserted, France has failed in its pressure on England to get quick action on the Locarno pact."

STIFF BATTLE LOOMS FOR CANAL EXPENSES

Sen. Fletcher Will Carry Fight for Florida Project to the Floor.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, March 14.—The Fletcher amendment to the War Department annual supply bill providing $20,000,000 for converted public works projects, while already defeated by both a subcommittee and the full committee on appropriations of the senate, will be pressed for favorable action on the floor when that body takes up the measure early next week, Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, sponsor of the canal project, said here today.

Fletcher's amendment was defeated in the full committee by the close vote of 12 to 11 after a subcommittee of the appropriations body split, 6 to 5, in recommending that no provision be made for the canal.

While Senator Fletcher is disposed to blame opponents of the administration with defeat of his amendment, the close vote in committee presages a spirited fight on the floor of the upper chamber.

$12,000,000 for Canal.
Of the $20,000,000 requested in the Fletcher proposal, $12,000,000 would be earmarked for the canal, while the balance of $8,000,000 would go to similarly disputed projects in Mississippi, New Mexico, and West Virginia.

The effect of the amendment, if adopted, would be to give the canal project something of a permanent status by providing funds under the regular river and harbor program as made available annually under the War Department appropriations bill.

Almost from the start, the canal designed to save ships a passage of several hundred miles around the Florida keys has been the subject of bitter controversy. Residents of the southern end of the state contend the excavations will seriously affect the underground fresh water supply. Conflicting engineering reports have featured the controversy.

Charging that the canal was both economically unsound and impractical from an engineering standpoint, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, introduced a resolution at the beginning of the present session asking for a senatorial investigation of the project. The senate commerce committee, which passed on the Vandenberg resolution, has not yet reported.

While no further investigation necessary so damaging was the preliminary testimony of the House administrator Harold L. Ickes, who pronounced it economically unsound despite the fact his agency originally furnished funds for the undertaking.

Up to Congress.
President Roosevelt in approving an initial PWA allocation of $5,000,000 for the estimated $140,000,000 project said he would not grant additional funds for a project so important without congressional approval. Thus the fight Senator Fletcher is raising for incorporation of the funds in the regular War Department appropriations for rivers and harbors.

Agitated for more than 100 years, the proposed ship canal from the Atlantic to the Gulf of Mexico, was suggested during the early days of the Roosevelt administration for the more northern route along the St. Mary's river, marking the eastern boundary between Georgia and Florida. An All-Florida route was selected for the original allocation after Georgia advocates of the project permitted their interest to wane.

Senator Fletcher's colleague, Senator Park Trammell, of Florida, has announced he would go along with Fletcher in supporting the amendment for additional funds.

On the other hand, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, leading opponent of the canal, declared he

Drop in State Tuberculosis Toll Said Result of Close Co-operation

Although there has been a gratifying drop in the death rate of tuberculosis in the past five years in Georgia, the disease still ranks high as a cause of death, according to a statement made yesterday by Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the state department of public health, in summing up the activities of the division of tuberculosis control for the year 1935.

"The death rate of tuberculosis dropped from 73.7 in 1931 to the provisional rate of 66.7 in 1935," Dr. Abercrombie declared.

In describing the activities of the tuberculosis control division, the health director pointed out that during the year 13,503 X-rays were made by a single X-ray unit, an increase over the year 1934 of 2,808.

"This immense amount of work was made possible not only by the federal nursing service, but especially by the splendid co-operation of the medical profession which has given generously of medical care. Many civic organizations, county officials, and individuals have given much more than is asked to pay the 50-cent fee might be X-rayed, or that food or other assistance might be provided," Dr. Abercrombie said. In addition, revenue from tuberculosis seal sales has been utilized in caring for indigent cases. The Phi Mu fraternity contributed $1,500 to this work.

Pursuing the past year's tuberculosis control division has continued operation of the field unit, holding tuberculosis X-ray clinics throughout the various counties of the state at six-month intervals. The tuberculosis field nursing follow-up work has been augmented through a plan permitting the federal child hygiene nurses to take over a large part of the follow-up on diagnosed cases of tuberculosis.

Closer Supervision.
"This change," Dr. Abercrombie declared, "has resulted in closer supervision of cases in the 138 counties served by the 96 child hygiene nurses and the 10 tuberculosis nurses. Most of the clinic organization work and a large part of the follow-up in these counties has been performed by the 10 tuberculosis nurses."

Something of the importance of the work of the tuberculosis control division is seen, Dr. Abercrombie pointed out, when the fact is recalled that 1,717 deaths occurred in Georgia of tuberculosis during 1935. This is a decrease of 3.9 per cent over the total of 1,772 recorded for 1934.

Competition with units which have the advantage of training on the water.

The Atlanta naval armory, completed last year, is one of the best equipped in the country for the instruction of destroyer crews. It contains facilities for conducting gunnery practice, engine room operations and all kinds of routine and emergency drills.

Splendid Equipment.
The full-size destroyer bridge offers an opportunity for carrying out a complete battle problem simulating an attack on an enemy ship. From the standpoint of spectator interest this is the highlight of the annual inspection.

The battalion is commanded by Lieutenant Harry P. Dobbs with Lieutenant W. B. Tucker as adjutant. Each of the two divisions has 56 enlisted men of the fleet reserve. Lieutenants W. C. Wroe and M. R. Salinger are the division commanders and Lieutenant Frank R. Walker, U. S. N., stationed at Georgia Tech, acts as inspector-instructor.

Following the inspection, in the afternoon, the battalion officers will entertain the board at dinner at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

"HOBBY FAIR" OFFERED BY O'KEEFE SCHOOL
The Hobby Fair, annual presentation of the O'Keefe Junior High school, will be held at the school from 4 to 10 o'clock Friday, March 20. The affair, originated several years ago at the school, has as its purpose the raising of money to defray incidental expenses of the institution and the encouragement of hobbies.

Under the direction of Mrs. Pete Walton such hobbies as wood and metal work, airplanes and ships, miniature modern homes, pets, stamp and coin collections, manuscripts and scrapbooks, Red Cross, Camp Fire and Girl Reserves activities, art, table displays, hobbies of the teachers, marionettes, magic and natural science are conducted.

Featured at the fair will be the fourth annual production of the O'Keefe Follies under the direction of William E. Layton, of the social science department. At the last show beginning at 9 o'clock will be the crowning of "Pat and Patricia," two popular students elected by the student body. Pat will be George Irwin, son of Mrs. E. B. Irwin, 791 Myrtle street, and Patricia will be Audrey Weeks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Weeks, 335 Fifth street.

BUS SERVICE

For a New Section

Beginning Sunday morning, March 15, a fleet of new buses will replace street cars on the Pine-Cooper line, and the north end of the route will be extended to provide transportation service to the Forrest Road section, which has never before had convenient facilities.

From town, northbound, the bus route will follow the old street car line to Angier avenue and Parkway drive. From that point, the buses will proceed on Angier avenue to Glen Iris drive, on Glen Iris drive to Forrest road, and on Forrest road to North avenue. The buses will loop back by way of North avenue, Linwood avenue and Forrest road, returning to town over the same routing in reverse order. There will be no change in routing on the Cooper street end of the line.

The new service will be provided by six new motor buses of the most modern design, equipped with every device for riding comfort and safety.

PUBLIC MASONIC RITES TO BE HELD FOR DEAD

Lodge of Sorrow Will Pay Tribute to Members Who Died in 1935.

A public lodge of sorrow, ancient traditional Masonic ceremony in memory of the dead of the craft, will be held by the combined Masonic lodges of Fulton and DeKalb counties in the Scottish Rite hall of the Masonic temple, Peachtree and Cain streets, at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

The rite, practiced for centuries in Masonic assemblies only, is to be open to the public for the first time in this section when honor will be paid to the memory of Masons in the jurisdiction who have died during the past year.

The families of the deceased Masons will be the guests of honor.

The meeting will be under the auspices of the Masonic Service Association of Fulton and DeKalb counties, of which G. Starr Peck is president.

The traditional music for the ceremony will be provided by the Scottish Rite choir, a group of male voices specially trained for the purpose under the direction of Joseph Ragan, organist. The memorial address will be delivered by the Rev. Farley Baum, past master of Capitol View lodge of Atlanta.

The ceremonial stations about the catafalque will be occupied by the masters of the various bodies of the craft in the two counties, including G. Starr Peck, Palestine lodge, worshipful master; Jack D. Weinkle, Fulton lodge, senior warden; Dr. F. C. Jones, Morningstar lodge, junior warden; Julian Van Hodges, Georgia lodge, chaplain; Nelson Crist, secretary; B. M. Cross, Fairburn lodge, treasurer; Larkin D. Cathcart, Gate City lodge, senior deacon; J. W. Little, Battle Hill lodge, junior deacon; Guy O. Guest, Joseph C. Greenfield lodge, senior steward; Clifford C. Groover, Bolton lodge, junior steward; K. L. Vandiver, Pantherville lodge, Tyler.

FORMER ATLANTA MAN DIES IN LOS ANGELES
Isadore Chertok, former Atlanta businessman, died Tuesday at his home in Los Angeles, where he had lived for the past ten years.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Annie Rouglin, a sister of Dr. Louis C. Rouglin, of Atlanta; a son, Jack Chertok, motion picture executive, and two daughters, Mrs. Harry Cohen and Miss Esther Chertok, all natives of Atlanta.

Funeral services and burial were held Wednesday in Los Angeles.

GEORGIA'S MOST CONTENTED HOMES
Georgia's most contented homes today are those which are making wise and far-sighted increase in their use of electric service, homes that are using electric service more and more to brighten their days, lighten their tasks and add to the smooth efficiency of home life in general.

Here is an investment that pays immediate returns!

Every hour from which electricity can remove household jobs that once were burdensome is one hour less for acquiring wrinkles of worry and toil—sixty minutes added to the joy of life as it should be lived—thirty-six hundred extra seconds to devote to recreation, relaxation, civic, religious or cultural activity, getting acquainted with the family and neighbors—an extra hour to use as you WANT to use it!

Georgia homes—literally by the thousands!—are finding out the truth of this every day that passes. Georgia ranks high in the nation in use of electric service in the home and is climbing higher all the time. Georgians know how to LIVE and are proving it.

Is YOUR home getting all it deserves, all it CAN get, cheaply and easily, from the liberal stock of comfort and convenience held out to you by electric service? Enthusiastic interest, throughout the state, in this company's $10,000 Home Town Electrical Contest is eloquent proof that Georgians are assuring themselves of electricity's benefits.

Prizes in the Home Town Electrical Contest are awarded to the towns themselves—not to individuals—and are to be used only for civic, charitable or educational purposes decided upon by the town's citizens.

STANDINGS OF ALL TOWNS—MARCH 1, 1936

Below are the fourth month's standings of all towns in the contest up through February 29 in their competition for the 18 Group Prizes. Contest points are given on the basis of ONE point for each kilowatt hour of average kilowatt hour consumption per residential customer, plus TEN points for each kilowatt hour of increase.

Group "A" Towns—(Towns having more than 400 residential electric customers)

Group "B" Towns—(Towns having from 200 to 400 residential electric customers)

Group "C" Towns—(Towns having from 100 to 200 residential electric customers)

Group "D" Towns—(Towns having from 25 to 100 residential electric customers)

Group "E" Towns—(Towns having from 10 to 25 residential electric customers)

Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra Mirrors Nation's Musical Growth

The Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra to present works of not only contemporary European composers, but also those of American musicians, and this custom has been rich fruit under the baton of Leopold Stokowski, who has guided the immortal destiny of the Philadelphia orchestra for the past 22 years.

The seeds that the early conductors planted, Stokowski has brought to a perfect flowering.

Seldom has any musical event presented in Atlanta attracted such widespread interest as the forthcoming appearance of this magnificent symphonic organization and its brilliant leader, neither of which have ever reached this section. A capacity audience will be assured long before the date of the concert.

The program to be given here includes "Symphony No. 5 in E minor," Tchaikovsky; "Fiesta A Sevilla," Albeniz; "La Cathedrale Engloutie," Debussy, and love music from "Tristan and Isolde," Wagner.

SEEKS MORE BUSINESS.

"How was the hunting season up this way?" he asked, cutting a thin sliver of tobacco and inserting it in his cheek. "Very successful. Except that nearly everyone up this way went down your way for their hunting."

"Did you hear about that dog of mine?" he asked. And then we took chairs. I knew he had me.

"You remember about three years ago I told you about that pointer of mine. The one that never made a false point?"

"He's the one, you remember, that pointed that rattlesnake at the risk of his life. That was the day I was out hunting and hadn't found a single bird. There just weren't any birds."

"We came to a little clearing which looked a little birdy. But there weren't any birds. This dog of mine cast about there and finally came to a point. I walked in there and he was pointing the biggest rattlesnake I ever saw. It was a monster."

"I called that fool dog and he wouldn't move. I thought maybe he was charmed so I just up and let go, despite the fact there wasn't much room. I fired both barrels at once and I blew that snake's head off and he was whipping around on the ground."

"That dog just stood there on point. Every time that snake would whip around in its death struggles that dog would turn and hold his point. He wouldn't leave."

"Finally, when he wouldn't be called off, I went up for another look. I saw that snake looked all stuffed and when I investigated I found it had eaten a covey of five birds. That dog was pointing that covey and he wasn't going to miss."

THAT'S DOG'S PUP.

"A very interesting story. But I really must be going. There's a football practice at Georgia Tech and I have got to be there for the—"

"Keep your seat," he said firmly, "I told that as an introduction. That dog of mine died a year ago but what I am leading up to is a story about one of his pups."

"One of his pups?" I said weakly.

"Yes, one of his pups. Now, there is a dog that takes after his daddy. Liver spotted and white and a real bird dog. He takes up where his daddy left off."

"That football practice," I said, "is—"

"Won't take but a moment," he said, "cutting off another thin sliver of tobacco. Won't take but a minute."

"I got awfully fond of this dog and he lived up to anything and everything I thought of him. He was just a derby last year and I was getting him ready for the trials. He hadn't made a false point all year."

"And the night I went home with him lost forever I couldn't hardly sleep."

"It's too bad you lost him," I said, "and now, really—"

"It was this way," he said. "We were out hunting in that dry spell we had down in south Georgia just before the season ended. The birds were close in around the lakes down there to get water."

"A covey got up and I swung left and fired. The bird fell well out in the lake. Well, sir, before I could say a word that dog of mine had leaped right into the lake and started swimming. He swam out there about 200 yards and disappeared in some lilies that were growing pretty thick out there. I couldn't see him at all."

"I didn't worry for a while and then I began to worry plenty. It's pretty difficult to swim out of those lilies and it was getting late. I called him and I called him. And then I started firing my gun. I thought sure that would bring him. But it didn't. I waited there until dark and that dog didn't show up at all. I finally went on home and tried to forget about it. I got out that jug of mine that I keep behind that door there in the kitchen and I sat with it for a while, but it didn't help any. I was all broken up."

BUT THE NEXT MORNING.

"I don't blame you," I said, "it's pretty tough to lose a good dog. The next time you are in town give me a ring and we'll—"

"It was pretty bad," he said. "And it was worse the next morning. I got up early and I lit the fire in the kitchen stove and I put the coffee on to boil. I thought maybe I'd try to eat a little breakfast, although I'll tell you now my heart wasn't in it. I didn't have any appetite."

"I was just sitting there waiting for the coffee to boil when I heard a scratching at the door. I thought it was the wind at first. But then I heard it again and I got up and went to the door and opened it."

"And there was your dog," I said, "that's great."

"How did you know?" he asked? "Yes sir, it was him. But what made it funny was that he was still wet and he looked awfully tired and worn out."

"And he had a big eight-pound bass in his mouth."

"A bass in his mouth?"

"Yes, sir, an eight-pound bass. That dog was so tired he could hardly walk. But he came in and put that bass down at my feet and then he went to sleep under the stove."

"Well, I figured it was mighty nice of him. He hadn't got that bird but he had brought home a bass. My appetite was fine again and so I started in cleaning that bass for my breakfast. And I'd made up my mind that dog would get the biggest piece, too."

"I took out my knife and I ripped that bass open and I got the shock of my life. Inside that bass was that bird I had killed out over the lake."

"I tried to get up but he pushed me down."

"I understood it all in a flash," he said. "That dog had seen the bass that got that bird when it fell. Now there are thousands of bass in that lake and when dark came on he hadn't been able to find the one that got the bird."

"But you know how that strain of dogs it, and this dog was just like his daddy. He stayed out there all night treading water and when it got daylight, he started diving and kept it up until he got that bass. And then he brought it home."

I shook off his arm and got up.

"Oh, you needn't look so solemn," he said. "You know I'm telling the truth. You come down to see me next fall and I'll prove it. I'll show you the very dog that did it."

So, I went on out to Mr. Alexander's spring football game.

THE CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY, MARCH 18, 1934.

These four pitchers are expected to be the mainstays of the Atlanta pitching staff in the coming season. They were photographed by George Cornett, Constitution cameraman, in an informal conference at the Cracker camp, at Gulfport, Miss. Left to right: Bud Thomas, Jim Lindsey, Bill Schmidt and Bobby Durham. All are righthanders and all won their share of victories in the pennant-winning campaign of last season. To these will be added one veteran pitcher and the staff will be completed. The team plays Bogalusa in an exhibition today.

Dillon and Martin Win Bowling Title

Score of 1,232 Captures Fourth Annual Constitution Doubles Duckpin Tournament.

By Morris Siegel.

Prater Dillon and Ken Martin, two members of the First Methodist church Sunday school bowling team, Saturday night captured The Constitution's fourth annual bowling tournament at the Bowling Center with a score of 1,232 for the five games.

In the women's division, Mrs. Jimmy Warrington and Mrs. Luther Tiedeman took first place with a composite score of 1,050.

The tournament, boasting an entry of 115 teams (230 bowlers) was the largest one-day pin event in the history of the city's bowling activities.

Dillon and Martin, only average bowlers and left-handed at that, assumed an early lead which withstood the assaults of others throughout the meet. The two were given an added handicap of 150 pins which made their victory possible.

Earlier in the evening Miss Mary Pearson and Miss Lucy Hughes had posted a mark of 1,025 in their divisions, which it seemed would be good enough to win for them. But Mrs. Warrington, on the eighth and ninth frames of the last game, put over a double strike to make a certain defeat a sure victory.

Miss Pearson and Miss Hughes were second in the women's division with a score of 1,025.

Walter Lawson and George McKay, winners of the 1933 tournament, fell by the wayside early and finished way down the list with 1,123.

L. Richardson and F. Winburn captured second honors in the men's division with 1,216.

The alleys were taxed to capacity throughout the day, but through the skillful and efficient management of Ed Plant, the tournament was carried on flawlessly.

The winners in each division were presented with gold medals by Ralph McGill, sports editor of The Constitution.

GULFPORT, Miss., March 14.—

Alton Nixon, one of the three Carrollton, Ga., sandlotters trying out for the Cracker club, can take it. O. D. (Lefty) Huey, of Bessemer, Ala., was pitching during batting practice. Nixon was at bat. He's a left-handed hitter. Huey lost a wild pitch and it caught Nixon square in the stomach. The Carrollton youngster stepped back, bent slightly over and then returned to the plate for the rest of his licks. He didn't even rub the spot where the ball hit. This show of spirit impressed everybody in camp.

Sheriff Dave Harris, bent on a bit of child's play, stooped behind Nix Lipscomb while another comedy-minded player gave the Cracker second baseman a push. Lipscomb hit squarely on the back of his head. He didn't complain about being the victim of the prank, but he declared he saw no reason for double teaming when a light push would have served the purpose as tired as he was.

Alex Hooks has the answer for all the players who miss a ball at bat or barely escape being dusted off. "Let that be a lesson to you," yells Good Kid gaily. Hooks also says there is a standing reward for any infielder who can hit his dogs with a throw. He really can shift those feet around.

There's always meat on the table when Mrs. Eddie Moore goes crabbing on one of the near-by piers. She came in the other day with a hamper bulging with prospective crab meat. A few of the players ate their fill after they were prepared.

It seems that a few slugs have been discovered in the games of chance in the hotel where the Crackers are stopping. Jim Lindsey heard about it and remarked, "Why be so considerate as to offer a slug to a machine that has no feeling?"

Harry Embury, of Newman, who got off to a slow start because of illness, is developing into a likely prospect. He is a promising catcher and hits the ball hard from the portside. Bill Casey, of Ozark, Ala., is another fine looking

Lindsey Drops 2 Tilts, Hurling Only 1-3 Inning

Cracker Relief Ace Relates Hard Luck Tale While With Milwaukee Club.

By Jack Troy.

GULFPORT, Miss., March 14.—Big Jim Lindsey, the village cut-up, holds a most unique record in the American association. Lindsey pitched one-third of an inning for Milwaukee against Columbus and lost a double-header.

It happened like this: Jim had been notified he was to pitch the second game and was sitting on the bench cold when the manager signaled for him to go in as a relief pitcher in the ninth inning of the first game with three men on, one out and the score tied.

Lindsey says he got the first batter, a pinch-hitter, but he thinks he must have swallowed the next pitch because he hasn't seen it since. That home run over the center-field fence settled the issue right there.

Well, the manager addressed Lindsey and allowed as how he had better be hot for the second game, because he was going in there and pitch.

Columbus scored five runs in the first inning with none out. Big Jim leaped to the showers. And so that is how Jim Lindsey, in one-third of an inning, lost a double-header.

The ball players do not have to attend picture shows here for amusement. They simply sit in the hotel lobby and listen to Lindsey. He could make a man with two broken legs and the gout laugh until he had hysterics.

LIKES ROOKIES. Big Jim is a big hand with rookie pitchers. He helps them out considerably. In fact, he will devote hours to teaching them how to pitch. But he kids them along, too.

For instance, he is rooming with Wilbur Cook, the big, fine-looking young prospect from Senola, Ga. Cook asked the other day, "Mr. Lindsey, how do you throw your curve ball?"

"Well," responded Jim, "I have been throwing it for 16 years and have not had any complaints from the batters yet. By the way, Mr. Cook, how

CHAMPIONS OPEN SPRING WARFARE THIS AFTERNOON

Three Carrollton Boys Among Released; Are Headed for Farms.

By Jack Troy.

GULFPORT, Miss., March 14.—Four Georgia boys, including the three young rookies from Carrollton, were cut from the Cracker squad today and will be sent to farm teams for seasoning.

The three former members of the Carrollton Farmers, final in last year in the eastern division of the American Legion sandlot tournament, will be sent to Moultrie, where they are managed by Grant Gillis, former Alabama star. They are Carlos Todd and Charles Roberts, infielders, and Alton Nixon, outfielder.

The other player is J. W. Stevens, an outfielder, from Cedartown. Stevens will go to Columbia, the other Cracker farm, in the Sally league.

The quartet will return home and await the opening of practice of their prospective teams. Moultrie begins work around April 1. The starting date of Columbia is thought to be about the same time.

ANDERSON GONE. The Cracker squad is now reduced to 30 players. William Anderson, right-handed pitcher who was cut from the squad yesterday, started back to St. Joseph in the Western association today.

The Crackers had Anderson on option and gave him a thorough trial. He would not have been of any assistance either to the Crackers or their farm clubs, however.

Manager Eddie Moore's merry men are ready for the opening exhibition game of the season tomorrow. They will square off against Bogalusa's Lumberjacks at 2:30 o'clock in the local park.

Two full teams will be used in the opener. And three, or maybe four rookie pitchers will go out to the firing line.

Cracker regulars will start against Bogalusa and may play as many as five innings. Then Manager Moore will substitute an entire second-string lineup.

ONE OF ROOKIES. The starting pitcher will come from among Wilbur Cook, of Senola; Almon Williams, of Columbus, Ga.; and Chester Long, of Batesville, Miss. All three are big right-handers. Ralph West, of Roberts, may see some mound action.

The second team will include, in the batting order, Gerald McQuig, center; Chicken Prince, third; Bill Casey, first; Lloyd Javet, second; Stanley Bach, left; O. B. Whitaker, right; Jim Galvin, catcher; and Wayne Black, short. The ninth position is reserved for the pitcher.

The regular Cracker infield has come fast in a series of practices. Hill, Chatham, Lipscomb and Hooks are going great.

And the Crackers are beginning to pound the baseball. They were like so many siege guns up at the plate again today. Hooks slapped a couple down the left field line that would have been good for three bases in any big park.

Lipscomb, Chatham, Hill, Harris, Hamel, Richards, Brown, McQuig, Bach and Javet all seem to have found their eye.

Bobby Durham's curve remains the toughest to hit. He seems to have advanced a bit faster than the rest. And he bears down on every pitch.

A most pleasing thing is the fact that Bill Schmidt's salter is working again. He didn't have it last year when his arm sort of went back on him. But he has all kinds of stuff this spring, including that fast ball which sails just before it reaches the plate.

Manager Eddie Moore came up against Schmitt today and missed one of his salters at least half a foot. Big Jim Lindsey, who may take his regular turn instead of working as relief pitcher, is in much better shape than he was at this time last year.

TRAINS HARD. Big Jim feels he has at least two more years of good baseball left, and he is anticipating a big year. He has been training as hard as the youngest rookie. Lindsey said today he believed he could step out in the big leagues again, another couple of weeks' practice. Quiet Bud Thomas is almost ready to start the season now in so far as conditioning is concerned. The Davis cup match with Mexico which the United States will play April 10, 11 and 12 in Houston, Texas.

With Grant, Budge, Allison, Mako and Van Ryn, the 1934 squad picked by the Davis cup committee in Houston to play the Mexicans, the field of the Atlanta invitational would not be what the tournament committee desires it to be without their presence.

According to information received last night from Z. A. Rice, recently elected secretary-treasurer of the Atlanta Lawn Tennis Association, Reginald Fleet, chairman of the advisory committee, has written "The Greenbrier, at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., asking them to move the date of their tournament from April 20 up to April 27, in order that the Atlanta date will not conflict."

Regardless though, the tournament will host a strong field, with Arthur

2,000 Request Tickets For Cracker Opener

GULFPORT, Miss., March 14.—President Earl Mann, who returned to camp late last night following his visit to Atlanta, said interest of fans in the Gate City was approaching the red-hot stage.

Already more than 2,000 requests for opening day tickets have been received at the office on Ponce de Leon.

The opening day attendance goal of the Crackers is 25,000. Such an attendance would shatter any previous Southern league record. There will be seating capacity for 20,000 fans, and the other 5,000 could be accommodated.

President Mann was highly pleased with progress being made on park improvements at Ponce de Leon.

Crackers Favored To Repeat in 1936

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 14.—(AP)—In four weeks from this sunny Saturday afternoon the Southern association inaugurates the mad scramble for the 1936 pennant.

Atlanta's Crackers, in the role of defending champions, have been selected to repeat, despite general improvement of the other seven clubs.

At this distant point, New Orleans, Memphis and Nashville are ranked as the most serious threats to the Crackers' title.

Chattanooga and Birmingham are dangerous contenders.

The season opens on April 11 with Chattanooga at Atlanta, Birmingham at New Orleans, Knoxville at Nashville and Little Rock at Memphis.

The teams line up the same way for games April 12. Monday is an off-day and then they reverse their sites for three-game series April 14, 15 and 16.

Atlanta finished ahead of New Orleans' Pelicans last year by six games, survived the Shagbushes play-off to win the pennant and then lost to Oklahoma City in the Dixie series.

Many changes have taken place since last season. The association's ranking has been increased to Class

Briggs' Bonus Offer for Third Straight Win Is Formally Withdrawn

LEAGUE RULES OFFER IS UNFAIR TO OTHER CLUBS

Tiger Observers See Reward for Pennant Despite Announcement.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 14.—(AP)—Walter O. Briggs' offer of a fat bonus for a third straight Detroit American league championship was formally withdrawn today, but training camp observers saw the flicker of a wink behind the announcement.

Hardly had the wealthy owner's inducement for extra efforts by his players become known before protests developed, led by a flat statement from William Harbridge, league president, that the bonus would be "detrimental to baseball."

Harbridge, at Orlando, held a long-distance telephone conversation with Briggs last night and the club president, through Manager Mickey Cochran, issued the following statement today:

"Since the announcement of the offer to the members of the Detroit team of a bonus for winning the 1936 American league championship I have learned that the giving of such bonus is expressly prohibited by the major league rules."

"Therefore, of course, the offer will have to be, and is withdrawn, as the Detroit club certainly has no purpose to operate in violation of rules to which it and all its competitors are subject."

"I can only add that upon reflection I appreciate and understand perfectly the justice of the rule and its necessity for the protection and welfare of the game."

The amount of the offer was not divulged, but it was understood to be in the neighborhood of $50,000. The announcement with which the withdrawal was received at the Tiger training camp here gave credence to reports another pennant would bring ripe rewards, without any announcement to stir envy among players of other clubs.

Harbridge's belief the bonus would be detrimental was stated by Clark Griffith, Washington Senators' president.

"The plan would put clubs of lesser financial resources than Detroit at a disadvantage," was Griffith's explanation.

The views of Judge Keneaw Mountain Landis, baseball's high commissioner, were expressed several years ago when Tom Yawkey, millionaire Boston sportsman, took over the Red Sox.

Judge Landis would not approve Yawkey's offer of a pennant bonus, but said it would be satisfactory for the latter to offer extra compensation for his players' efforts to finish second, third or fourth.

ATLANTA BOXERS LEAVE FOR MEET

Eight boxers of the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. boxing team left here this morning to compete in the Southeastern A. A. U. tournament to be held in Memphis all of next week.

Other cities that will be represented are: Memphis, Little Rock, Athens, Ala., Pensacola, Fla., a team with seven southeastern golden gloves champions; Nashville, Port Bennett and Birmingham.

Men representing the "Y" are: Joe Abo, 112-pound ace and boxing star; Tony West, 112-pound state golden glove champion; Spencer Boggs, runner-up in the 118-pound division of the state golden glove tournament; Bob Dillard, twice 126-pound state golden glove champ; Glenn Lawson, who was defeated by Mickey Badsky for the championship in the welterweight division of the state golden glove tournament; Jimmy Hearn, former champion of the Georgia Tech ring team; and Warren Wilson, ace of the Tech High boxing team and twice champion in the middleweight division of the state golden glove matches; Bruce Sater, runner-up in the state tournament.

Winners of first place in this tournament will go to the national tournament for Olympic trials in Cleveland, Ohio.

WOMEN'S MEET OPENS TUESDAY

Opening rounds in the Atlanta Women's Golf Association tournament schedule will be played Tuesday at 9 o'clock on the Druid Hills course in a one-day medal play affair. It will be followed by regular Tuesday tournaments, with the first week in each month scheduled for East Lake, the second at Capitol City, the third at Druid Hills and the fourth at Ansley Park.

Every old member of the association is urged to be host to a new player in the opening tournament.

The first big tournament is scheduled for April 15 in a three-day medal play and will be followed by the annual Maier & Berkele.

Hams To Be Offered Skeet Shoot Victors

Officials of the West End Gun Club announce that Sunday's program will offer hams to the winners in divisions one and two.

The ham shoot is the outstanding skeet event of the month, attracting shooters and spectators as well. The 50-bird skeet program will get under way at 9 a. m. and continue until nightfall.

A feature of the afternoon program will be a competitive team race. Shooters will be divided into teams which will be selected by the captains. Seating arrangements have been made for spectators. An invitation is extended to anyone interested.

GAME OFFICIALS TO GATHER HERE IN DIXIE CONFAB

Southern Commissioner and Federal Authorities Meet March 27.

Atlanta will play host on March 27 and 28 to one of the most representative gatherings of game officials ever held in the south, according to Zach D. Cravey, Georgia's commissioner of game and fish.

Plans were completed Saturday by telephone between Commissioner Cravey and Stanley P. Young, of Washington, who is in charge of the division of game management of the Bureau of Biological Survey, for the conference between southern commissioners and federal authorities on seasons and regulations of migratory birds.

Commissioner Cravey has long advocated the necessity of special regulations governing seasons in the southern states.

Chief Gabrielson, of the Biological Survey, together with Mr. Young will be the federal representatives and the southern commissioners invited to attend include Tennessee's director of conservation, Damon Headen; Louisiana's commissioner of conservation, Robert Maestri; Chief Game Warden, A. Richardson, of South Carolina; George W. Davis, commissioner of conservation for Florida; Director of Conservation Hunter Kimball, Mississippi; North Carolina's commissioner of game and inland fisheries, J. D. Chalk; Virginia's chairman of the commission of game and inland fisheries, Carl H. Nolting; and L. T. Quinn, Alabama's commissioner of game and fish.

Mr. Quinn is president of the Southern Association of Game and Fish Commissioners in addition to being a vice president of the General Wild Life Federation.

Plans are expected to mature from this conference whereby all state and federal regulations on game and fish will coincide. In past seasons, a number of various regulations have caused considerable confusion among the sportsmen, particularly the dove season which one of the most important questions to be discussed at this conference. All interested parties are invited to attend.

"I feel that complete co-operation between all agencies concerned," states Commissioner Cravey, "will result in the sportsman taking a greater interest in our conservation work, which will do much toward assuring a successful wild life program."

MAJOR SCOTT FORMS LOOPS

Three baseball leagues are in the process of formation by Trammell Scott, and meetings will be held this week to finish organizing. On Wednesday night the Scott League will meet and all teams desiring to play Sunday ball will meet on Friday night.

Ernest Tomlinson was elected president of the Scott league at the meeting last week, and T. H. Buehler, of Southern Railway, was made secretary. There is still a vacancy to be filled in this league.

All teams in the neighborhood of Atlanta desiring to get into a suburban league are asked to get in touch with Major Scott. He has three teams desiring to play in that sort of a league, and he can use three more in order to complete the league.

Merrill Is Winner In Ormond Finals

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., March 14.—(AP)—Isaac Lincoln (Ike) Merrill, of Camden, Maine, defeated Henry W. Haynes, of Lake Placid, N. Y., 4 and 3 in the finals of the Ormond Beach golf championship today.

set. The vaunted Azucar, Santa Anita winner of a year ago, ran last most of the day.

The winner, a 5 1-2 to 1 closing price horse, broke a track record for the 1 1-8 miles by 1-5 of a second, running in 4:43.1.

The record was set in 1931 by Lister, Tick On and Thursday, 5 to 2, split choice favorites at post time, ran second and third, respectively.

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP)—E. F. Seagram's Sablin, winner of four straight races before finishing third in the Widener challenge cup at Hialeah park, regained his winning stride today when he whipped five other steady-going campaigners in the one and one-sixteenth miles of the Orange Blossom handicap at Tropical park.

Tommy Malley brought the four-year-old gelded son of Display to the wire a neck in front of Mrs. Emilio Denemack's Corinto to pay $520. Corinto, under a vigorous whipplashing, was an easy second, a length and a half clear of Mrs. G. C. Winfrey's Ward-in-Chancery.

Sablin, setting the pace for the greater part of the race, covered the route in 1:43 2-5, only two-fifths of a second slower than Sabula's track record. That the racing strip was exceptionally fast was evidenced in the Atlantic City handicap, when A. G. Tarn's three-year-old Rushaway established a new track record of 1:36 3-5 for one mile. The time clipped three-fifths of a second off Sea Fox's old mark.

Billy Jones, owned by T. C. Worden, of Chicago, chalked up his fifth straight victory in accounting for the mile and one-eighth of the Jim Hogg handicap at Epsom Downs. Given a fine ride by Buddy Hans, the seven-year-old son of Sweep On finished the journey three-quarters of a length in front of H. C. Rumage's Our Count to pay the surprisingly long odds of $11.90 for $2. J. J. Flanagan's Chance View, carrying top weight of 120 pounds and winner of two straight races, was third in the field of eight.

Sir Michael, mud-loving son of Cudgel from A. Guignard's barn, set all the pace and just Ocean by a length in the one and one-sixteenth miles of the Kings Park handicap at the Fair Grounds. After forcing all the pace, Ocean had no trouble beating Woodlander for the place.

F. A. Griffith's Sarada, odds-on favorite when Lynx Eye was scratched, won his second successive race in taking the Arlington Hotel handicap of one and one-sixteenth miles at Oaklawn.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 14.—(AP) Special Agent, 4-year-old brown colt owned by Major A. C. Taylor, of Vancouver, B. C., won the $5,000 added San Francisco handicap at Tanforan track today in a smashing upset.

CARROLL TEAM HAS FINE YEAR

Coach McKay's Five Wins Fourth District Class C Honors.

CARROLLTON, Ga., March 14.—Carroll county has had topnotch basketball teams before but she has never been prouder than she is over the excellent cage record amassed by Roopville High school this season. Playing for the first time as an accredited high school, Roopville went to war with the best that north Georgia had to offer in 27 games and of this number a total of 20 were marked up in the win column.

As a feature of the 1935 season, the team went on to win the western division of the Fourth District Class C Basketball tournament held at Centrahatch after three of their best players were unable to play. The crippled team finally bowed in the east-west finals with Palmer-Stone by a score of 24 to 17.

Coach Ralph L. McKay, of Athens, made good in his first stab at coaching. So good, in fact, did McKay put basketball on the map at Roopville that he has been re-elected for next year.

In Thomas and Proctor, Coach McKay had two fine forwards who each was adept at garnering points. In Barnes and Critcher he had the best defensive combination to show in this section in years, and Cobb at center was a crack floor-man.

In plugging up their 20 victories Roopville had to defeat such strong teams as Canton, Warrick, Nelson, Indian All-Stars from Oklahoma, Villa Rica High, Villa Rica CCC, Mt. Zion, Bowdoin College Freshmen, Buchanan, Franklin, Centralhatchee, Chipley, Hogansville and many others.

Of the seven games Roopville lost, three were to one team and four other clubs were able to win only by narrow scores. Playah, Ala., spilled Roopville three times in close games while Rabburn, Canton, Scottsboro, Ala., and Palmer-Stone managed to cop one each.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 14.—(AP)—Two Bostonians, Dr. George W. Mansfield and Harold Buckminster, today won their way into the final round of the annual seniors' North and South golf tournament here.

Cracker Fans Visit Club

Most of the catching will be done by Gordon Phelps, Lopez's understudy last year. He is not the gifted receiver the Spaniard is, but his harder and will add needed punch.

Raymond Berries, leading catcher of the Pacific Coast league in 1935, and Walter Millies, from Chattanooga, are fighting it out for the second-string berth.

The infield is giving Stengel his biggest headache. Two of the four positions must be filled by youngsters. Hassett will be at first.

Linus Frey at short. Vincent Sherlock, from Indianapolis, likely will get the call at second, with either Jimmy Bucher or Freddy Lindstrom, picked up from the Cubs, at third.

Joe Stripp, holdout third sacker, is not figuring in Stengel's plans. He is not in camp and is not expected. Lindstrom will be used where he best fits. If he doesn't play third, he'll start in one of the outfield berths.

In addition to Stan Bordagaray, the speedy Frenchman; Randy Moore and Danny Taylor, of Louisville, who are battling for outfield jobs are John Cooney, who hit .371 for Indianapolis; Oscar Eckhardt, who had a .386 average with the San Francisco Missions; and Colonel B. Mills from Rochester. Every outfield berth is wide open.

Lindale and Aragon Join N'West League

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., March 14.—Lindale has re-entered the Northwest Georgia Textile league and Aragon has been admitted, making it possible for the circuit to operate as a seven-club organization during the 1936 season which officially opens on April 11.

The seven clubs of the league will play a 36-game schedule, the season closing on August 31. With seven teams in the league, it will be necessary for each team to have an open

Stoefen, Vines, Lott and Bell Play Here Soon

Cream of Pro Stars in Exhibition Matches March 29.

Ellsworth Vines, Berkeley Bell, Lester Stoefen and George Lott Jr., the cream of the professional tennis stars, will play singles and doubles exhibitions Sunday afternoon, March 29, at the old Biltmore Club course on Fourth and Peachtree streets.

Two singles and one double match match are on the schedule, with Vines, the national champion in 1931 and 1932, playing Stoefen, and Lott, runner-up to Tilden in the American professional championship, meeting Bell, the newest recruit to the professional ranks, in the singles. Vines and Bell will play Stoefen and Lott in the doubles exhibition.

It will be the first of two exceptional tennis exhibitions to be staged here this spring and will be followed in April by Bill Tilden and his troupe.

Particular attention will be centered about the doubles match as it brings together that famous combination of Lott and Stoefen, who were former world's amateur doubles champions, and the national doubles champions, the Davis Cup doubles champions, and the present American professional doubles champions. It's a great doubles combination and one that has won hundreds and hundreds of matches, in both amateur and professional ranks.

Vines and Bell, who have teamed together since Bell joined the pro ranks, have come along fast and are no set-ups even for that well-known combination of Stoefen and Lott.

There will be plenty to watch in the singles matches, for Vines has added plenty of deception to his game. Both Lott and Bell are pastmasters at showmanship on the courts, and both have their particular style of play. Bell still clings to his drop shots and his service has more top spin on it than most other serves.

Dodgers Are Classed Number 1 Mystery Club

Casey Stengel Admits He's in Dark; Many Youngsters Counted On.

By Eddie Brietz.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 14.—(AP)—Those merry Brooklyn Dodgers stand out as the year's No. 1 mystery team in the National league.

As to whether they'll pace the second division again, sink to the lowly level of the Phillies and Boston Bees, or even edge into the upper bracket, one guess is as good as another.

Maestro Casey Stengel is as much in the dark as anybody. All he knows is he has a flock of ball players down here. He hasn't the faintest idea who'll be where, or why, when the time comes to answer the opening gong.

"We're going to try one of those noble experiments," said Stengel today, "that is, we're going to toss a lot of ivory into the hopper and see what comes out."

First year men hold the key to the situation. While the 1935 Brooklynans are sure to be stronger in some spots, how they'll shape up in others depends entirely on the work of some of the colts.

NEW FACES.

At any rate, Dodger fans are going to see plenty of new faces and miss just as many old favorites.

During the winter Stengel made three big deals, involving 13 players and nearly $800,000 in cash, with the Giants, Bees and Newark Internationals.

Ed Brandt, southpaw, Fred Frankhouse, veteran right-hander and Outfielder Randy Moore, were acquired from Boston in return for Catcher Al Lopez; Pitchers Ray Benge, Johnny Babich and Bobby Reis; Infielder Tony Cuccinello and Outfielder Gene Moore. Sam Leslie, first sacker, went to the Giants for $200,000 and the Dodgers then gave Newark $400,000 for the veteran right-hander, first baseman Johnny McCarthy for Buddy Hassett, one of the best looking first sackers in the minors.

This turnover will enable Stengel to start the race with a veteran pitching staff, fair catching, an uncertain infield and an outer defense that may be very, very good or just the reverse.

Brandt and Frankhouse are figured to be regular starters along with William Watson Clark, another left-hander; George Earnshaw, who is in the best shape of his career, and Van Lingle Mungo, the ace of the staff. The latter still is listed as a holdout but his early signing is regarded as a certainty. Emil Leonard, the slinker ball expert will share the relief duties with the veteran Tom Zachary. Al Butcher and Wayne Osborne, two big right-handers from Galveston and the San Francisco Missions, look best among the youngsters.

Most of the catching will be done by Gordon Phelps, Lopez's understudy last year. He is not the gifted receiver the Spaniard is, but his harder and will add needed punch. Raymond Berries, leading catcher of the Pacific Coast league in 1935, and Walter Millies, from Chattanooga, are fighting it out for the second-string berth.

The infield is giving Stengel his biggest headache. Two of the four positions must be filled by youngsters. Hassett will be at first.

Linus Frey at short. Vincent Sherlock, from Indianapolis, likely will get the call at second, with either Jimmy Bucher or Freddy Lindstrom, picked up from the Cubs, at third.

Joe Stripp, holdout third sacker, is not figuring in Stengel's plans. He is not in camp and is not expected. Lindstrom will be used where he best fits. If he doesn't play third, he'll start in one of the outfield berths.

In addition to Stan Bordagaray, the speedy Frenchman; Randy Moore and Danny Taylor, of Louisville, who are battling for outfield jobs are John Cooney, who hit .371 for Indianapolis; Oscar Eckhardt, who had a .386 average with the San Francisco Missions; and Colonel B. Mills from Rochester. Every outfield berth is wide open.

McAvoy's Hand, Badly Injured, Holds His Fate

By Bob Cavagnaro.

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP)—Jock McAvoy's fistic future was studied with "ifs" today after his 15-round drubbing at the hands of Light Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis.

The lion-hearted Briton was confined to a hotel nursing a badly swollen right hand, a smashed nose and a bruised ear.

A doctor examined the hand this morning and said he doubted it was broken, but Dave Lumsansky, McAvoy's manager, had it X-rayed this afternoon.

"Jock's future depends on the seriousness of that injury," Lumsansky said. "The results of the X-rays won't be known until Monday."

Lumsansky said he started negotiations for a return bout last night after Lewis scored a decisive victory in defense of his world's title.

"Gus Greenlee, Lewis' manager, gave me assurance that his boy would give Jock another chance at the title," said Lumsansky. "The fight probably will be outdoors. But everything depends on the X-rays and Jock's fight with Peterson."

"Naturally Jock was disappointed he didn't win, but he's far from discouraged. He hurt the hand in the second round when he aimed a blow at Lewis' jaw and Lewis ducked and took it on his head. However, we're not offering that or anything else for an all-bi."

When Lewis finished his night's work he joined his father and they went back to Pompton Lakes, N. J., where he trained for the fight. He wasn't available today and James J. Johnston, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, said he does not know of the negro's immediate plans.

ATLANTA PACKARD CO. MARKS 'LADIES' WEEK'

Company Co-operating With Junior League Here To Inaugurate Event.

Men owe women a big debt for the comfort, convenience and ease of handling of today's automobiles, according to George M. Couch, general manager, Atlanta Packard Motors, Inc. Influence women have had in the development of motor cars and the part they play in automobile buying are reasons why Packard has dedicated the week of March 16 as "ladies' week" throughout the country.

"The automobile," said Mr. Couch, "was certainly nothing for a woman to handle back in the first days of the motor car. There was little thought given to comfort and the driving of an early-day horseless carriage was a job not only for a man but a strong man, and one not afraid of soiling his hands with grease or his clothes with mud and dust," Mr. Couch added.

"When early days engineers finally were able to build a machine which would run with a considerable amount of dependability, attention was turned to the comfort of people who rode in them. Passengers received first consideration in this matter of comfort, probably because they were frequently women."

"The engineer had recognized that women were going to drive automobiles when he began working on the ease of handling a car," said Mr. Couch. "As compared with automobiles of today those of just a few years ago steered like trucks. Controls have all been simplified and made easier of operation."

"It was only a short time ago that a considerable amount of skill was involved in starting the engine, because of fine adjustments that had to be made with mutually operated choke levels. This is taken care of automatically now."

"Engine power has been increased greatly and were it not for the consideration the engineers have given to the women drivers we probably would not have today the vacuum operated clutches such as are found on the big 175-horsepower Packard Twelve or the semi-centrifugal clutch on the Packard One Twenty. Both permit the driver to disengage the clutch with a light touch of the foot."

"Any number of other features of today's cars could be pointed out as for instance the steering wheel, in a Packard, can be easily done with one finger. And in the matter of easy steering it might be pointed out that back in 1899 and 1900 that steering was done with a long shovel handled tiller which frequently whipped the driver out of the car and into the dust when the front wheels gave a quick wobble from striking a rut in the road."

"All of the ease of driving and the luxurious comfort of today's motor cars is something which man appreciates as much as women, for today most men often spend as much time in their motor cars as in their favorite chairs at home. Men might well today doff their hats to the ladies in recognition of the improvements which have been made in all automobiles."

W. C. DENNY SHOWING NEW CORD FRONT DRIVE

Year Goes on Display
Here.

If you've ever wanted to ride in a car that skims over the roughest roads, that seems to amble out all the bumps, and that apparently has all the comforts and conveniences of a Park Avenue penthouse, you should ride in the new Cord car.

Demonstrations of the new Cord are now being made by the W. C. Denny Motors and Mr. Denny has invited the public, whether they are on the market to buy a car or not, to come in and see what a difference scientific engineering has made.

"Of course, not everybody is going to buy a Cord front drive car any more than every woman is going to buy a $300 cocktail gown," Mr. Denny said. "But the car buyer owes it to himself to know about this fundamentally different car, just as the buyer of a cocktail gown wants to know what is new and exclusive. The Cord is so radically different from any other automobile and so far advanced in safety, comfort and performance features that even a driver of the lowest priced car ought to know about the advancements that Cord has made possible."

"For instance the Cord has introduced an entirely new method of getting into an automobile. In a conventional car you have to step up on the running board, then into the car and then you sit down. With a Cord car you simply open the door and sit into the seat as you would in your easy chair at home. When you are in the Cord and seated, you feel that you are a part of the car and that you are not sitting up on top of something. That's because the front and rear seats are on the same level and are built into the frame of the body."

"Again, the gears seem to shift by magic. All the driver has to do is to touch a button and he goes from first to second and from second to third, and out on the highway he is cruising range or fourth speed. It's all so automatic and simple that it is almost unbelievable. When you stand alongside of the car, if you are a normal-sized person, you can look over it and you wonder how five people can get inside, and yet they can ride in it in more comfort and have more room than in the larger conventional automobiles."

"Then those folks who are particular about colors and design will find real enjoyment with the interiors of the new Cord. Every one of these cars has a custom type interior. The seats are soft and luxuriously upholstered. All the interior trim is harmoniously colored to match the outside of the car and to contrast with the upholstery. Every little convenience has been thought of to make riding a pleasure and the instrument panel is almost as intricate as a transport airplane pilot's compartment. When you first look at it, you are almost bewildered by the number of lights and instruments, and yet as you drive the car a few miles, you find that each one of these has a different purpose—a purpose that makes driving so much more easy and pleasant. People who have driven the Cord on long trips tell us that they feel as rested at the end of the trip as when they began."

FIVE BURNED TO DEATH IN AIRPLANE TAKE-OFF

OVALL, Chile, March 14.—(AP)—Five persons were burned to death aboard a National Airline plane today when the tri-motored ship caught fire at the take-off.

The victims were Lieutenant Rolando Sepeda and his bride, whom he had married a few hours earlier; Alvar Cortes, Senora Elena Cortes de Aguilera, and the pilot, Lieutenant Mario Meneses.

Junior League Plans Ladies' Week Here

The Atlanta Junior League is sponsor of Atlanta's first "Ladies' Week" celebration on automobile row. They have planned many interesting features for this occasion and will be in full charge each evening this coming week at the show rooms of the Atlanta Packard Motors, Inc., 370 Peachtree street, N. E. Shown above are officers of the Junior League and George M. Couch, general manager of the company, who have charge of this event. They are, left to right, Mrs. Fritz Orr, Mrs. Everard Richardson, George M. Couch and Mrs. Francis Gilbert.

Steer-Master Equipment Installed Here

A newly organized and completely equipped safety department has just been put into operation at the Sinclair "Merry Go Round," located at the corner of Ponce de Leon avenue and Juniper street. Above, a good view of the Steer-Master equipment for checking and adjusting, steering, front wheel alignment, and wheel and tire balance. This machine is the latest development of the industry for this type check-up, and has been endorsed by engineers throughout the industry. The Merry Go Round is co-operating in the safety movement of Atlanta and offer free check-up on any car brought to them.

Large Crowd Attend Beaudry Meeting Here

Ernest G. Beaudry, popular Atlanta Ford dealer, was host to over a hundred employees and their families last Tuesday night. Moving pictures, a good floor show and refreshments were enjoyed by all. Short talks were given by E. D. Bottom, branch manager for the Ford Motor Company, and Mr. Beaudry. This meeting was a celebration of the million-and-a-half-dollar volume business done by the company in 1933.

PONTIAC PRODUCTION DOUBLED THAT OF '34

Figures Reveal Amazing Increase of One Hundred and One Per Cent.

"One of the most important pieces of news in the 10 years of Pontiac Motor Company is the doubling of both sales and production of Pontiac automobiles in 1933 over 1934," said H. J. Klingler, president and general manager of the company, in reporting the rapid increase in the public acceptance of the company's six and eight-cylinder cars during the last 12 months.

Retail sales in the United States increased from 22,377 units in 1934 to 147,044 in the year just ended, which is a gain of 101.8 per cent. Hundreds of dealers in every part of the country report that their Pontiac business has doubled and tripled.

Pontiac has established records for production and sales in 1933 that have been exceeded only once since its original announcement 10 years ago. Even those figures could have been surpassed, Mr. Klingler is certain, if the company had had the increased manufacturing facilities it possesses today. All through the spring months last year dealers were forced to take cancellations of orders or else could not accept them at all because of the inability to make deliveries.

"Now that the plant capacity has been increased to take care of deliveries promptly this spring and our dealer organization improved materially together with the steadily increasing public acceptance for the product," said Mr. Klingler, "I believe that Pontiac sales in 1934 will equal or pass the 225,000 point, which will mean an all-time mark."

"Already the company has gotten away to a flying start for this year with record-breaking sales of 1936 cars during the last three months of 1935 as a momentum getter. The figures given thus far cover retail sales only. Factory production has made an equally good showing."

Total world production of Pontiac cars in 1935 was 119.6 per cent above the year before with a total of 181,168 cars, compared with 82,496 for 1934.

"Domestic production jumped from 77,218 cars in 1934 to 165,218 in 1935, or an increase of 88.115 units. Pontiac export business for the year of 233.6 per cent with 9,952 cars last year and 2,977 the year before. Canadian business forged ahead 156.4 per cent with a total of 5,900 cars turned out in 1935.

"Pontiac has taken its biggest step forward with marked improvement in every department of the business."

RABBI MARX TO TALK ON 'JEW AND GENTILE'

"Good-Will Between Jew and Gentile" will be the theme of a lecture by Rabbi David Marx at the forum at 11 o'clock this morning in the Jewish temple, 1580 Peachtree road, N. E.

Rabbi Marx will analyze the elements of good will which exists between friendly neighbors in a 30-minute lecture after which there will be a discussion by members of the audience. He invites members of all denominations to attend.

OFFICIALS OF HUDSON IN CONFERENCE HERE

J. W. Goldsmith Host at Annual Meeting With Factory Executives.

A meeting of sales executives of the Hudson Motor Car Company was held here Monday, March 9, with J. W. Goldsmith, president of J. W. Goldsmith, Inc., local distributor of Hudson and Terraplane cars. The meeting was held under the direction of C. G. Beeching, assistant sales manager, and H. F. Whitmore, district manager. It was attended by members of the sales department of the local distributor and by all Hudson and Terraplane dealers in this territory.

Accompanying Mr. Beeching and Mr. Whitmore was C. F. Worfolk, an engineer attached to the sales promotion department, who is famous for his ability as a chassis lecturer. Mr. Worfolk gave an interesting talk on construction of the 1936 Hudsons and Terraplanes, particularly dwelling on the extra performance and long life, safety and economy features which have been built into the cars. The new models incorporate an entirely new front-end construction, known as radial safety control, which results in improved riding, steering, braking and stability. This feature along with many of the other distinguishing points of the car was described.

Mr. Beeching has just completed a nation-wide survey on sales prospects for the coming season and presented a particularly vivid picture of prospects just ahead for the automobile industry in general and the Hudson company in particular. The prosperity of the nation is so closely intertwined with that of the automobile industry that Mr. Beeching's speech will be of intense interest not only to his immediate audience, but also to business leaders in this vicinity.

BUICK SALES BEST SINCE TWENTY-NINE

Over Thirteen Thousand Cars Sold First Two Months.

FLINT, Mich., March 14.—Domestic retail deliveries of Buick motor cars during the first two months of 1936 totaled 13,647 units, the best for this period since 1929 and nearly double the sales of the corresponding period last year. W. F. Hufstader, Buick general sales manager, announced today.

Sales during January totaled 7,066 units as against 3,870 in the first month of last year while the February volume was 6,581 cars as compared with 3,747 in February a year ago. The total for the two months this year compares with 7,617 in the first two months of 1935, a gain of 6,030 units or 79.1 per cent.

A marked upturn in sales was noted during the last nine days of February when almost as many new Buicks were delivered in the hands of owners as were delivered during the first 20 days of the month. Mr. Hufstader said. The executive reported an improved condition in used car stocks with sales of used cars in February substantially exceeding those of the preceding month.

Loose Bridge Work.

CHICAGO.—Two young men held up Michael Lozio. Michael had no money. Annoyed, one hit him. Later Michael felt for his $50 set of bridge tools. It was missing. Unable to find it in a careful search of the vicinity, he appealed to the police and prepared for a soup diet.

Gets Dealership

J. N. Thomas, who is leaving the Atlanta Ford branch to join with the Weatherly Motors, Inc., of Gadsden, Alabama.

POPULAR FORD OFFICIAL JOINS GADSDEN DEALER

J. N. Thomas Joins Retail
Dealership After 11 Years as Factory Official.

Announcement is made by E. D. Bottom, branch manager for the Weatherly Motors, Inc., of Gadsden, Ala., of the appointment of J. N. Thomas, popular Atlanta branch wholesale manager, as an officer of the Weatherly Motors, Inc., of Gadsden, Ala.

Mr. Thomas will take over his new duties immediately, having severed his connections with the Ford organization to take effect March 15. In commenting on this change, Mr. Bottom stated, that while the company naturally hated to lose the services of Mr. Thomas, he thought the Weatherly organization was getting a man that has a thorough knowledge of the duties of a dealer activity.

Mr. Thomas has been with the Atlanta branch organization for the past 11 years. His services have carried him through the entire set-up, he having filled the office as service manager for five years, and has been wholesale manager for the past two years.

The experience he has secured while carrying out the duties of these two offices has given him a knowledge few men acquire covering both service and sales, and his acquisition by the Weatherly Motors gives them a man who can attend his duties knowing the problems of both the owner and dealer.

OLDS OWNERS TO GET 3D SAFETY INSPECTION

Thirty-Five Hundred Dealers
Urge Owners Have Safety Check.

On April 1, Oldsmobile launches its third "points of safety inspection drive" to further enlist the interest of Oldsmobile owners in driving cars that are mechanically safe. The safety drive will continue all through April and May, and safety inspection service will be carried out in the service departments of more than 3,500 Oldsmobile dealers. Safety inspections will not be limited to Oldsmobile owners, but will also be accorded owners of all other makes of cars who are sincerely interested in the cause of safer driving.

"It is our hope," states J. J. Dobbs, general service manager for Oldsmobile, "that at least 300,000 car owners will avail themselves of our dealers' safety inspection during the two months. And we have good reason to believe that we will attain this total. Last fall, more than 60,000 Oldsmobile owners alone participated in Oldsmobile's second safety drive."

"A moment's reflection on the part of all car owners," continued Mr. Dobbs, "will show that unusually good reasons exist for safety car inspection this spring. We are only now emerging from one of the most severe winters in our history. Motor cars everywhere throughout the country, have been put to unusually severe usage. Extremely cold weather, deep snows and icy roads made winter car operation very difficult and subjected cars to severe strains. No doubt there are thousands of cars that require immediate attention, not only to put them in economical operating condition, but in safe operating condition as well."

"To that end, our dealers will make safety inspections of six points that ordinarily are subjected to the most wear and tear: brakes, lights, horn, steering, tires and windshield wiper. Perfect condition of these elements is vital to safer driving in safer cars. The past winter has been hard on all six points, especially brakes and tires. It is equally necessary that lights, steering and windshield wiper be put in good operating condition."

"All Oldsmobile owners will receive written invitations, as well as personal and telephone requests, to avail themselves of our spring safety inspection on these six points. All other motorists are likewise invited to take advantage of this privilege. We are just as much interested in having them drive safe cars as we are in the welfare of our own owners. The inspection will reveal anything wrong and the car owner will be informed as to what should be done to put his car in safe operating condition."

OVER MILLION FORDS SOLD DURING '35

Dealers Outsell Company's Proposed Million-Car Production.

More motorists bought Ford V-8's in 1935 than any other car! This information is according to official figures published in the Automotive Daily News, daily publication of the automobile industry. Proof of the public's confidence in the V-8 car is revealed by the following facts: Sales of Ford V-8 units in the United States totaled 1,065,422 as compared with 677,176 units in 1934, representing the astonishing gain of more than 57.2 per cent!

Ford V-8 sales in the United States were approximately 31.1 per cent of sales by the entire motor car industry, giving Ford a wide lead for the year. Correspondingly, the world record of Ford V-8 unit sales showed a large increase. In 1935 world sales totaled 1,311,927 units, a gain of 51.6 per cent or 446,826 units over 1934's production number, 865,101.

In Canada sales in 1935 almost doubled, jumping from 19,222 in 1934 to 31,620 last year. Not only did North America turn out Ford in 1935, but the rest of the world—from the great cities of South America and Europe to the farthest flung frontiers—felt the quickening pulse of confidence in the Ford product. Sales figures soared from 168,700 in 1934 to 215,305 in 1935.

From these figures it is evident that the popularity of the Ford V-8 is world-wide. Last year was a Ford year. However, the domestic Ford totals reveal that the American people were largely responsible for Henry Ford's first million year since 1930. The sale of passenger cars rose from 538,710 to 861,645 of commercial cars from 55,090 to 90,069; of trucks from 83,370 to 113,258.

Ford V-8 was so overwhelmingly the favorite in 1935 that its total passenger car sale exceeds by more than 200,000 the sum of the total sale of seven cars in the first 10, as computed from listings in the Automotive Daily News. This covers more than half of the total sales of car number three, and the total sales of cars number four through 10.

First month reports for 1936 show that the Ford V-8—improved in many ways, but substantially the same car as in 1935—is setting a sales pace which outstrips that of the corresponding period of last year. It is expected that the present year, with a production schedule calling for 100,000 cars a month, will surpass 1935.

Comeback.
FAIRMONT, Minn.—William Witt, veteran harness oiler, offered proof the horse is replacing the automobile and tractor. He said he oiled 160 sets of harness already this year, compared with a normal annual total of 75.

to severe strains. No doubt there are thousands of cars that require immediate attention, not only to put them in economical operating condition, but in safe operating condition as well."

"To that end, our dealers will make safety inspections of six points that ordinarily are subjected to the most wear and tear: brakes, lights, horn, steering, tires and windshield wiper. Perfect condition of these elements is vital to safer driving in safer cars. The past winter has been hard on all six points, especially brakes and tires. It is equally necessary that lights, steering and windshield wiper be put in good operating condition."

"All Oldsmobile owners will receive written invitations, as well as personal and telephone requests, to avail themselves of our spring safety inspection on these six points. All other motorists are likewise invited to take advantage of this privilege. We are just as much interested in having them drive safe cars as we are in the welfare of our own owners. The inspection will reveal anything wrong and the car owner will be informed as to what should be done to put his car in safe operating condition."

Pay less
if you like... but Expect less

Cadillac craftsmen—school for thirty years in fine-car manufacture—can produce high quality at the lowest cost in America. But they are not miracle men. They cannot produce a La Salle to sell in the low-price field. There are numerous good cars that sell in the lower ranges—but they are built, necessarily, to sell at a price. La Salle cannot compete with these cars in cost—any more than they can compete with La Salle in quality. It is the privilege of any buyer to pay less for his car than La Salle's modest price—but when he pays less, he should expect less.

50 PATROLMEN GUARD WPA SHOW PREMIERE

Planned Demonstration Against 'Red Scene' Broken Up by Arrest, Evictions.

NEW YORK, March 14.—(AP)—The "Living Newspaper," WPA theater project, had its premiere tonight under the eyes of 50 uniformed policemen who broke up a planned demonstration with one arrest and the eviction of two persons from the audience.

The police department assigned the detail to the Biltmore theater upon request of the project's directors, who had been notified of a manifestation planned in protest of a scene sympathetic to Earl Browder, communist party secretary, criticizing the supreme court. This was an incident of the new play, "Triple A Ploughed Under."

James Brown, self-described as WPA actor, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct attempting to enter the theater. John Butler, an ejected actor, was arrested on a charge of "leaving the Star Spangled Banner" during a scene, which showed Wisconsin women starting to attack most truck during a demonstration against high meat prices.

WPA Director Ejected.
Vernon Williams, who said he was a director for a WPA project, was taken out of the theater for being the Browder character. Prior to his arrest, he had been seen in the audience, a man in the rear of the house, shouting "Boo, boo," whereupon police hurried Williams out.

"Louder, Earl," cried a woman in the audience as the distance between the actor and the audience was increased.

Traces Farmer's Plight.
"Triple A Ploughed Under" is an exposition of the plight of the farmer's plight from the war years, through the depression, farm strikes, mortgage foreclosures, drought and the brief life of the AAA.

It presents the farmer as the ultimate victim in the merchandising of his product and the manipulation of prices through speculation, the middleman's profits and decreased markets.

The story attempts to establish that the plight of the jobless in the cities and the farmer's plight are related, a relation in favor of a contented farmer is simultaneously a remedy for the other economically oppressed.

The incident, however, the administration's efforts to help the farmer are for the most part favorable, but at times they are unparaph of the various bureaus.

Scene.
There was one sharp scene intended to show that the sharecroppers of the south benefited not at all by government subsidies, the checks going to the landowners.

The play achieved its greatest dramatic power in scenes of violence, in the uprising of the farmers to wreck milk trucks; in their outer side bidders at farm auctions; in their sullen dissension to the ruling which finally outlawed the strike.

Various public figures were introduced, including Mr. Reno, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, General Hugh S. Duffie, and Chester Davis, administrator of AAA.

The demonstration, the project's officials said, was organized at a meeting late this afternoon at the Federal Theater Veterans' League.

Assemblyman Edwin P. Doyle told a meeting of the Federal Theater Veterans' League earlier in the day, "It is not my purpose to suggest sabotage, but tonight, instead of a tea party I suggest you form a theater party."

Donald Hembree Shot Accidentally While Handling Revolver.
"Sing," says Assemblyman.

"Perhaps it will mean that each and everyone of you will go to the theater tonight and sing the songs of the Americans lift your hearts and voices in the singing of 'The Star-Spangled Banner'."

"And you can keep on singing it and keep on. There is not a law which will stop the singing or recitation of the national anthem."

Willis Browder, state manager, reported to the league "all the tickets have been distributed to communists."

Adolph Pincus, chairman of the veterans' meeting and a company manager on the theater rolls, told the group that his protest about a racial aspersions in the play was ridiculed, but that the protest was eliminated and the aspersions directed to an alien.

The "living newspaper" was conceived as a project to give unemployed actors and writers a livelihood by dramatizing news events.

For first regional director was Elmer Rice, the author, who resigned after superiors ordered the elimination of scenes depicting Benito Mussolini and Emperor Haile Selassie.

Charged Freedom Stifled.
Rice charged his resignation was forced by "the attempt of the United States government to stifle freedom of expression in the organs which it has itself created."

He was succeeded by Morris Watson, who transferred the project to confine itself to domestic news portrayals.

The premiere has several times been delayed. Another drama ruled out was to have portrayed the status of southern sharecroppers.

The Veterans' League was formed a month ago, with the announced intention of purging the WPA projects of asserted radical membership.

The Browder scene was written into the play script only a week ago, the Sup said.

In the scene, the supreme court members are portrayed in silhouette against a projected background of the constitution.

One steps forward as Justice Roberts and delivers a summary of the majority opinion of the AAA. Another robed figure delivers the minority report as coming from Justice Stone.

Excerpts of Speeches.
Then, while the nine figures stand immobile, the league recites national characters, including an actor garbed as former Governor Alfred E. Smith, in comments on the supreme court, taken from their speeches in Washington and elsewhere.

The "triple-A" play ends with a scene showing impoverished farmers standing on one side of the stage and unemployed workers on the other, shouting "We need you."

A platform with a man and a woman in evening dress, representing capital.

A cast of 100 was required for the 22 scenes. The play was designed to interpret the fate of agriculture since 1917.

Browder's is an excerpt from the radio speech he made two weeks ago, a speech that brought pickets of an American League league picketing out of the building where he spoke, and criticisms in Washington and elsewhere.

NEW MYSTERY BARED IN DETROIT SHORTAGE

Accomplice Suspected in Withdrawal of $349,000 Pension Fund.

DETROIT, March 14.—(AP)—Investigation of the disappearance of $349,000 of a city pension fund disclosed shortly before Harry M. Tyler, assistant budget director, killed himself last Thursday night, developed a mystery today when it was learned that balance statements had been called for by a man whose name does not appear on the city rolls.

The mystery man's name was given by Ben E. Young, assistant president of the National Bank of Detroit, as "William Cromie," who, he said, called for the balance statement October 1, 1935. "Cromie," Young said, left the impression he was an employee of William J. Curran, city controller. Curran said there was no employee in his department, named "Cromie."

City authorities, convinced that the man who had withdrawn the money had carried on the extraction of funds from one of the city's bank accounts, postponed until Monday the opening of his safe deposit drawer. They learned today, however, that Tyler had made two visits to the box last Wednesday.

A total of $349,000 was today included in a statement by Controller Curran that he believed his signature on the card authorizing withdrawal from the fund was forged. The discovery that the card carried only Curran's name while it should have had those of at least five other city officials, including Curran, was a serious blow to the city's credit.

Curran said that he had approved payment on some of the checks presented by Tyler.

He is survived by his only son, George Goodwin; a sister, Mrs. Emma Meek, of Bridgeport, Texas, and two brothers, W. and M. A. Goodwin, both of Acworth, Ga.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the Peachtree chapel of Brandon-Bond-Condor. The Rev. S. D. Cherry and the Rev. R. Frank Perry will officiate. Interment will be in Acworth.

RAIN MAY MARSHDAY, PREDICTS WEATHERMAN
Rain may appear today to mar Atlanta's Sunday afternoon, it was announced by the weatherman yesterday, who was more definite in his prediction that war clouds and partly cloudy skies will prevail.

"Partly cloudy and warmer, with temperatures ranging between 55 and 65 degrees," was the forecast given by Chief Forecaster George W. Mindling.

Yesterday's mercury ranged between 46 and 61 degrees.

DUST STORM REPORTED.
PUEBLO, Colo., March 14.—(AP)—A dust storm, which was reported to have blown over an area south of here to Clayton, N. M., today and thence down to the Texas panhandle. The cloud was so dense as to interfere greatly with traffic.

Under the Cherokee Rose

By Rose Marie

In her column entitled, "From My Balcony," which Julia Collier Harris conducts in the Chattanooga Times, she cites the fact that a group of cultured women are supporting a poets' corner in the library in Columbus, Ga. It is hoped that Mrs. Edith Fowell Hudson, chairman of the poetry division of Georgia federation, to establish a poets' corner in every library in Georgia. The corner in the Columbus library honors the memory of Sidney Lanier. As Georgia women, through their clubs, have for 20 or 30 years done a great deal to promote literary work, especially in small towns and rural settlements, it is probable that clubs all over the state will take up this poets' corner project and make poetry reading and study a vital thing.

For three months the members of the Augusta Woman's Club have been filling little pasteboard school houses with personal donations for the perpetual scholarship fund supported by the club at Tallulah Falls school. The boxes were opened at a tea last week and Tallulah Falls committee is composed of Mrs. J. W. Gholston, chairman; Mesdames L. S. Dwyer, W. Manning, J. S. Plaxco and David N. Chapman.

Mrs. P. C. Barkley, of Cairo, recently won the award of $1 offered in the "My Interest of the Week Letter Contest." She writes the club editor that receiving the check was quite a pleasant surprise and an entirely new experience.

Members of Wrenston Study Club will take a "Trip Through Virginia" when they make a tour of the Ledger-Enquirer building under the sponsorship of the yearbook committee. Important upon the tour will be the future reading of "The Old Maid," by Mrs. Emmett Cockrell.

When Mrs. E. L. Cumbe, of West Point, received her check for $1 for her letter entered in the "My Interest of the Week Letter Contest," she wrote that her dollar would go much farther than the one recently thrown across the Rappahannock.

The recommendation from the state executive board that each district raise $50 toward the General Federation Foundation, which has been set at $500, was voted unanimously by the fifth district executive board at the meeting held last Thursday in Lithonia. The sum of $500 will be taken by Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, director for Georgia, to be national convention to be held in Miami in April. Mrs. P. J. McGovern, president of the Fifth District of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. C. E. Glauser, of Quitman, was in Atlanta Wednesday looking not one bit less beautiful after having bumps. As president of the second district Federation of Clubs, she has called her executive board meeting for March 26, in Thomasville, as the Thomasville Study Class hostess.

Arousing keen interest at the fifth district meeting of women's clubs in Lithonia, was a letter read from Her Majesty Queen Mary of England to Tallulah Falls school. March being her birthday, the letter was read by her sincere thanks for the message of condolence on occasion of the death of His Majesty King George V.

Mrs. A. J. Strickland's daughter, Natalie, has been made president of Valdosta's newest social organization, the Junior Service League, a club that will bring together young people who are interested in fostering constructive community work.

Georgia federation extends hearty congratulations to Albert Saye, son of Mrs. W. S. Saye, the splendid actor of Rutledge Woman's Club, upon being awarded the Lewis Beck scholarship for post graduate work at the college of his choice. Mr. Saye is now assistant professor of history at the University of Georgia.

Among fifth district clubs, the St. Covington Club Welcomes Members.

Mrs. W. O. Patterson presided at the March meeting of Covington Woman's Club and Mrs. R. A. Norris presided at the March meeting of the club as new members. Officers reported activities the club to be well up with the club, and $5 was voted sent to Tallulah Falls school. March being student-aid month, a playlet on this subject was given by Mrs. W. O. Patterson and Mrs. H. A. Davis.

In recognition of the efforts of Miss Charlie Porter in behalf of the club, it was voted to contribute $10 to have this outstanding member's name on the Student Aid Foundation. The library committee reported books given by Miss Porter, four contributed by Mrs. M. M. Osman and one by Mrs. L. D. Bolton.

Mrs. Wisner presented her pupils who won first prize in the district radio school contest, Jimmy Upshaw and Edith Trappnell. Also Olive Bradshaw and Margene Neely who spoke over radio. Mrs. Patterson presented Mickey Bolton, of the Social Circle school, who was first winner in piano in the radio school of the air. Members entered into a prize drawing during these future citizens of Newton country. During the social hour refreshments were enjoyed.

Sorosis Club Features Program on "Science"

Georgia Sorosis of Elberton featured a program on "Science" at the March meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. C. F. Herndon, with Mrs. Herndon and Mrs. H. L. Rydell, hostesses. Carrying out the entertaining subject directed by Mrs. Z. B. Rogers, members responded to roll call with pertinent items.

Songs and dance numbers by Helen Christian with Caroline Lee, delighted the audience. "The Spirit of Science" was given by Mrs. C. D. Auld, and August Korten rendered an accordion selection. Interesting sketches of Crawford W. Long and John and Joseph LeConte were read by Mrs. W. A. Wray and Miss Gladys Sheppard. A group of Irish songs by Mrs. Carter Arnold, accompanied by Mrs. W. D. Tutt, concluded the program.

Mrs. C. A. Arnold, the president, presided at the business session and splendid reports were heard. Dudley Saunders, a representative from the Chamber of Commerce, talked in regard to the Community Chest, asking co-operation of members. Social hour hostesses were assisted by Jessie Champion and Dorothy Herndon.

Gainesville Clubwomen Hear Dr. Pearce Jr.

Dr. H. J. Pearce Jr., of Brenau College, spoke at a meeting of the Gainesville Study Club, held at the home of Mrs. B. F. Gaillard on Riverside. Dr. Pearce discussed the constitution of the United States, comparing conditions of the country in the time of George Washington with present needs. He paid a beautiful tribute to the men who wrote the constitution, stating that the constitution as a whole had endured longer than that of any other country.

Mrs. W. R. Garner, member of the program committee, introduced the speaker. Mrs. Roy Newman, club president, was in the chair, and heard reports from committee. During the business session a silver tea and exhibit of quilts of the past and present was displayed at the place and the home of Mrs. H. H. Dean and will be open to the public.

Other members present were Mesdames Alice Charters, A. S. Hardy, Marshall Stone, P. D. Hocken, Camell Brown Jr., Peter LaFleur, P. F. Brown, Jesse Meeks, Arthur Roper, Charles Strong, U. R. Waterman and H. D. Dean. The program was interesting and entertaining was her mother, Mrs. W. D. Wheeler, Mrs. Arthur Roper and daughter, Mrs. Graham Roper, of Florence, S. C.

Sympathy Extended To Mrs. Bailey.

Federated church women of Georgia extend sincere sympathy to Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of A-worth, in the recent passing of her husband, Dr. E. M. Bailey, prominent physician in A-worth. Mrs. Bailey is the secretary of the Georgia Council of Federated Church Women and active in the work of the Baptist church.

Mrs. Tyler Presides Over Eighth District Executive Session

Clubwomen of the eighth district of Georgia Federation met in executive session at Waycross on March 3.

It was 26 years ago that Mrs. M. A. Lipscomb founded the "Light of the Mountains," and it was through her efforts that it became a club institution. Later, Mrs. John K. Otley visualized its future possibilities and the result is our Greater Tallulah Accredited High School.

The school has been a light to many of the children of the community and our state. There are in the most beautiful section of Georgia under the personal influence of our excellent club leader, Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick.

The students are taught "everything under the sun." They leave prepared to make a home and a vocation. May each club member feel it a privilege to co-operate.

By Mrs. R. K. Stevart, Member of Quitman Woman's Club.

My interest of the week centered in the distribution of the one-dollar check which I was privileged to receive from The Atlanta Constitution, in the Georgia Federation Club contest. As is my custom, the title is first taken out of any money that comes into my possession. This week I added the title of the check to my offering for home missions. The remaining 90 cents I gladly presented to the Quitman Woman's Club to be used as the club chooses.

As the 90 cents goes to some worthy local cause I am glad that the club is helping spread the gospel of Jesus Christ in the southland. My interest of the week will last for future years.

'Need for Changed Education' Discussed By President of Georgia Federation

By MRS. H. B. RITCHIE, Of Athens, President of Georgia Federation.

Since the close of the World War, society has undergone a distinct revolution. Changes have been rapid and fundamental. The old standards of life and thought have been challenged by democratic ideals, and the old standards of life and thought have been challenged by democratic ideals, and the old standards of life and thought have been challenged by democratic ideals.

Our young people of today are subject to a veritable storm of stimulation and preparation for the future. They are to face in swift succession with complex influences; crisis move rapidly to confront them; the motion pictures, radio, newspapers, and magazines, and their forces to the spiritual and mental strain, with results some good, some negligible, some great. An equipment of a definite nature and very broad in scope is necessary to permit young people to successfully withstand the buffet of modern conditions and to establish a satisfying and successful life. The purpose of this topic is to stimulate study and to interpret the effect that these changes have on our education.

Consider (1) A rapidly changing society. (a) Economic changes—new relation of agriculture and industry; (b) Social changes—effect of machine on home life and social conditions; (c) Political changes—increasing centralization of power; (d) Cultural changes—growth of government responsibility.

2. Evidence of (a) dissatisfaction of graduates who seek accomplishment; (b) Lack of interest of pupils in school life; (c) Lack of interest of pupils in school life; (d) Lack of interest of pupils in school life; NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

'Desire,' With Dietrich and Cooper, Current Feature at the Fox Theater

"Desire," the romantic comedy which brings together Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper for the first time since "Morocco," is the current attraction at the Fox theater. The combination of these screen favorites and a fast-moving, surprise-filled story makes for delightful entertainment.

The stars complement one another perfectly. To see them is to approve Director Frank Borzage's choice in placing them first in his list of famous screen lovers of all time.

Romance, comedy, adventure—these elements are expertly joined in "Desire," which is highly recommended.

The mood of this exciting picture changes constantly. One moment Marlene Dietrich is sweetly coqueting the thief, through a ruse, of a costly string of pearls from a leading Parisian jeweler. The next, she is in danger at a border town in Europe, when the customs officials are unexpectedly thorough in their search. The encounter with the American vacationist, played by Cooper, begins with comedy and turns to ardent romance.

The action, the dialogue and the situations combine to make "Desire" one of the most enjoyable screen pictures of the year.

The principals are supported by John Halliday, William Frawley, Ernest Cossart, Akim Tamiroff and Alan Mowbray.

The program is rounded off very nicely with a carefully selected group of short subjects which include "A Little Stranger," Movie Milestone No. 2, and Fox news.

Muni in Magnificent Portrayal Of Pasteur at Paramount Theater

Paul Muni has scored again. In the Cosmopolitan production "The Story of Louis Pasteur," now playing at the Paramount theater, he has given the world not only one of the finest characterizations ever depicted on the screen, but has made a real contribution to the art of motion pictures.

In a tense, smashing drama, replete with action and romance, he has painted the turbulent life of Louis Pasteur, that amazing French scientist whose battle for humanity against ignorance and prejudice is one of the most astounding chapters in modern history in an amazingly colorful picture.

It is hard to realize that there could be such a momentous drama in Pasteur's life, for in popular imagination he is an almost legendary figure. The story is not just one of the microscope and the laboratory, although even that portion of the picture has been made intensely interesting. The picture dramatizes his battle against the ignorance, superstition and prejudice of the times. Physicians high in the favor of the court branded him as a charlatan and fought his every move. So powerful were they that they had him banished from Paris.

But this sterling character could not be swayed from his work to save humanity, even against his own wish. He carried on with a few faithful followers, turning his back to the scorn and hatred of his fellow scientists. And he lived to triumph over them, to be recognized as the greatest of them all.

Paul Muni, famous on the stage before he brought his talents to the screen, gives much more than a fine characterization. There is no Muni. He has entirely effaced himself, and makes Pasteur live and breathe on the screen. He is Pasteur working, battling for humanity. The spectator is never conscious of the actor, he sees only the man, Pasteur.

Muni has an exceptionally talented supporting cast, chief of whom is Josephine Hutchinson, who plays Mrs. Pasteur, the wife who stood staunchly beside the chemist during all of his trials and aided him in his work. Miss Hutchinson is a comparatively new acquisition to the screen, although she long has been of note on the stage.

Miss Hutchinson has given a performance of remarkable artistry, which places her among the leading feminine players of the screen. She portrays her role with both sympathy and understanding.

The winsome Anita Louise, as the daughter of Pasteur, and Donald Woods, as the romantic hero, both give exceptionally fine performances.

Others who do notable work in the case include Fritz Leiber, Porter Hall and Raymond Brown, as the three doctors who fought Pasteur most bitterly; Henry O'Neill, Akim Tamiroff, Halliwell Hobbes, Frank Reicher and Dickie Moore.

William Dieterle has given the production fine and artistic direction. The story and screen play are by Sheridan Gibney and Pierre Collings, with dialogue directed by Gene Lewis.

JAMES CAGNEY HIT BOOKED AT DEKALB

Well Balanced Programs Mark Week's Run at Theater.

James Cagney, in probably his greatest role, "Frisco Kid," will be featured at the DeKalb theater tomorrow and Tuesday. The picture is a thrilling story of old San Francisco's underworld. Ricardo Cortez, Margaret Lindsay, Lili Damita, Barton MacLane and Donald Woods make up the supporting cast.

Glenda Farrell and Joan Blondell are back again in Wednesday's picture, "Miss Pacific Fleet." Allen Jenkins and Hugh Herbert, the latter at his best in the role of an absent-minded business executive, and Warren Hall complete the cast.

"The Last Days of Pompeii," to be featured Thursday, gives a pictorialization of the barbaric splendor and savage rivalry of the period.

"Freckles," Gene Stratton Porter's immortal romance, will be the feature picture for Friday, with Tom Brown, Virginia Weidler and Carol Stone in the leading roles. Virginia Weidler, the eight-year-old player who was a sensational hit in "Laddie," is cast as the romance fixer, Laurie Lou. Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in "The Rainmakers" will be featured Saturday. Dorothy Lee is again cast with these two funmakers.

Ballet Repertoire Will Be Staged Twice Monday at Georgia Theater

The Hollywood Ballet Company, under the direction of Marcel Silver and Aida Brodina, will stage a repertoire of strikingly new and versatile ballet at the Georgia theater tomorrow at matinee and evening performances.

Direct from triumphs on the west coast, where the company made its debut at the famous Hollywood Bowl last fall, the cast of 35 selected dancers will present its highly diverting spectacle which includes whimsy, fantasy, gaiety and humor.

Outstanding in its frank interpretation of the glamorous and heart-breaking task of making movies is the ballet "Hollywood," which tells the tale of a well-known motion picture star and her "double."

This number was written by Fanchon, dance and musical director of vaudeville successes, and arranged by Mr. Silver and Miss Brodina as a whimsical tale told in dance form. The music was especially composed by Ferde Grofe, author of the "Grand Canyon Suite" and "Metropolitan."

In addition, the Hollywood Ballet Company will present the following new ballets and diversions:

"Prometheus, the Poem of Fire," a powerful pastiche inspired by the fourth and fifth symphonies of I. Scriabin.

"Happiness, the Fairy Queen," a fantasy combining the legends of the Arabian Nights tales with the work of Perrault and Andersen and the music of Tchaikovsky.

"Valse Triste," a romantic scene set to the music of Sibelius.

"Eternity," symbolical of Gustav Holst's "Saturn."

"The Flight of the Bumble Bee," an unusual solo dance on the music of Rimski-Korsakov.

"Danse," a brilliant expression of the charm and poetry of ballet dancing—music from Claude Debussy.

"Les Dentellieres," a pantomime number for six dancers, with music from Joseph Suk's "Fairy Tales."

Exceptional Screen, Stage Shows To Open Today at Capitol Theater

The hordes of Atlanta girls who learn for a theatrical career can learn the fate of one of their number in "Chatterbox," new first run picture starring Anne Shirley, Phillips Holmes and Erik Rhodes, which opens a week's engagement at the Lucas & Jenkins Capitol theater starting today.

From an original story, "Chatterbox" is the story of a New England lass with a predilection for the footlights. She makes her way to the big city and into the heart of a young artist.

Through an accidental introduction, she receives the leading role in a "tear jerker," an opus of days gone by made hilarious today by its age. She accepts the role very seriously, and the audience's howls spell bitterness and heart-break for the girl.

The picture is stated to be suited for those who enjoy a down-to-earth picture of young love and romance. It will prove especially appealing to the young set.

Following the success and many high compliments paid the theater the splendid stage show of last week, the Capitol management has secured for this week "The Diamond Revue," a vaudeville unit brought direct to Atlanta from the famous Wilbur Cush.

BUCKHEAD HOUSE LISTS GOOD BILLS

Drama and Comedy Are Interpersed on Programs for Week.

What happens when a spirited southern beauty marries into one of New York's "first families" and is ruthlessly sacrificed in the battle to preserve their crumbling grandeur is depicted in dramatic fashion in "Splendor," the Samuel Goldwyn film which brings Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea to the Buckhead theater today and tomorrow. Prominent in the supporting cast are Paul Cavanagh, Helen Westley, Billie Burke and David Niven.

RIALTO A MOMENT OF MADNESS! A LIFETIME OF LOVE!

We invite you to see the most beautiful picture of the year! Not beautiful merely because of its magnificent settings and its superb cast, but because the elusive beauty of its theme will appeal to your finest sentiments and probe into the deepest corners of your heart!

THE MELODY LINGERS ON WITH JOSEPHINE HUTCHINSON GEORGE HOUSTON

'The Melody Lingers On' Delights Big Audiences at Rialto Theater

A story that leaves lasting impression upon everyone who sees it, a memory of a delightful piece of screen entertainment that lingers for many months, is to be found this week at the Rialto theater, where "The Melody Lingers On" proves a surprise delight of the current season.

Introducing two young stars who, ranking among personalities of filmdom, Josephine Hutchinson and George Houston, the picture contains some of the best songs and musical arrangements yet achieved. In many ways it is completely different from anything before made for the screen.

It is a romance of the present with music and is set in southern Europe, where it carries its listeners through entrancing scenes of loveliness, varied with situations fraught with suspense. There is a delightful note of sympathy and tenderness throughout.

Little Lord Fauntleroy Scores Hit On Screen at Loew's Grand Theater

Freddie Bartholomew, famous for his impersonation of the youthful David Copperfield, adds the characterization of another Victorian youngster to his credit by his impersonation of Little Lord Fauntleroy, in the film version of Frances Hodgson Burnett's famous novel, now at Loew's Grand theater.

He is co-starred in this production with Dolores Costello Barrymore, who returns to the screen after a retirement of several years. Mrs. Barrymore came to the Warm Springs Foundation last week from Hollywood to attend the world premiere of the film before an audience of youthful patients of the foundation.

It is a modernized Fauntleroy you will encounter in this film version. Gone are the traditional long golden curls and the plush suit. Freddie's characterization makes Ceddie a likeable and manly little fellow, to meet the approval of modern youngsters.

The story opens in the year 1888, when Havisham, lawyer to the Earl of Dorincourt, visits Mrs. Errol ("Dearest"), at her Brooklyn home to announce that the death of the earl's third son makes Mrs. Errol's son the heir. The earl, an irascible old fellow, refuses to receive "Dearest" within the park gates, for he has never forgiven his son for marrying this penniless American girl.

Ceddie goes to Dorincourt to make his home with his grandfather, and soon his charm had won the old fellow's goodwill. Ceddie is able to bring about a reconciliation between his grandfather and his mother, who has refused the earl's proffered income.

Just at this point a very different youngster arrives from America. His mother claims that he is the son of the earl's deceased second son, and therefore the rightful heir to the earldom. How the earl fights for the rightful heir, and proves it to the satisfaction of the courts, with the assistance of Ceddie's American friends, brings the picture to a climax.

This film is a most appealing one, reviving the sentiments which made the story a great favorite on the

"COUNTRY DOCTOR" WITH QUINTS, IS HIT

Famous Babies Capture Hearts in Picture Now at Georgia Theater.

Darryl F. Zanuck's "The Country Doctor" now being held over at the Georgia theater, proves to be the "blest event" of the year as it presents the five famous Dionne quintuplets laughing, crooning and stealing your heart as motion picture stars. The story possesses drama, comedy, pathos and adventure in presenting these universally loved babies in their first feature length picture roles. Jean Herscholt is the hero, as the doctor who dedicates his life to a battle against pain and ill in a Canadian fur settlement.

Hampered by official red tape and sorely in need of a hospital, he antagonizes the heads of his company, loses his position because of the enmity of the company manager. He answers one last call for his services, and his astonishment brings five tiny mites to the world at one birth.

With a startling suddenness, the doctor finds his position reversed. He is the focus of world interest, he can demand and get everything he wants for his tiny charges. And, in the climax the man who faced a lonely old age becomes the recipient of highest honors from the government.

Contrasted against the dramatic central plot are the comedy roles of Slim Summerville and John Qualen, and the youthful tender romance of Michael Whalen and June Lang, all contributing to the story's interest and entertainment power.

Henry King directed the picture, many scenes of which were photographed by a company dispatched to the quint's home in Callender, Ontario.

OPPORTUNITY OFFERS SALESMANSHIP CLASS

Special classes in salesmanship will begin on Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the Atlanta Opportunity school on Spruill and Baker streets. This new short-unit course of 15 lessons is open without cost to unemployed adults.

Mrs. T. A. Kitchens, who is an experienced teacher, will discuss job adjustment, how to get a job, how to hold a job, and other problems of interest to salespeople.

On Friday afternoon the alumni association of the Atlanta Opportunity school sponsored a benefit bridge party at the Davidson's tea room. The funds raised will be used carrying out the various charities aided through the school.

The trade sewing class, under the direction of Mrs. Jessie Varren, visited a display of Welek and Company, at the Piedmont hotel last week. A complete line of new materials in cottons, linens, silk, etc., was on exhibition and the class profited by the knowledge gained on this visit.

The school cafeteria has new quarters on the second floor and is better prepared to carry on the waitress training, hostess work, and the regular cafeteria program.

GIRLS' HIGH SENIORS SEEK SCHOLARSHIPS

In an attempt to win a full year's scholarship to college, 10 seniors of Girls' High school on Friday, March 6, underwent three examinations given by the National Athletic Scholarship Society of Secondary Schools at a meeting of the executive committee held in St. Louis.

The purpose of the N. A. S. S. is to encourage better scholarship among athletes. Any athlete, who has earned an athletic letter, and whose scholastic average for three consecutive semesters is better than the average of the school, is eligible for membership in the society.

At a recent business meeting of G. I. A. A. coaches, it was decided to hold the track, tennis, golf and swimming meets in Atlanta. This program, which will be under the auspices of the Tech High, and other Atlanta members of the G. I. A. A., is scheduled for May 1.

Officers of last semester's Smithie senate have been chosen. They are: Mack Uphaw, president; Thomas Cooper, vice president, and Cecil Rivers, secretary. The old senate has not yet chosen a name, but meetings will be held twice each month. The society will complete organization at its next meeting.

GLLENWOOD CHILDREN HAVE AMATEUR HOUR

Bird houses have been built and placed outside the Dutch windows of the first grade of Miss Dillard, and the children are eager for birds to nest in them.

A lovely Holland border of Dutch children and windmills has been made by the second grade of Miss Jones. They are now reading "The Dutch Twins" and "The Boy Who Cried Wolf."

Mrs. Pittman's combination second and third grades had the chapel program on Tuesday. A "Major Bowes Hour" was given with Billy Caffee as the "major." There were 12 members of singing, dancing and instrumental selections. Edward Cox brought a pot of growing daffodils and the grade is enjoying fresh-hand cutting and drawing it.

Mrs. Hartin's grade are making silos which are used in the corn belt for the house.

Mrs. Rogers' fourth grade are making frames for pictures of birds the children have drawn.

The sixth grade pupils have been selected this week: President, Martha Muse; vice president, Bevelyn Howard; secretary, Ida B. Sanders, and treasurer, Josephine Young. Boys officers are, president, Jack King; vice president, Nic Cruger, and secretary, Gene Jordan.

PUPILS AT WILLIAMS NURSE INJURED ROBIN

The other day Ophelia Browne found a robin with a broken wing Holland and the school. The sixth grade children are taking care of it until its wing is healed. They are finding it hard to find enough worms for it. So far it has eaten 40 worms in two days.

Fifth grade are making window curtains and are planning a spring order for the blackboard. They were delighted to receive a picture folder of Washington, D. C. from their sponsor, Mr. Garner.

The sixth grade are studying hard trying to have perfect spelling papers on Friday.

Third grade are studying about Holland and their friends. They are making a chimney with a stock's nest to bring good luck to the room.

Second grade children were sorry to have Lester Finley leave their class and go to another school.

High 1 made some apple jelly to sell in their farmers' market.

Another white rat was given to Low 1 by the Atlanta Humane Society.

Kindergarten children were delighted last week at having their picture taken.

INMAN SCHOOL PUPILS SEE CAPITOL MUSEUM

Signs of spring are in evidence in every classroom, with beautiful pictures, interesting stencils and attractive bulletin boards.

The group of High sixth grade children that planned and fixed the bulletin board in the main hall did a fine piece of work. It is about our early birds and has a quotation from a Georgia poet that says, "I plant the trees they like the best, I give them food they like the best."

Another High 6 grade enjoyed a trip to the state capital to see the museum.

On the yard can be seen groups playing marbles. When questioned the players answer, "We want to enter the tournament."

The third grade children are thoroughly enjoying their Dutch project. A fine Dutch house is taking shape in one class.

Several rooms have been beautified with window drapes and hanging baskets, while others having interesting fish gardens, aquariums, pottery pieces, posters and other things that make a place more attractive.

Erk Woolley. The eighth chapter of "The Great Air Mystery," with Tailspin Tommy and selected short subjects, complete a bill of fine entertainment.

COMMERCIAL SCHOOL O'KEEFE HOBBY FAIR ENTERS ART CONTEST PLANNED FOR FRIDAY

Students of the art department are entered in a contest featured by the magazine. Prizes of $25, $15 and $5 each, are being offered for the best designs in daytime dresses submitted. Originality is the main feature by which the winners will be selected.

The contest closes March 23, 1936. "Singing School of Y. Olden -mes" will be the first presentation of the newly organized senior class music club, which will be presented at the students' meeting of the P. T. A., sometime in March.

This playlet is based on the old singing schools of long ago which were the avenues through which music came to the modern school. It was in 1838, at Boston, that music such as we have today in public schools was introduced by an old music teacher who taught one of these singing schools.

CAPITOL VIEW PUPILS DISPLAY GOOD HEALTH

Dr. Allen and Miss Peoples visited our school last week for our semi-annual health checkup. We were pleased to learn that so many of our children have good health and that no one has any serious trouble.

The school was saddened by the death of Mrs. June Hargrave. She had been connected with our school in this work ever since most of us can remember, and we all loved him for his kind and so readily sprang to the aid of any child in need.

High kindergarten are planting seed in egg shells.

Low and High 2 are planning to get a rabbit for their home. They are making plans for June the first to get that Fernan White is able to be back in school. They are sorry that Johnny Douglas is still sick but hope he will soon be back in school.

High 3 are planting gardens at home so that they can have pretty flowers and fresh vegetables this summer.

High 3 are learning about traveling in old and new ways. In connection with their study of the postoffice, they mailed letters to Bruce Cooper, Salt Lake City, Utah.

High 5 have finished their sand table scene of Sutter's Fort built in 1849.

Low and High 6 were visited last week by Miss Wiegand. She listened to all our songs that we will have in the "chorus" and gave us helpful suggestions.

HIGHLAND SIXTH GRADE MAKES GEORGIA BOOKS

Miss Pruitt's Low 6 have been making interesting Georgia books. The best ones are those by Martha Roberts, Phyllis Hirsch, Marie Schockley, Vivienne Duncan, Jessie Schomberg, Helen Clark, Mildred Miller and Gertrude Jones.

Low 3 are making cradles for their paupers.

Low 2 are enjoying their community library.

High 1 are building a model home in their room. They have named it "Happy Home."

High 1-1 are making quilts. They are planning to have a quilting party in one of the rooms of the school.

Low 1 are building a farm. They are planting corn, rye and wheat in greenhouse flats.

ALLEN HARMON.

CHILDREN AT FORREST MAKE INDIAN POTTERY

High 5 are enjoying the study of transportation very much. They are making a study of the development of transportation in the United States.

Low 5 are busy painting hanging lanterns.

High 4 are interested in their study of the vikings. They are making a viking boat, shields and costumes.

Low and High 3 have completed a booklet about February. They are now studying about sheep and have a lovely wool exhibit in their room.

High 2 are making their own wheels and their pottery. They have already made put jars from clay and are going to put Indian designs on them.

Last week many of Low 2 children made a visit to the Atlanta postoffice. They were met by Postmaster Fred Dillard, Ben Oppenheim, Doris Barber, Barbara Fleming, Ray Cooley, Charles Bishop, Freddie Miller, Edw. Tedder and Thomas McGhee.

Low 1 are busy making ready their trip to Mr. Ross' dairy farm.

Kindergarten have four beautiful new pictures in pretty round frames. One is called "Sunbeam" and the other "Mischievous."

DR. DODD TO ARRIVE IN CITY TOMORROW

Shreveport Pastor-Evangelist Will Address Meetings at First Baptist.

Dr. M. E. Dodd, of Shreveport, La., president of Dodd College and former president of the Southern Baptist Convention, will arrive in Atlanta tomorrow for a series of meetings at the First Baptist church, of Atlanta.

Dr. Dodd is pastor of the First Baptist church, of Shreveport, and is widely known as a pastor-evangelist. He will speak at 7:30 o'clock each morning and at 10:30 o'clock each night, except Saturday.

Dr. R. Iman Johnson, head of the department of hymnology and public speaking at the Southern Baptist Theological seminary, Louisville, Ky., will be in charge of the musical programs.

Dr. Ellis A. Fuller is pastor of the church. The public is invited.

RETAIL BUYING UP Unusually Good Weather Boosts Store Sales.

With unusually good March weather, spring retail buying in the sixth (Atlanta) federal reserve district was up last week from the week before. Succeeding weeks this year were declared by department store executives to have run consistently ahead of those in 1935.

Spring trading was expected to be in full swing before April 1 with prospects good.

Bank clearings in the district as reported by the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank, were $38,100,000 last week as compared with $48,200,000 for the preceding week.

Birmingham steel was 69 per cent of capacity, three per cent up from week before last.

RAIL CLUB TO HEAR EXPERT ON WELDING

James Grant, of Waycross, and F. C. Haase, of Chicago, will address the Southern and Southern Railway Club at a meeting to be held at 10 o'clock Thursday morning at the Ansley hotel.

Mr. Haase will discuss briefly the welding and cutting of steel alloy plates, showing by illustrations the procedure followed and the types of welding equipment and rods used, according to E. H. Roy, president of the club. "Shape Cutting of Locomotive and Car Parts" will be the subject of the talk by Mr. Grant.

A. T. Miller, secretary of the club, urges all members to be present.

Roosevelt Majority Up in Poll; Strength in Four Groups Shown

Women, Youth, Farmers, Relievers Favor F. D. R.

President Found To Be Weakest Among Business and Professional Class.

Nation Polled on This Question

For which candidate did you vote in 1932?
() Hoover () Roosevelt () Thomas () Did Not Vote
For which candidate would you vote TODAY?
() Republican () Roosevelt () Socialist () Third Party

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

NEW YORK, March 14.—A number of important facts about President Roosevelt's political position today are revealed in the latest nation-wide presidential poll conducted by the Institute of Public Opinion. First, the President's popularity increased slightly during the period covered by the poll, from early February to early March. He received 54.1% of the major party vote cast in the poll, against 45.9% for the Republicans. One month ago the President polled 53.9%.

Second, the poll reveals for the first time that a considerable proportion of the President's political support comes from four large groups of voters—persons in the lower economic levels, young persons, farmers, and women. His majority among these groups ranges from 56% among women to 78% among persons on relief.

Conversely, the President is weakest and the Republicans are strongest among business and professional persons, a cross-section of whom voted 7-to-3 for the G. O. P.

The prospects of the republican party next November will depend largely on developing an appeal to win over a greater proportion of the four pro-Roosevelt groups than it now has. This probably means moving toward a more liberal program. President Roosevelt's strategy, on the other hand, will probably be to win over as much of the present pro-republican business and professional vote as he can without losing support elsewhere. This would mean a swing toward the right, toward economy, budget-balancing and other conservative proposals.

Quiet Along the Potomac

The President nearly always gains in popularity when things are quiet along the Potomac, when his legislative program is not under fire in congress. This fact, first demonstrated by the National Weekly Poll some months ago, is again borne out in the poll reported today. For the daily sittings of congress up to the close of this month's poll early in March were quieter than they had been in years. What was the result?

Roosevelt's popularity with the voters of the two major parties climbed to its highest point in 13 months.

To match his present majority of 54.1% the statistical wayfarer must travel back along the curve on the Institute's chart to February, 1935.

The Score Today

The democrats are leading today in 33 states with a total electoral vote of 343. (Number necessary to win: 266.) The republicans are ahead in eleven states with 128 electoral votes. Each side has an even chance of winning 60 more electoral votes in the four states which are today half-republican, half-democratic—Michigan, Illinois, Kansas and Wyoming.

The political lineup of the states may be altered, of course, after next June when the republicans name their candidate. This month's poll simply reflects the situation as it is today, showing how President Roosevelt runs against the field, which includes a large number of potential candidates.

As soon as the republicans select one of these, the National Weekly Poll will be able, for the first time in history, to report whether a party's strength increases or decreases after its nominating convention.

156,454 Ballots Distributed

In this month's poll the Institute of Public Opinion distributed 156,454 ballots by mail and by personal interviewers. A representative cross-section of the entire voting population, from persons on relief to millionaires in "Who's Who," was covered, and ballots went into every state.

The above graph shows President Roosevelt's standing with the voters in the Institute poll every month beginning February, 1934.

In the Union. The Institute has one purpose and one only: to discover the truth about public opinion. With this in view it has adapted and applied all the best known and most reliable statistical methods invented by mankind. They are not perfect. But until something better is devised, they represent the best tools available.

Some Reasons for the Vote

Whence comes the increase in President Roosevelt's popularity in the last two polls of the Institute?

Some of it is due, undoubtedly, to the fact that this congressional session has been relatively tranquil. Another factor, which observers have noted in the south and middle west, is that the supreme court's death blow to the AAA stiffened farm support for Roosevelt. A third and very important reason is the talk of government economy which has been emanating lately from the White House.

As a poll reported by the Institute last month showed, the voters of the country are anxious to see the budget balanced and a start made toward reducing the national debt. One week after that poll was published, the administration moved toward economies in the sums spent for "pumping-priming" and mortgage loans.

There is also another reason for the rise in Roosevelt's majority: Socialist and third party strength sagged considerably in the poll this month.

Third party vote, which had limped along at approximately 5% for many months, dropped abruptly to 3.7%, while the socialist vote fell from 2.1% to 1.8%.

Roosevelt was the gainer because when third party voters shift, more shift to the democrats than to the republicans.

Republican (11 States) On the Line (4 States) Democratic (33 States)

Electoral Votes 128 60 343

In the following table, which shows how the states vote in the presidential poll this month, definitely republican states are those in which Roosevelt receives less than 47% of the combined major party vote.

Borderline republican states are those in which the President's strength is between 47% and 50%.

States "on the line" vote 50% democratic, 50% republican.

Borderline democratic states are those in which the President's majority is between 50% and 53%.

All states in which his majority is greater than 53% have been listed as definitely democratic at this time.

The list applies only to this month's poll and much can happen to alter the lineup between now and November.

Poll Confirms Predictions of America Speaks

Sitting behind his large desk in the National Press building in Washington, Emil Hurja, democratic political forecaster, predicted recently that Roosevelt would carry every state in the south and every state west of the Mississippi.

The "Mr. Statistics" of the democratic party bases his prediction on letters, charts, local polls, etc., and his record for accuracy has been enviable.

The presidential poll this month tends to confirm Mr. Hurja's prediction in general, although there are minor differences.

Roosevelt is leading in every southern state, but whether he will carry all states west of the Mississippi is open to question, as far as the poll results show.

Colorado, for instance, votes republican in the poll reported today, and a trend away from the democrats there has been noted in the last two polls.

Kansas, the home of Alfred M. Landon, is "on the line" today, being democratic in an Institute poll, and now it's anybody's race in Kansas. Another state west of the Mississippi which is not sure for the democrats is Wyoming, although Roosevelt has a 50-50 chance today of carrying it. Wyoming, like Kansas, is "on the line."

In a recent interview, James A. Farley, chairman of the democratic national committee, declared that Roosevelt would carry the following five states in which the race is today fairly close: New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan. In this month's poll these states line up as follows:

State	For Roosevelt	For Republican
New York	51%	49%
Michigan	50%	50%
Ohio	49%	51%
New Jersey	48%	52%
Pennsylvania	48%	52%

Third Parties Lose

The National Weekly Poll reports President Roosevelt's majority in terms of the total major party vote, which comprised about all but a small fraction of the vote in the last election. In simple words this means that, calling the total vote cast by republicans and democrats in the poll 100 per cent, Roosevelt received 54.1 per cent, the republicans 45.9 per cent.

When the vote of the socialists and third parties is included, the lineup in today's poll is as follows:

Party	Per Cent of Total Poll Vote
For Roosevelt	51.1%
For Republican	43.4%
For Third Parties	5.7%
For Socialist	1.8%

A comparison with last month's poll shows marked losses in socialist and third party vote during the period:

Not that the President gained the bulk of the loss in socialist and third party vote.

Roosevelt Loses In 15 States, Gains in 22

Popularity Decreases in New England; Increases in South.

NEW YORK, March 14.—A comparison of the results of this month's poll with last month's indicates that President Roosevelt lost in popularity in 15 states and gained in 22.

His losses were principally in New England and the Mid-Atlantic states, notably Maine, Rhode Island and Delaware, and in scattered parts of the middle west.

His gains were chiefly in the south and in the north central states of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North Dakota and South Dakota where his majority increased from two to three points.

The rising democratic tide in these four north central states is of more than ordinary political significance because that area had previously been conspicuous in Institute polls for its defection from Roosevelt.

Now, however, Minnesota, Wisconsin and South Dakota are definitely democratic (more than 53 per cent for Roosevelt) instead of "borderline" democratic (50 per cent to 53 per cent for Roosevelt) as they were last month.

What caused the change?

Probably it was brought about by the nation-wide drop in third party vote noted in this month's poll. The four states in question, which had previously been honeycombed with third party voters, showed losses of from two to seven points in third party strength. And Roosevelt is nearly always the gainer when third parties lose, as previous polls have shown.

One of the most conspicuous defections from the democrats in the last few months has been that of Kansas. Back in November Kansas voted more than 53 per cent for Roosevelt in an Institute poll, and was listed as a definitely democratic state. In January it was still for Roosevelt, but by a smaller margin—52 per cent. Last month the democratic lead was cut out to 51 per cent and now it has vanished altogether.

Today Kansas squats on the fence, voting 50 per cent democratic, 50 per cent republican.

Squinting along it are Michigan, Illinois and Wyoming, making a total of four states which are political question marks today. Last month there were only three. The changes may be shown as follows:

Electoral Vote	States on the Line
47	New York
19	Michigan
14	Illinois
3	Indiana
30	Wyoming

After three months of indecision, New York, the President's home state, climbed the fence and went democratic. In polls since November, the upstate republican vote had exactly balanced the New York city democratic vote. The month the deadlock was broken—temporarily at least—when Roosevelt polled 51 per cent, the increase coming chiefly in New York city.

It was largely the shift of the Empire state, prize plum in an election because it has the most electoral votes (47), that lifted Roosevelt's total electoral vote from 294 last month to 343 this month.

Women are more in favor of President Roosevelt than men. They vote 56 per cent for him as compared to 54 per cent for all voters, both men and women.

Moreover, the degree of shift away from Roosevelt since the election of 1932 has been less among women than among men. Thus there has been a drop of seven points in the proportion of male voters in favor of Roosevelt, but only a three-point drop among women. The average drop for the nation has been five points.

In analyzing the comments written on ballots by democratic voters in today's poll, it is interesting to note that approximately 7 per cent say: "I like his personality."

It is also interesting to note that this specific comment does not appear in the remarks of other groups of voters.

The most typical comment made by democratic women voters is: "No one else could do much better than Roosevelt."

Uncertain is the political situation in the state of Illinois today, judging by that commonwealth's chameleon-like changes in recent polls. A few months ago Illinois was democratic by a small margin. Then in December it shifted to the republican side. Now it is neither republican nor democratic, but teeters on the fence.

Generally mention some republican as more suitable and than mine. They have been handling relief, and I make a lot more money when the republicans are in. The comment presumably refers to 1929.

Next Week—Inflation

Pop the word "inflation" at John Creditor and he will blanch. If money is cheapened, the dollars he collects would be less valuable than the dollars he lent.

For John Debtor currency inflation holds less horror. When money is cheap his debts are easier to pay.

The inflation bill in congress, led by Representative Wright Patman and others, advocates issuing greenbacks against the heavy gold and silver surplus of the United States government. Opponents shout that the nation does not need more currency and that once the printing presses begin rolling there will be no stopping them.

What does the American public, final arbiter of the destiny of the nation, think about currency inflation?

The Institute of Public Opinion is completing a nationwide poll on the question. The results, which will be compared with earlier polls taken on inflation but never published, will appear in next Sunday's Constitution.

Boy Breaks Jump Records in Tow of Runaway Kangaroo

Flies Through Air With Ease
As Sailors' Pet Cracks WhipBy HORACE MITCHELL, Pet Editor.

Ralph Thompson told me a corking good story the other day.

"When I was a boy," he said, "I lived in a small town on the Maine coast, where there is a navy yard. There were always a lot of sailors around the village in their blue uniforms, and marines in their outfits of scarlet, blue and gold. On the ships that came to the yard were always mascots of one kind or another. Some of them had goats, some dogs, others cats, and so forth. But the one that fascinated me was the kangaroo.

"The crew had got him in Australia during a cruise. He was pretty tame. The goats would box with him and he'd sit back on his tail and swing his hands just like a man. The 'roo, as the folks down under—the Australians—call these animals, hardly ever got mad enough to use his tail. But you can bet the boys respected that weapon. Kangaroos' tails can kill a man easily.

"Kangaroo Runs Away.

"Well, this one would hop all over the naval reservation. It is on an island, so there wasn't much danger of his getting away unless he went over the railroad bridge or over the vehicular bridge. And the latter was always guarded by armed marines.

"You wouldn't think anything as big as a kangaroo could run away from such a place. Yet this one did. And that was my personal connection with him coming to the navy yard. Sailors and marines were sent out after him. All the boys in town tagged along. After several hours he was located and one of the sailors who had a rope, tossed a noose over the animal's head.

"The kangaroo jumped away, the rope slipped through the sailor's hands, and off over the stone walls and the underbrush went the mascot. We circled around him and in two hours we found him again. A bunch of us began to stalk him to grab the end of that rope. Up we came, closer and closer. Finally, we were just within reach of it. The kangaroo saw us and tensed for his life.

"Trying to Hold On.

"Grab it!" somebody yelled, and I did. Oh, boy!

"I grabbed that rope just as the kangaroo leaped. I grabbed and hung on. There was a jerk that felt as if my arms were being torn out. I took some steps that were all of 15 feet long. The fellows all yelled to me to stay with him and they ran up to help, but they couldn't run fast enough.

I took steps that were 15 feet long!"

"The end of my rope had got twisted around my wrist so I could not let go of it. Old we went. That mascot would take jumps 20 to 30 feet long. I'd be whipped into the air to fall down and be snapped up again. Once I saw a stone wall fly under me, I would have been in a heap over the barbed wire. It wasn't!

"It was the tightest spot I was ever in. On and on went the animal. I was pretty nearly 'dead beat' when we came to an apple orchard. He was slowing down a little and once in a while he'd stop to rest and look at me. I hoped he wouldn't start to work on me with his tail!

"Tangled Around a Tree.

"In the orchard he went to the right of a tree and made a circle. In a minute we were all tangled up. I ran around the tree to hold the kangaroo and he ran around so fast in the other direction that within a minute he had me bound right up against the trunk. When he could run no more he sat still and gazed at me. I wondered where the sailors were. The rope cut deeply into me and it wasn't a bit comfortable. I yelled as loudly as I could until I got too hoarse to yell. Everything was still. I could hear the chattering in the pines a hundred yards away.

"And then I heard a shout. Another man, did they sound good? The sailors and marines came to sight over the hill and I was released. 'But, take my advice, never grab the end of a rope when a live kangaroo is on the other end!'

Marse Possum's Peculiarities
Make Him Interesting Animal

To a student the common opossum, or, as it is more generally known, possum, is perhaps the most interesting mammal found in the United States. The things that make it so interesting to the student are not those that would appeal to an everyday citizen, but Marse Possum has plenty of other peculiarities to substitute for them.

The opossum (Didelphis virginiana) is not found in Canada, but makes its home from New York to California and south to the southern part of Mexico. In spite of the fact that it is hunted a great deal both for food and for sport, it is still fairly common. However, as it spends its days sleeping, and only comes out at night to prowling around, it is not seen as often as its abundance would lead one to expect.

In size, the opossum will equal a common house cat, having a head and body length of 15 inches, with 12 inches additional for its tail. The average weight is about 12 pounds. It has a long, sharply pointed muzzle, five-toed feet of favorably adapted grasping, and a tail that is hairless, scaly, and prehensile (grasping). The outer fur is long and coarse, but the under coat is soft and woolly and has some value in the fur market. The general color is gray.

It is Active in the Trees.

Although rather slow and heavy in its movements when on the ground, the opossum nevertheless is a tolerably good climber. Its more natural sphere of action, however, is in the trees, where its tail, acting as a fifth hand, is of great assistance to it. As already mentioned, the opossum does not ordinarily move about in the daytime. A bright, still night is its favorite hunting time, when it searches for insects, small reptiles, mice, young birds and eggs, corn, nuts, berries, roots and many other edibles. One of its notorious food favorites of the opossum is the persimmon.

The opossum makes a nest of dried grass usually under the root of a tree, where the mother gives birth to her dozen or 13 blind, naked young, which are only half an inch long when first born. The young opossums remain in the mother's pouch until a few months of age. This pouch is one of the peculiar things about the opossum. It is a sort of pocket formed by the skin of the mother and it affords an admirable place of safety for the helpless baby. The opossum is the only one of our native animals to possess such an arrangement.

Possums make excellent eating when properly cooked; unfortunately (or, from the point of view of the opossum, fortunately) white people generally have an unrecusable prejudice against eating them.

One of our most common figures of speech is derived from a peculiar habit of this animal. When cornered and tapped with a stick or otherwise treated with violence, it will roll over and stiffen its body in an excellent imitation of death, and then, when it sees an opportunity, quietly come to life again and steal away. From this habit comes the expression "playing possum."

New Kind of Blind
Man's Buff Makes For Quick Dodging

Here's the kind of "blind man's buff" that gives the "blind man" a better chance of making a capture. The player makes a quick dodging to get away from him.

The players make a large circle and count out to see who must be "it." The "it" is blindfolded and led to the center of the circle. Around his neck is put a ribbon on which there is a whistle which hangs down the middle of his back.

Then the game begins. Each person in the circle takes his turn at sneaking up and blowing the whistle. If the blind man turns quickly enough to hear the whistle before he gets back to his place, then the one caught must take his position in the middle as the blind man.

Tip on Your Tips for Safety.

The blind man will be alert to the steps of the player behind him and will be ready to give a good whack with the stick when he comes within reach. The clever player is the one that creeps up softly without a sound and blows the whistle without pulling the cord.

The players should tease the blind man a little, too, by not coming up at regular intervals when he will be expecting them, but by following each other in quick succession a few times, then letting a little time elapse while they watch with amusement the "blind man" bat his arms at imaginary whippers he hears stealing up on him.

CUTTING REMARK.

Barber: "You say you have been here before? I don't remember your face."

Victim: "No, it's all healed up."

Contest Prizes

The editor of the Boys' and Girls' page certainly learned one thing by last Sunday's contest. The boys and girls of today certainly know geography! My how astounding it was to receive so many correct answers to the jumbled word cities contest. There are a few more gray hairs in the editor's head as a result of trying to decide upon the two nearest submissions of correct answers. Very beautiful and interesting books will be mailed to Annie Lois Browning, 14 years old, of Flowilla, Ga., and James Robert Holleran, 12, of Calhoun, Ga.

NOW FOR NEXT WEEK—So popular was the jumbled word contest that the editor of the page has decided to run another along the same line—this time, the scrambled letters representing names of large bodies of water in different parts of the world. Here's a big one that won't be a single correct list. What about it boys and girls? Do your best. If you don't get them all, send in your best effort. And don't forget: Sign your name, address and age. Get your work in by Wednesday. Be sure that it is your own work.

The Editor Gets a Licking.

How many of you boys and girls play table tennis—or ping pong, as it is sometimes called? If you don't, you should, because it's a dandy game. But in any case, I think you'll be interested in an experience I had while playing not long ago.

I had never played against this particular opponent before, and as we practiced before starting, I felt sure I could beat him. His serve wasn't hard to handle, and he had very little speed on any of his strokes.

Well, we started to play, and I soon discovered that I was being beaten. I put everything I had on every stroke, and banged that little white ball all over the table. Nevertheless, in the end I had only one out of a dozen games—a complete and thorough trouncing.

Afterward, I began to think it over. Why had this chap beaten me, when he didn't seem to have anything on the ball? And then I realized that, while he never hit hard or put much "stuff" on his strokes, he just kept getting the ball back—always getting it back, steadily and consistently.

I think you'll find that those quiet, dependable, unspectacular people win a lot of victories—at table tennis, and at everything else.

Parachute Travels
Far After Release
From Soaring Kite

By RAY J. MARRAN.

If you can release a paper parachute high enough in the air, the parachute will soar through the skies for miles. One of the easiest ways of getting a parachute high above the treetops is with a kite, and illustrating ed is one of the simplest kite string parachute releases that can be made. It consists of a short piece of wire, a piece of firecracker punk, a piece of string and a bent pin. The wire is attached to the kite string near the middle of the kite. The punk is attached to the wire by winding the wire around one end of it. The string is then tied to the punk, and a bent pin for holding the parachute is tied to the other end of the string.

Light the punk with a match and get the kite as high in the air as possible. The punk burns slowly, so you will not have to be in a hurry. When the punk burns to the string it releases the parachute, which will sail away into the distance. The spark on the punk will go out when it reaches the wire coil and the spark on the parachute string will be out long before the parachute reaches the ground, so there is no danger from fire with this kind of parachute release.

Make your parachutes from paper napkins, attaching the string to the corners by tying, or with gummed paper pasted over.

Use a small cork for a weight. Parachutes released in this manner have been known to float for many miles. If you desire to find out how far yours goes, attach a stamped postcard to the parachute beside the cork; asking the finder of the card to return it to you, telling you where he found it.

Trick With Napkin
Is Famous, But It Requires Practice

By THOMAS THE MAGICIAN.

The trick this week is quite famous throughout magic circles and while it does require a little practice to present, when performed correctly it is very mystifying.

Effect: The performer takes a paper napkin and shows it to the audience so that they may see that it has no unusual qualities. Then deliberately tearing it into small pieces, he rolls the pieces into a ball. After dramatically touching this small ball with his magic wand, he unrolls the paper. To the amazement of all present, he shows the napkin restored to its original condition, without a sign of a tear!

Explanation: In this trick you use a duplicate paper napkin which is rolled into a small ball and secretly concealed in the palm of the right hand.

Now show the napkin with a few remarks about its marvelous lasting qualities. Next you tear it to bits, and roll it into a ball which you put in the left hand. (If you are careful about this it will look as if you put it into the right hand.)

Now reach for the magic wand, which has been placed behind some of the right hand. If you are careful about this it will look as if you put it into the right hand.

MISS VIRGINIA ELIZABETH BRANSCOMBE.

UNION SPRINGS, Ala., March 14.—The interest of hosts of friends centers in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Clayton Branscombe, of this city, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Virginia Elizabeth Branscombe, to Harry Furman Dobbs, of Atlanta, the marriage to take place in April.

Miss Branscombe is the eldest daughter of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Clayton Branscombe, of Decatur, Ala., and Miss Forrest Branscombe, of Union Springs, Ala. She has one brother, Richard C. Branscombe Jr., also of Union Springs. Her maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Roderick A. Bethune, pioneer citizens of Bulloch county, Alabama. On her father's side she is the granddaughter of John William and Virginia Thornton Branscombe, both of Union Springs.

Miss Branscombe is a graduate of Florida State College and Grady School of Nursing. She has also had post-graduate work at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, and Emory University, Atlanta. After graduation, Miss Branscombe was head of the education department of the Grady School of Nursing for two years.

Mr. and Mrs. Tenenbaum Celebrate Anniversary.

Of interest to a host of friends in Atlanta and throughout the south, was the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Tenenbaum, which was celebrated on Sunday, at their home on Washington street.

A dinner was given for the immediate family and out-of-town guests, followed by a reception. During the afternoon, several hundred friends called. Misses Alice, Madelyn and Elsie Tenenbaum, grandchildren, presided at the punch bowl.

The color scheme was carried out in white and gold. The table was covered with a Point Venice cloth over gold satin, the centerpiece being of yellow roses, anemones and lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. Tenenbaum are pioneer residents of Atlanta, having come to this city in 1898. Mr. Tenenbaum retired from active business about 10 years ago, but has continued active in communal and religious educational activities.

All their children were with them to celebrate this occasion: Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Tenenbaum, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Tenenbaum, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Tenenbaum, Mary Tenenbaum, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Tenenbaum, of Augusta; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Hurowitz and Mr. and Mrs. Rose S. Hurowitz, of Dan, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kolodkin, of Columbus. Their grandchildren are Max Tenenbaum, of Rock Hill, S. C.; Harold and Leonard Tenenbaum, of Augusta.

Mrs. Calvert Honored By Economic Teachers.

Home economics teachers of Atlanta and Fulton county entertained at a luncheon in honor of Mrs. George E. Calvert, of Oklahoma City, on Friday in the home management department of the O'Ree Junior High school. Members of the board of managers of the fifth district division of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers and the presidents of the Atlanta and Fulton County High School Parent-Teacher Associations were invited.

Mrs. Calvert is president of the Oklahoma Congress of Parents and Teachers and is a former state supervisor of home economics in Oklahoma. She was the main speaker at the recent home-making conference in Millingtonville sponsored by the Georgia Home Economics Association and the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Atlantan Wins Wide Acclaim In Successful New York Play

By Sally Forth.

WHEN MARIE BECKETT attended Washington Seminary she demonstrated her talent in dramatics whenever she appeared in plays. Thus it comes as no surprise to her Atlanta friends that she scored a decided success in the part she played in "Dangerous Curves," one of the recent hits of the New York season, which had its premiere last week at the MacDowell Repertory theater.

In private life Marie is Mrs. Frederick E. Man, wife of the director of the play, who also staged the production. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Beckett, who journeyed to the metropolis to attend the opening of "Dangerous Curves," which was written by J. B. Priestley, a well-known playwright.

As "Owen," the character Marie portrays in the play, she is suspected as the woman who murdered the male character. Exotic and gifted Marie Beckett plays the part in a convincing and compelling manner that won unstinted praise from the critics, who predicted a glamorous future for the erstwhile Atlantan.

Former Atlantans Have Anniversary

UNUSUALLY symbolic and quaint is the engagement ring which Rev. Charles Schilling has presented to his future bride, "Benny" Good, of Cedar-town. For Charles has given his fiancée a dainty gold cross, which is indicative of the religious order of which he is an exponent. Benny is unusually proud of her gift, and she wears the cross upon a delicate gold chain suspended around her neck. This isn't the only touch of sentiment which will make her approaching marriage so delightful for, when the vows are pronounced, Charles will slip an unusually beautiful wedding ring on her finger which belonged to her great-grandmother, the late Mrs. Julius Algonzo Peak, who was before her marriage Miss Martha Woolley.

Among the attendants at the wedding will be Susan Peak and Richard Garlington Jr., whose fathers were ribbon bearers in Benny's mother's wedding. When Benny marches down the aisle, she will be radiantly lovely in the wedding gown belonging to Mrs. Jack Van Lindley of Greensboro, N. C., the former Miss Virginia Hall, of Cedartown. The beautiful cream satin model was worn by Virginia when she married three years ago, and also by Hazel Stamps when she recently became Mrs. Charles Collins. This marriage will be an event of great interest and prominence throughout the state, and Benny will always remember it for its touches of Old World charm and traditional beauty.

SHE walked into Sally's office all out of breath. She was the size and figure of Kate Smith, and she hailed from Winder, Ga. Dropping into the nearest chair, she exclaimed:

"I'm all worn out! It is certainly a job to climb four long flights of stairs!"

"Is the elevator out of order?" queried Sally in distress.

"Why, I didn't stop to see," she answered. "I knew there was an elevator strike on, so I just found the stairs and walked up."

WHEN Mrs. Lewis Little, of Anniston, Ala., the former Sarah Meador, of Atlanta, goes shopping, she often takes her young son, Lewis Jr., with her. Sarah seldom is gone for any length of time, so she just leaves little Lewis sitting in the closed car, from which he is an interested spectator of the comings and goings of his fellow Annistonsians.

Several days ago, Sarah followed her usual procedure, parked in front of a local drug store, and left the baby alone in the car for a few moments. When she returned, she noticed to her surprise that Lewis was standing on the front seat as big as life, and drinking a limeade while he waited.

"Where in the world did you get that drink?" she asked. Lewis grinned proudly and answered "That man over there blew his horn and asked for a limeade, and that boy brought it," he remarked as he pointed at the curb service boy. "So," he continued, "I blew my horn, and asked for a limeade, and I got one, too."

It practically floored his attractive young mother to realize that her baby was old enough to do such a thing, but she is still thankful that the gentleman in the next car didn't order whisky instead of a limeade.

Miss Frances Spinks Weds Mr. Mundy At Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Frances Spinks and Jack Mundy was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Druid Hills Methodist church by Dr. John Brandon Peters before an assemblage of close friends and relatives. Prior to the ceremony Mrs. Beatrice Lamar, a close friend of the bride, played an appropriate program of piano selections.

The pulpit was attractively decorated for the occasion with palms, foliage plants, baskets of Easter lilies and cathedral candelabra in which gleamed white tapers.

The bride was attired in a gray wool coat suit with which she wore a blue chiffon and lace blouse. Her hat was of blue straw and she wore a shoulder bouquet of valley lilies and gardenias. Mrs. J. R. Spinks, the bride's mother, wore a costume of navy blue triple sheer and her hat was of blue straw. Mrs. A. J. Mundy, the groom's mother, was costumed in black crepe and her hat was of black straw. Mr. Mundy and his bride left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip and upon their return they will be at home at 722 Bonaventure avenue.

The O. E. S. chorus, consisting of 15 voices under the direction of Kate Massey, grand organist of Georgia O. E. S., will sing, and other special musical numbers are being arranged.

Stanford-Lanier.

MOUNT VERNON, Ga., March 14. A marriage of interest to friends and relatives was that of Miss Mary Ann Stanford and Donald Alexander Lanier, of Mount Vernon, which took place March 6 at the home of the bride, attended by members of the family. The ceremony was read by Rev. R. L. Robinson, of the Baptist church.

Mrs. Lanier is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Stanford and a young woman of grace and charm. She is a graduate of Brewton-Parker and the Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville. She has taught for several years. She is active in church and social circles.

Mr. Lanier is a son of Colonel and Mrs. A. L. Lanier, of Mount Vernon, and is a successful farmer and stock raiser. He was the first Montgomery county boy to enlist during the World War and saw three and a half years' service in the United States navy, at the side of the "Zim" plantation two miles south of McGregor.

Burney-Grant Wedding Plans Attract Interest of Atlantans

An announcement of interest is that made today of the wedding plans of Miss Helen Burney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Burney, and William King Grant, the marriage to take place on April 4 at 5:30 o'clock at the Druid Hills Baptist church.

The Rev. Dr. Louis D. Newton will officiate in the presence of relatives and a large number of friends.

The charming bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, George W. Burney, and she has chosen for her maid of honor, Miss Gertrude Loxier. Bridesmaids will be Misses Ann Burney, sister of the bride-elect Elizabeth Whitten, Jacqueline Howard, and Mrs. Hugh Mills, of New Bern, N. C. Little Miss Peggy Ann Everett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Everett, will be flower girl.

Ed Grant, brother of the groom, will be best man, and groomsmen will be W. C. Horton, John Lunsford, E. J. Jones, and Lewis Roney, of Winter Park, Fla. Ushers are Robert Burney, brother of the bride-elect, Veldon Sala, Julian Tindall and Oscar Tiger, of Columbus, Ga.

Following the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Burney, parents of the bride-elect, will be hosts at an informal reception at their home, 112 West Davis street, in Decatur, to which only members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests are invited.

Many delightful social affairs have been planned honoring Miss Burney and her fiancé, among which is the party to be given by Mrs. Elinor Williams on March 22 at her home on Huntington road. Miss Elizabeth Whitten will be hostess at a bridge tea on March 27, and Ed Grant, brother of the groom, will entertain at the dance at East Lake Country Club on April 2. Other parties are being arranged, the dates to be announced later.

Out-of-town guests, who will attend the wedding, include Mrs. M. K. Grant, mother of the groom, and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Grant, of Demopolis, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Grant, of Meigs; Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kirven, Clarence Kirven Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Mills, of New Bern, N. C.; Al Mendel, of Charleston, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Cowley, of Anderson, S. C.; P. A. Harrison, of Columbia, S. 'Mother of Georgia Division' Eulogized By Georgia U. D. C. Historian

By Mrs. A. Belmont Dennis, of Covington, Editor Georgia Division U. D. C.

Many requests for data on early presidents of Georgia division, to be used in March programs, have been received. Mrs. Kirby-Smith Anderson, division historian, brings "Mrs. C. Helen Plane," first president of Georgia Division United Daughters of the Confederacy. "Ninety-six years was the span of life allotted to brave little Caroline Helen Jameson Plane—better known as Mrs. C. Helen Plane. Her untiring service in behalf of the cause of the south, and as a pioneer in the Confederate organizations—especially that of the U. D. C., in Georgia and division activities, entitle her to be known as the mother of the Georgia division, of which she was one of its founders, first president and later honorary president for life.

She was outstanding in promoting every interest of the cause and her constructive measures suggested first to the organization were far reaching. She visioned the future—suggested having a state historian and having U. D. C. scholarships for Confederate descendants. She performed many deeds of service for veterans, widows and descendants of veterans, and spent her time planning and working. She was second vice president general and later became honorary president general and was the prime mover in the Stone Mountain project at its beginning.

In Atlanta chapter house is a handsome portrait of Mrs. Plane painted in oils. Her snow-white hair and deep, starry eyes, full of fire, patrician features and poise of head portray her characteristics and speak for itself much of her life's history. The snow-white hair came as the result of the shock sustained when news came of the death of her companion in the first year of the War Between the States, younger in Virginia in 1862.

She was born on a plantation near Tuscaloosa, Ala., March 10, 1829, the only child of a distinguished Alabama family, and a belle of the antebellum south. The family moved to Georgia in her young ladyhood, and she was one of the first women to matriculate at Wesleyan College, Macon. After her marriage to Captain William F. Plane, her home was in Columbus, Ga., and from that city her husband enlisted in "Baker County Fire-Eaters." She remained in Macon. After his death Mrs. Plane dedicated her life to the cause of the Confederacy and was faithful to every duty up to her last. Her passing, on April 25, 1925, removed from our ranks a great and noble woman. Her name has been preserved in a living memorial, that of the Helen Plane Educational Fund, of interest of which is used for the education of girls of Confederate lineage. Macon, Ga., claims her dust. She rests beside her husband in Rose Hill. Her birthday was a special day of observance by Atlanta chapter, and she was showered with flowers and gifts. Chapters everywhere recognize her as a real daughter of the old south to which she belonged.

Hearts are saddened at the passing of Mrs. J. Roy McGinty, society editor, the Calhoun Times, and wife of the editor, J. Roy McGinty. Mrs. McGinty was an ardent U. D. C. worker, and Georgia division extends heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family. On March 11, the Willie Hunt Smith chapter, Barnesville, celebrated its fortieth anniversary. With history as the keynote of the organization, the chapter, city and county co-operated in arranging and displaying articles of historic interest at this novel celebration.

Bryan M. Thomas chapter, Dalton, met at Central club house with its president, Mrs. W. C. Martin, presiding. Miss Grace Bogle reported $14 for the Helen Plane fund, derived from the sale of flags on Georgia Day. Chapter voted to contribute $2.50 for Alexander H. Stephens portrait and $5 to Norman V. Randolph fund. Mrs. F. K. Sims gave an address on Alexander H. Stephens.

Henry D. McDaniel chapter, of Monroe, met at the home of Mrs. John M. Nowell Sr., with Mesdames Frank Nowell, E. L. Almond Sr., C. R. Foster and John Durden, as co-hostesses. The president, Mrs. Ed A. Caldwell, presided over the business session. Mesdames J. W. Butts, W. P. Bell and A. C. Kelly presented the program.

February meeting of the senior group of the Children of Confederacy at Savannah, was held at U. D. C. hall. The president, Miss Virginia Quinan, presided over the meeting and Miss Sara Waters was appointed chairman of program and publicity committee. Miss Georgia Rose Otto was named chairman of the ways and means committee. Misses Blanche Herring and Julie Skeckett to serve with her. Miss Olga Lee Fillay was appointed chaplain. Plans for picnic at Fort Pulaski and Whitcomb are under way. Essays on Alexander H. Stephens and Sidney Lanier were given by Misses Sara Waters and Georgia Rose Otto, and a solo by Miss Virginia Quinan. The meeting closed with the singing of "Dixie."

Robert E. Lee Chapter C. of C. Elberton, met at the home of Miss Penny Williams, with the president, Miss Edna Waldrop, presiding. "Golden Isles of Georgia," by Miss Margaret Burdett; "Facts About Georgia," by Miss Tommie Mardin, director, and other interesting articles by Misses Sara Hutchinson and Lucile Gandy were given.

Ellen Crawford Chapter C. of C. met with Miss Anne Byrd Elmer with the president, Miss LaGrange Trussell, presiding. Chapter voted to send flowers to the director, Miss Rosa Walker Mayne, and a letter from Miss Mayne reminded the chapter of Flag Day, the state U. D. C. essay contest on Stephens, and the chapter contest on "Southern Women During the War." She reminded the chapter of the membership drive and challenged the chapter to have 15 new members by the end of the year. Highlights of the program was a talk by Mrs. Arthur Gannoe on "Sidney Lanier." Others on the program were: Misses Merle Higginbotham, Mary Ann Woods. Hostesses were Misses Anne Ford and Jane Cole, assisted by Misses Anne Cole and Mabel Seay.

February meeting of Sharran, of Upland, met at the home of Mrs. J. D. Hannah, with Mesdames Ernest Key, Grady Fowler and W. B. Robertson as hostesses. The president, Mrs. W. R. Adams, presided. Boxes of candy were sent surviving veterans and widows of veterans in Thomas for St. Valentine's Day. Members stood in silent prayer paying tribute to R. E. Hightower and Dr. C. L. Moore. Mrs. W. L. Jenkins reported on Charles G. West Library fund, and on set of books presented library by the U. D. C. by Mrs. W. E. Adams, who with Mrs. Mark Smith, division recorder of crosses of military service, presented crosses to Mark Smith and Votelle Barron.

Driving Club Dance Jonquil-Silver Tea Assembles Visitors Planned by Circle

Attractive visitors were honor guests last evening at the week-end dinner-dance, given at the Piedmont Driving Club. Forming a congenial group dining together, in which several visitors were central figures, were Miss Peggy Sparks, of Covington, Tenn.; Mrs. W. J. Cody, of Lake Wales, Fla.; Miss Lucile Gettier, of Orlando, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Garrett, of Memphis, Tenn.; Miss Frances North, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. Meredith, Charles B. Parham, Dr. John B. Duncan and Robert Brookshire.

Mr. and Mrs. William Matthews were hosts to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace P. Zachry, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Blair Foster and Mr. and Mrs. William Sibley.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Celebrate Anniversary. CHIPLEY, Ga., March 14.—Of state-wide interest was the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Franklin at their home in Chipley on Sunday afternoon. Guests called to pay tribute to this beloved couple whom have meant much to the social, civic and church life of the town.

Mrs. Henry C. Kimbrough received the guests at the door and Mrs. James P. Williams kept the register. In the hallway auster and ferns were placed in urns and baskets and in the living room roses and yellow calla lilies and spirea carried out the golden color scheme. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Franklin were their children, Mr. and Mrs. Pope Franklin, of Orlando, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Will Franklin, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Franklin, Jr., of Jacksonville, Fla.; and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Watson, of Nashville. The grandchildren, Tyler Franklin, James Franklin and dainty little Miss Daphne Ann Franklin, assisted in the celebration.

Mrs. Aline Stafford, of Atlanta, poured coffee and Mesdames Glenn Potts, James Gator, Nan Murrin, George Cotton, Joe McGee and Miss Mary Cotton assisted in serving. The dining table was covered with a Venetian lace cloth over yellow satin and centered with a plateau of narcissi, golden daffodils and bridal wreath spirea. Yellow candles burned in golden holders and the ceiling cake was embossed in orange blossoms and around it burned 50 golden candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin have been residents of Chipley for 40 years, coming here from Merriweather county. He was in the mercantile business and had quite an extensive farming interest, having retired only a few years.

Mrs. Franklin prior to her marriage was the beautiful Miss Annie Cotton and was born and reared in Harris county. Countless telegrams, messages and flowers were sent expressing sentiment of many whom were unable to attend.

The Mrs. Frank Treadwell Davis circle of the First Presbyterian church will be host at a jonquil silver tea next Wednesday from 4 to 6 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Morris Brandon Jr. on Pine Valley road. Mrs. Louis Pritchard and Mrs. Morris Brandon Sr. will assist in receiving the guests.

A profusion of varieties of jonquils will provide the main decorations for the event, and Mrs. Stephen Barnett will preside at the daintily appointed tea table, which will be centered with a silver bowl of jonquils. Silver candleholders containing light tapers will complete the artistic appointments.

National W.C.T.U. Convention Meets in Tulsa on June 18-19

By FRANCES M. BURGHARD, Macon, State W. C. T. U. Editor. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union holds the National W. C. T. U. convention in Tulsa, Okla., on June 12-18, and not in the fall, as has been the custom. Of course the state president, Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, and there will attend from Georgia, Mrs. Mary Harris Armory will attend the convention and add lustre to the plans. Dr. Armory is not only one of the best lecturers in the national organization, but she is prized as state field secretary. She has been lecturing in the state the past two weeks and addressing district meetings. This month she has organized two local W. C. T. U. One at Nashville, with 27 active members and three honorary members, which has already held a meeting at the residence of Rev. and Mrs. L. E. Williams.

Officers of the Nashville union are: Mrs. I. T. Bragdon, president; Mrs. Bruce Griner, vice president; Mrs. J. T. Phillips, recording secretary; Mrs. S. T. Taggart, corresponding secretary, and Miss Kate Watson, treasurer.

Dr. Armory organized a W. C. T. U. at Adel on Tuesday, with 18 active and one honorary members. Mrs. J. H. Kennon is president; Mrs. I. P. Shepherd, secretary, and Mrs. J. M. Sulton, treasurer.

Current issue of the Georgia Educational Journal, edited by Kyle T. Alfriend, carries the topics for temperance essays in Georgia schools, which have as a general theme, "Death Rides With the Drinking Driver."

The Journal tells of the resolutions adopted by the state Board of Education in regard to the observance of Temperance Day in the public schools of Georgia, the fourth Friday in March, and facts regarding materials for said observance.

The Journal has other information of special interest to the W. C. T. U.

In the program for the G. E. A., it states that Miss Bertha Rachel Palmer will speak Friday evening during the convention, which meets in Macon, April 18-19. Miss Palmer is former state superintendent of education in North Dakota and she has done excellent work as director of the scientific temperance instruction department of the National W. C. T. U. She speaks at the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, in Macon, April 12-15.

The W. C. T. U. is glad that the church is stressing the teaching of what alcohol is and what it does. In training schools of the Methodist church a course is being given on alcohol education in the local church. The writer had the privilege of attending one of these classes recently. There were six ministers, lawyers, a college professor, church and day school teachers, W. C. T. U. workers, young people and others. Rev. G. E. Clary was the teacher, assisted by Professor Almon, head of the chemistry department of Wesleyan College. Another evening Mrs. O. A. Park, lawyer, was the teacher; while another session, Dr. H. C. Atkinson taught from a physician's viewpoint.

Armory-Conyue W. C. T. U., of Augusta, had a Frances Willard program at the St. Luke Methodist church. The Salvation Army band played selections and a duet by Captain and Mrs. Longino was enjoyed. Rev. B. F. Mize led the devotions. A violin solo, by Miss Violet Heath, and a song, by Frances Willard, a solo, "Lead On, O King Eternal," by Mrs. G. W. Harrelly, were featured.

Miss Nell Moyer was in charge of a symposium on Frances Willard, many-sided character, was presented by Miss Dorothy Benton. Miss Sarah Williams, Miss Elmer McElveen and Miss Mildred Baber.

Curtis-Dexter Plans Announced Today

Cordial interest is centered in the wedding plans of Miss Elizabeth Curtis, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Raymond Curtis, and Richard Martin Dexter. The wedding will take place on Sunday, April 5, at the home of the bride-elect's parents at 1064 East Clifton road. The bride-elect is the only daughter of her parents, her mother having been Miss Rubie Davies, of Atlanta. Miss Curtis was graduated from Girl's High school, having attained Cum Laude honors there. She later studied at Brenau College and will receive her C. S. B. degree from the Evening School of the University of Georgia in June. She is a member of the Phi Chi Theta sorority, Delta Mu Delta and the Hilarian Club.

Mr. Martin is the only son of Mrs. Dana Kilcrease, of Atlanta, and R. P. Dexter, of Gulfport, Miss. He was educated at Baylor Institute in Chattanooga, later attending the University of Alabama. He is descended from the prominent Martin and Dexter families of Montgomery, Ala.

The wedding service will be read by Dr. M. A. Cooper, of the West End Baptist church, in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends. The bride-elect will have as her only attendant Miss Anne Embury and will be given in marriage by her father. The groom-elect will have Dana Kilcrease as his best man.

The young couple will leave immediately after the ceremony for a wedding trip and will reside in Atlanta.

Buckeye Woman's Club

Buckeye Woman's Club will have an all-day sewing on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Robert H. Vogel at 3487 Wieuka road. Take cars marked "Buckhead-Oglethorpe" on West Peachtree and ride to junction of Peachtree road and Wieuka road, where automobiles will meet street cars. The sewing is in the interest of Atlanta Branch Needlework Guild of America and full attendance is requested.

Seen the Star?" while Miss Dorothy Pardue and Miss Mary Etta Johnson displayed a Willard centenary star, and Mrs. Remer Brown said the points stood for the spiritual education, alcohol education, character education, citizenship education and peace education, with explanation about each.

Resolutions were passed commending the chief of police and his men and other city officials for their law-enforcement crusade, and requesting that no hard liquor licenses be granted in the city or county. The audience rose en masse for the adoption of the resolutions.

Artist Tells Amusing Incidents Of Career as Prima-Ballerina

MRS. BRANNAN LESENE, THE FORMER MISS DOROTHEA KANZLER.

By BELLE MEADOR. When Dorothea Kanzler dances her audience is always enthralled with the exuberant vitality and piquant charm of her interpretations. For she is endowed with the remarkable faculty of projecting her fascinating personality into a nationally recognized expressionistic art. In private life, this talented ballerina is Mrs. Brannan Lesesne, and a popular member of the younger married contingent in Atlanta.

The proper lighting effect and impression of the dance as a whole, she states, "is the main worry of many."

Phi Sigma Kappas Plan Celebration

The Kappa Deuteron chapter of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity will hold its annual Founders' Day banquet at the Atlanta Athletic Club on March 15. The entire active chapter, the pledges and many of the alumni will attend.

Charles H. Huff, vice president of the national chapter, will present the scholarship cup, which was won by the chapter for maintaining the highest scholastic standing of the fraternity in the southern region during the past year. Several members of the Georgia Tech faculty have been invited to speak.

The fraternity was founded at Massachusetts State College on March 15, 1873. The Kappa Deuteron chapter was installed at Georgia Tech on April 7, 1923. Henry M. Powell, chapter adviser, will act as toastmaster.

For the slightest mishap in stage accessories, costume, or lighting may cause an otherwise vivid impression to fall flat.

Mrs. Lesesne is still afforded much amusement at the memory of an accident of this type, which occurred during her portrayal of the "Fra Angelico" at the widely-known Pasadena community playhouse in California. She was appearing with Serge Uralinsky, who is universally acknowledged as the world's greatest male dancer, and his ballet, for which she was a soloist.

"My costume was superb," she enthusiastically reminisced. "It was of gorgeous pink tulle, which formed an ethereal cloud over a close-fitting gown of phosphorescent material. But the crowning touch was a halo, which was wired to my hair. The lights were arranged to give the halo a soft glow above my head. Everything was fine until the close of the scene. A climax of the dance. I bowed my head only to hear, to my amazement, a loud crash as my halo fell to the platform."

Although this accident evoked loud laughter from the onlookers, it did not interfere with the thunder of applause, with which Mrs. Lesesne has always been received. Her vibrant off-stage personality, which has endeared her to so many friends since her residence here, is her chief asset.

Johnson-Sanders.

Mrs. F. E. Sanders, of Columbia, Ala., announces the marriage of her daughter, Estelle, to George A. Johnson, which took place Tuesday afternoon, March 10.

The wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. L. E. Andrews, in Ozark, Ala., in the presence of close relatives and friends. Dr. P. S. Hudson, pastor of the Ozark Methodist church, read the marriage vows.

The bride was becomingly attired in a dress of aqua crepe with harmonizing accessories.

upon the stage, where she displays it to perfection.

At one time when Mrs. Lesesne was appearing at the Metropolitan, a distinguished looking gentleman came into her room to offer his congratulations upon her impressive performance. As Mrs. Lesesne was hurrying to the stage to resume her ballet, she scarcely glanced at the visitor, and merely shrugged her shoulders in acknowledgment of the tribute. After the gentleman departed, one of the people in the room remarked in consternation, "Why, Dorothea, that was George Arliss."

This has always been a regrettable incident to Mrs. Lesesne, for she confesses that George Arliss is one person whose acquaintance she would like to have cultivated.

Her art is of major interest to this talented newcomer, and she has practiced strenuously for her coming presentation to the Atlanta audience. Her appearance on March 17 at the Atlanta Woman's Club will be the final feature of the season's program presented here by the Atlanta Music Club.

Mrs. Lesesne is tall and graceful in appearance, and her gray-green eyes are in effective contrast to her chestnut hair. She is possessed of great magnetism, and when she becomes excited, she often unconsciously illustrates her words with a shrug of her shoulder or the movement of her hands. She is the daughter of Mrs. Reinhold Kanzler, of Portland, Ore., and the late Dr. Kanzler, who was nationally known as a surgeon, being an honorary member of Mayo Brothers clinic. She has resided here since her marriage during the latter part of last April.

Purim Ball Is Set On Tuesday Evening At Shrine Mosque

The Congregation Shearith Israel and the Shearith Israel Sisterhood will sponsor the third annual Purim ball and bazar on Tuesday at the Shrine mosque at 8 o'clock. Proceeds of the ball and bazar go toward the maintenance of the Shearith Israel synagogue, one of the leading orthodox congregations in the south.

The committee in charge of the Purim ball and bazar reports that this year's ball and bazar will prove a great attraction. The bazar will include a country store and other interesting novelties and features. Music will be furnished by a well-known orchestra, one of the outstanding musical organizations in Atlanta. The price of admission is 50 cents per couple and tickets may be obtained from members of the committee or officers of the congregation or sisterhood, or they may be purchased at the door.

Members of the Jewish community of Atlanta are urged to attend and aid in the maintenance of one of the leading synagogues in the Jewish community of the south. The synagogue is greatly dependent for its financial assistance on the proceeds of this ball and bazar and it is urgent therefore that the whole Jewish community assist by attendance and participation in this annual affair.

A feature of the ball and bazar will be a Queen Esther contest, in which contestants chosen from the graduating and Bible classes of the Shearith Israel Sunday school will compete for the honor of being Queen Esther. This contest has created enthusiasm and the winner will be announced at the ball, at which time she will be crowned queen with a grand march.

Hen Rides Bumper.

Charles Gustafson, of Astoria, Ore., has a large Plymouth Rock ben which is adept at hitch-hiking, or riding on the bumper of Gustafson's automobile when he goes to town. The hen is forced to beat her wings violently when the car lurches, to retain her balance, but the bowl seldom is thrown from the machine.

Miss Grace Mandeville, of Carrollton, is betrothed to George W. Christian, of Northport, Ala. Their marriage will be solemnized at a June ceremony. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Appleton Mandeville of Carrollton. Photo by Asasno.

The engagement of Miss Sarah Elizabeth Good, of Cedartown, is announced today to the Rev. Canon Charles F. Schilling, of Atlanta and Marietta. The marriage takes place on May 27 at St. James church in Cedartown. Canon Schilling is canon of the Pro Cathedral of St. Philip in Atlanta, where he and his bride will live after their marriage.

Miss Elizabeth Dawson will wed Francis C. Scofield, of Lanham, Md., and Washington, D. C., the date of the marriage to be announced later. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas C. Dawson and the late Mr. Dawson. Photo by Asasno.

Miss Mandeville Will Be Bride Of Mr. Christian

CARROLLTON, Ga., March 14.—No announcement of the season carries more social import and more genuine interest than does that made today by Mr. and Mrs. John Appleton Mandeville of the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Grace Callaway Mandeville, to George William Christian, of Northport, Ala. The marriage will unite two of the south's most prominent families and is scheduled to take place on June 30.

The lovely bride-elect is the eldest daughter of her parents. Her mother was before her marriage Miss Lula Callaway, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Howard Robert Callaway, of Atlanta, and one of the most popular belles of the state. On her paternal side Miss Mandeville is the granddaughter of Mrs. Le Roy Clifton Mandeville and the late Mr. Mandeville, of Carrollton. Her only brother is John A. Mandeville Jr., a student at the University of Georgia, and her sisters are Miss Jane Mandeville, a student at the University of Alabama, and little Miss Anne Mandeville, of Carrollton.

The bride-to-be bears the name of her maternal aunt, Mrs. G. M. Stout, whom she has often visited at her home in Atlanta, where she is widely known among younger society members. She is also the niece of Mrs. Charles Henderson, of Carrollton, Mrs. J. O. Newell, of Gainesville, and Le Roy Clifton Mandeville, of Clearwater, Fla.

Procathedral Is Scene Of LaHatte-Morris Rites

The marriage of Miss Amelia LaHatte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. T. LaHatte, to Tillman Morris was impressively solemnized yesterday afternoon at the Procathedral of Saint Philip, on Peachtree road. Dean Raimundo de Ovies, pastor of the church, officiated in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

The altar of the church was artistically decorated with large baskets of white Easter lilies, interspersed before a background of palms and smilax. Seven-branched candelabra, containing lighted white tapers, gave a soft glow to the scene. Pews for the immediate families and close friends were indicated by large white satin bows, and other Easter lilies were attractively arranged at the sides of the altar.

Ushers were Halcott Toss, James K. Rankin, William Funkhouser Jr., and A. L. Groce, and groomsmen were Arthur LeCraw, Robin Brookshire and Stan Ashley.

Miss Clara Lambdin was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Misses Frances North, Elizabeth Banks, of Raleigh, N. C., and Mrs. Delkin Jones. They were gowned alike in becoming models of Kelly

Good-Schilling Engagement Carries Interest of Society

CEDARTOWN, Ga., March 14.—Enlisting the sincere interest of a host of friends throughout the state is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wyatt Good of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sarah Elizabeth Good, to the Rev. Canon Charles Frederick Schilling, of Atlanta and Marietta. The marriage will be an important event taking place on May 27 at St. James church here.

A descendant of Virginia colonial families, the lovely bride-elect traces her ancestry on both sides to include illustrious figures in the history of Georgia, South Carolina and Virginia. Her mother is the former Miss Martha Josephine Chapman, only daughter of Major William Allen Chapman, United States Army, retired, and Mary Elizabeth

Peck, of Cedartown. On her paternal side, the bride-elect is the granddaughter of the late John Edward Good and Sarah Frances Good, of Cedartown.

Miss Good is especially gifted in dramatics, being a graduate in dramatic art from Wesleyan Conservatory in Macon, with the class of 1933. Since finishing school she has taught dramatics in Cedartown and Rockmart. Her brothers are Samuel Wyatt Good Jr. and William Allen Good, of Cedartown.

Canon Schilling is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edward Schilling, of Marietta. His mother is the former Mary Allen Henderson, daughter of Charles E. Henderson, and the former

National Business Women's Week Features Program

The program for the eighth annual National Business Women's Week, March 15-21, will open officially at 9 o'clock this morning with the dedication of an emblem road sign erected at the intersection of Bolton and Marietta roads. Miss Anne Slitton, chairman of the emblem committee, will be in charge of the dedication services. The city of Atlanta will be represented by Aubrey Millam, councilman from the eighth ward, and by Bolton, by Alex W. Whitely, and Fulton county, by Ralph Ramsey, representative, and Thomas W. Moore, member of the board of education.

The members of the Business and Professional Women's Club will attend the 11 o'clock services at the First Methodist church. The Rev. Edward G. Mackey will deliver a special message in honor of the group.

The members of the emblem committee and the hospitality committee will keep open house at club headquarters, 703-4 Grand Theater building, this afternoon from 4-6 o'clock, honoring members of the club, the members of other organizations and the business and professional women of the city who call during that time.

Members of the committee are Misses Lota Knighton, Grace Hendricks, Ethel Holbrook, Mary Cavanaugh and Annie Slitton, chairman of the emblem committee, and Misses Blanche Wood, Louise Gilbert, Elizabeth Simpson, Mrs. B. L. Pariss and Mrs. George Gillon, chairman of the hospitality committee.

The first of a series of personality lectures to be given by Miss Lauretta Fancher will be heard at club headquarters Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Miss Fancher, who has had extensive experience as an associate editor, writer and teacher, is giving the course to various groups of businesswomen in the state. The six lectures cover personality outside, personality inside, inferiorities, extroverts and introverts, getting along with people, your personality and your life.

med with rows of rosettes similar to those on the skirts. They carried arm bouquets of yellow jonquills tied with yellow tulle ribbon. They wore matching Kelly green picture hats banded with yellow velvet ribbon, and their shoes were yellow.

The radiant bride entered with her father, M. T. LaHatte, and she was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Charlie Parham. She wore a lovely gown of white satin, fashioned along close-fitting lines, and with a built-in train flowing gracefully from the skirt. The neck of the gown was square and the close-fitting sleeves were trimmed with rows of satin-covered buttons. Her tulle veil was clasped to her head in cap effect, with clusters of white orange blossoms at the sides of the face and a garland of blossoms at the back of the head. Her only ornament was a lovely diamond necklace, belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. George Mau. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of white lilacs and valley lilies tied with white satin ribbons.

Mrs. M. T. LaHatte, mother of the bride, was lovely in a model of pale blue chiffon with gracefully flowing long sleeves. Her accessories were beige, and she wore a shoulder spray of gardenias.

Following the wedding, Stan Ashley, Robin Brookshire and Charles Parham complimented the bride and groom at a reception at their home on Pine Valley road. The hosts were assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Willis Cody, of Lake Wales, Fla. The entire home was artistically decorated with a profusion of jonquills and other spring flowers, and the dining room was arranged in the bridal motif of white and green. The bride's table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, embossed with pink rosettes and green leaves, and the cake was topped with a miniature bride and groom standing in a basket of pink rosebuds. Mrs. Clark Deichler kept the bride's book and a small number of friends of the honor guests were invited to attend.

The bride and groom departed for a wedding trip to Florida and Cuba, and upon their return they will reside in Atlanta. The bride traveled in a charming ensemble of pink wool crepe with a three-quarter swagger coat to match, and her accessories were of beet red. She wore a shoulder spray of bronze orchids.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Henry Whitehead, Miss Mamie Whitehead, and Mrs. Edward Whitehead, of Macon; Mr. and Mrs. Saxton Daryle and Crawford Daryle Jr., of Birmingham, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. Willis Cody, of Lake Wales, Fla.; Miss Lucille Gettier, of Orlando, Fla., and Miss Elizabeth Banks, of Raleigh, N. BRING US THE HARD-TO-FIT

HARD-TO-FIT is an old excuse fostered by shoe manufacturers who refuse to recognize the fact that feet do differ in shape as well as in size.

ARCH-RELIEF shoes are made in not one but many lasts—to fit all foot shapes. We have yet to see the normal foot that we cannot fit to perfection.

North Georgia Methodist W. M. S. Mrs. Ben Thompson To Preside
Will Meet in Dalton April 7, 8, 9 Over Baptist Meet in Thomasville

"Past Achievements—Stepping Stones to New Adventures" is the challenging theme chosen for the 20th annual meeting of the Methodist W. M. S. of the North Georgia conference to be held April 7, 8, 9 at First Methodist church, Dalton. The program cover page will carry a series of stepping stones in gold, giving the steps from "Spiritual Rebirth" to the "Perfect Life." The capstone will give the scriptural culmination of spiritual attainment as expressed in Jesus' Sermon on the Mount. "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." The conference hymn will be "Love Divine." The program committee is composed of Mesdames L. M. Atwell, M. E. Tilly, E. W. Brogdon, John N. McEachern Sr., D. R. Little, Emmett Quinn and Edgar N. Good.

Mrs. J. W. Perry, president of the Woman's Missionary Council of the Southern Methodist church, will lead the noon devotionals. Her subjects will be: "New Adventures in Personal Living" and "New Adventures in Citizenship and World Co-operation." The year 1936 is the 50th anniversary of the beginning of home mission work by the Methodist church. "Lift Up Thine Eyes," directed by Mrs. Regina Rambo Benson, of Marietta, will be staged on Tuesday evening, April 7. On the following evening, Mrs. M. E. Tilly, of Atlanta, assisted by Mrs. Hugh Carthers, of Winder, and the 11 district secretaries will present a program showing the contributions of each district to the conference in 1935. This will take the place of the regular annual reports.

City mission work in Atlanta and Augusta will be represented by Deaconesses Mary Lou Bond, Clio Barber, Gladys Aldred, Thelma Stevens and Dorothy Weber. Miss Bert Winter, North Georgia conference rural worker, will speak. Missionaries to foreign countries who will take part on the program are: Misses Kate Cooper, Lucy Jim Webb, Mozelle Tumlin, Layonna Glenn and Mrs. Frank Ferguson, formerly Miss Ellsworth, of Atlanta; and A. M. Pierce, presiding elder of the Dalton district, will hold the early morning communion service on April 8, assisted by other Dalton ministers.

At a recent meeting of the W. M. S. of Colonial Hills Baptist church a business and professional women's circle was organized. This circle meets Thursday at 7 o'clock at the church.

Rich's Hat Shop presents in person that noted young hat designer . . .

Marion Vallé

Here Monday and Tuesday that you may see her newest creations and a group of Paris originals; even some advance styles for summer wear. . . Displayed by models, during both days.

You have seen her designs many times in Vogue, Harper's... She created several of the far-famed "Lucky Strike" hats.

A month or so ago she was in Paris, seeing the new... Then to New York, to translate it to American taste... Thence here, her first visit so far south.

Her credo: Be tailored, on the street. Be ultra-feminine, everywhere else...

She will be happy to help you personally in your selection from the large group of original models, all ready to wear. Also special orders taken.

BOOTS AND SADDLES FOR ATLANTANS AS SPRING ARRIVES

Photographed by Kenneth Rogers

MRS. WINSHIP NUNNALLY, photographed with her beautiful mount in the riding ring at Roxboro stables.

THROUGH GEORGIA PINES. A riding party leaving the Spring Hill stables of F. M. Butler, on Wieuca road. Bridle paths of north Fulton county are dotted with horse lovers since balmy spring days have arrived. Left to right, Miss Effie Butler, Frank L. Lester, Mrs. O. W. Miller and Mrs. L. B. McMullon.

RECOGNIZE THIS?—Here is all that is left of the old city auditorium. About $250,000 is being spent by the WPA to remodel the structure. It will be one of the show places of the city and will fill a long-felt civic need when completed. (J. T. Holloway)

HERE IS A CINEMA CINDERELLA IN REAL LIFE. When Miss Mary Ellen Higgins, 18, was dismissed three weeks ago from an Indianapolis orphanage where she lived since infancy, movie scouts saw her and she is now one of the glorified American girls.

WORLD'S MEANEST DOG—"Tag" is a meanie. He is assistant dog catcher of New Castle, Pa., and works a slick confidence game on his pals. He stops in front of an innocent victim's home—wags his tail in his most friendly fashion and lures the innocent victim into the street. Then he grabs the little fellow as shown above and holds him until his dog catcher master comes along. After a roar of anger from New Castle dog owners, the mayor has agreed to take official action against the betrayer.

WHO KILLED ADDIE GOTHORN, BROADWAY
SUPER-CHISELER — AND WHY?
THAT IS TRACY'S PRESENT PROBLEM.

ALL RIGHT, FRANE, YOU'RE CASHIER IN BINDIE'S RESTAURANT.
NOW REPEAT AGAIN JUST WHAT YOU KNOW ABOUT THIS CASE.

A CALL CAME IN OVER
THE TELEPHONE AT THE CASHIER'S DESK ABOUT NINE O'CLOCK OF
THE EVENING GOTHORN WAS SHOT.

YES.

THE VOICE ASKED IF
GOTHORN WAS IN THE RESTAURANT.
I SAID NO, AND THE PARTY ASKED ME IF I WOULD TELL GOTHORN TO CALL ROOM 404 AT THE CENTER
SHORE HOTEL WHEN HE CAME IN.

I DELIVERED
THE MESSAGE. HE CALLED AND THEN WALKED OUT.

AND IT WAS JUST TEN MINUTES
AFTER GOTHORN WALKED OUT OF
THERE THAT HE WAS FOUND IN THE HOTEL'S SERVANTS' ENTRANCE SHOT.

TRACY!
I JUST CALLED THE CENTER SHORE

THE BELLBOY
WHO WAITED ON THE OCCUPANTS OF ROOM 404 THE NIGHT
GOTHORN WAS SHOT?

THE MANAGER
SAID THE BELL HOP IS THERE NOW, AND
FOR US TO COME OVER AND GET HIM.

OKAY—
LET'S GO.

HELLO,
PIERRE.

OH YES, MR. TRACY.
THE BELL HOP YOU WISH TO SEE IS LORIMOR. HE'S DOWN IN THE LOCKER ROOM CHANGING HIS CLOTHES AND WAITING FOR YOU.

OH, LORIMOR!
HEY, LORIMOR!

THAT'S FUNNY...
HE CAME DOWN
MINUTE AGO TO

HE'S NOT IN THE WASH ROOM,
DICK?

WELL—I'LL BE...?
YES, THAT'S HIS LOCKER ALL RIGHT—
NUMBER 12.

LOCKED
I GUESS.

OW-W!
LOOK!

BELL HOP, PIERRE.

ON THE TRAIL

DICK THRUST OUT HIS HAND TO RESTRAIN TARZAN. "YOU CAN'T FACE GORREY'S CUT-THROATS ALONE. YET—I CAN'T LEAVE GLO--"

HIDING HER TERROR WITH A BRAVE SMILE, GLORIA INTERRUPTED: "GO WITH HIM, DICK. DON'T THINK OF ME."

DICK WAS TORN BETWEEN TWO DUTIES, BUT TARZAN SOLVED HIS DILEMMA. "TIME IS PRECIOUS. I TRAVEL FASTER ALONE."

"GET THE MAPS AND YOU WILL SHARE THE TREASURE," DICK PROMISED. "WHAT ARE THESE MAPS?" THE APE-MAN ASKED CASUALLY.

"MY FATHER EXPLORED THIS COUNTRY," SAID DICK. "BEFORE HE DIED HERE HE SENT HIS PAPERS TO THE CONSUL ON THE COAST, WHO SENT THEM TO ME."

"HIS SECRET MAPS INDICATED A VAST GOLD SOURCE TO THE EAST. THOSE ARE THE MAPS GORREY STOLE," DICK CONCLUDED.

"IF GORREY GETS THE GOLD HE WILL USE IT FOR HIS EVIL SCHEMES," GLORIA EXCLAIMED. "HE WILL NOT GET IT!" TARZAN REPLIED GRIMLY.

NOW TARZAN ORDERED THE APES TO ESCORT HIS FRIENDS TO THEIR CAMP. THEN HE DEMANDED: "WHERE IS BOHGDU?"

BOHGDU LIMPED FROM A BAMBOO CLUMP, CALLING WEAKLY: "WOUNDED, MASTER, FIGHTING FOR YOU. WHEN WELL, BOHGDU FOLLOW."

GLORIA SHUDDERED AS THE APE BODYGUARD SURROUNDED HER. "HAVE NO FEAR," SAID TARZAN. "I AM THEIR KING. THEY WILL OBEY ME."

THEN HE TURNED AND VANISHED INTO THE TREES, TO PIT HIS SOLITARY STRENGTH AGAINST THE MARAUDERS.

....WHILE GORREY'S BAND PLUNGED SWIFTLY, WARILY THROUGH THE JUNGLE, PREPARED TO KILL ANYONE WHO OPPOSED THEM.

THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER

Personal, but Not Confidential

gave a premiere the other night that was, from the standpoint of celebrities present, more exciting than Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times."

Wanger offered his all-color out-of-door drama, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," at the Westwood Village theater. It turned out to be a brilliant first night, with only the press invited. As a matter of fact, the reporters were as surprised as Wanger when, looking over the reserved section, they saw a list of celebrities that would have brought in millions if they had been working in one film.

Claudette Colbert was mobbed in the foyer and Jeannette MacDonald, who came along a little later, was rushed like a football hero.

Douglas Fairbanks and Doug, Jr., with two beautiful ladies, arrived a little late. Chairs were placed for them in the aisles.

Scattered about the audience were Sylvia Sydney, Henry Fonda, Fred Stone and Fred MacMurray, principals in the film. Marlene Dietrich, Rouben Mamoulian, Gregory LaCava, Bill Seiter, Marion Nixon, Charles Boyer, Margaret Sullivan, Tom Brown, Alexander Bell (Technicolor expert), Jock Whitney and Jerome Beatty were present.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is as full as usual of hill-billy expressions, but the color is excellent and exciting. Another year and we shall see what we shall see, in color, thanks to Jock Whitney and Walter Wanger.

A reporter from the east, who prides himself on being able to interview the most difficult people in Hollywood, approached Ronald Colman on the set of "Under Two Flags."

Engaging in what he felt was a line that would interest the star, he thought he was "going to town" when Colman beamed affably.

Talking a mile a minute, the journalist was sure he would have a story, until Colman, excusing himself, said, with his charming smile: "I'm so sorry. I am frightfully susceptible to draughts; and I feel one."

SOME time ago I met a delightful young man by the name of Hugh Enfield. He introduced me to the best book I have read for two years.

The other day I saw him ploughing around in the mud, on a horse, at Warner Bros., where he was engaged in "Sons o' Guns," with Joe E. Brown.

Imagine my surprise when he was introduced to me as Craig Reynolds! We collapsed in laughter and he explained that his name had been changed by a numerologist. Nor was that all. His mustache had been shaved off and he was about to embark on a leading role in "Murder in the Big House."

There was nothing to say. All I could do was ask him if he knew any other good books. He didn't. I did. I told him to read "My Country and My People," by Lin Yutang. He promised to do so but he won't. He has bought a horse, instead.

Madge Evans is giving a series of wild duck and rare fish dinners these days. Her brother is on a vacation in Guaymas, Mexico, and ships his daily catch back by air, dressed and packed in ice.

Katharine Hepburn is leaving no stone unturned to make "Mary of Scotland" her most successful picture. Already she has tried and discarded 20 coiffures. Sixteen marvelous costumes have been made for her and John Ford is trying all sorts of effects in an effort to help her achieve her most outstanding role.

Star and director have been working in the RKO-Radio studios from eight in the morning until six at night for the past week. If anyone can make Hepburn a proper "Mary, Queen of Scots," it will be John Ford. More power to him.

By Grace Wilcox

Screen and Radio Hollywood Bureau

From London, or Elstree, to be exact, comes this story:

A Cockney by the name of Grossman has the job of showing visitors around the studios. He is a delightful person and knows celebrities from all over the world, who have sent him pictures, autographs, and stamps.

Recently the Crown Prince of Greece visited the studios and Grossman turned himself loose to be agreeable.

Squinting through the finders of the camera, he explained how the sound from the sound machine synchronized with the voices of the people on the film. "It all conjoins and conjuncts," he went on, as the Crown Prince looked at everything. "But of course," he said, "no matter how elaborate my explanations, it will be all Greek to you!"

IT IS absolutely necessary for me to include this note in my page this week. I have found, in the person of an old and dear friend, an anomaly among women. Her name is Grace Bundy and she hails from Detroit.

Immediately on her arrival I asked her, as is my custom with my friends, if she wouldn't like to lunch with me at one of the studios:

"No," answered Mrs. Bundy, surprisingly. "I'm sorry, but I am not at all interested in seeing the stars or players in real life. I am quite content to see them on the screen and read about them. I'm sure a studio would bore me to tears."

She didn't know she was setting a precedent in revolutionary attitudes. There was one trouble with her decision: she left me with no aces to play on guests from out of town. I am taking her to the Vine Street Brown Derby whether she likes it or not.

At the Beverly Brown Derby I saw Reginald Denny paying marked attention to a very pretty young woman who I thought must be his wife. No. The lovely lady was his daughter and Reggie, proud as Punch, came along past my table and said: "What do you think of my baby? She's frightfully ambitious and is playing at the Pasadena Community Playhouse." The "baby" smiled sweetly and said, "Oh, Father! Don't brag!"

Can it be possible that the actress with the most gorgeous house in the film colony, the largest emerald, the most perfect white diamond, has simple tastes?

I refer to Marion Davies.

It seems she will have nothing to do with fancy make-up kits, containing drawers and compartments for various creams, powders, brushes and mirrors.

No. Her only make-up kit consists of a little white wooden box, eight by ten inches, containing equipment and accessories as simple as the box itself.

Her garage is said to accommodate 26 cars!

Lyle Talbot is taking his career in hand. For two years now he has been appearing in straight dramatic parts, without saying a word to anyone about his voice possibilities.

Lately he sang for some of the Warner Bros. studio executives and they were astonished at the power and range of his voice. Until now he has said little about the fact that he studied under several well known eastern voice teachers and that he had every intention of landing in grand opera, eventually.

Lyle, in his usual comedy vein, describes his voice as a bathroom baritone, but those who have heard him sing are not inclined to pass over the second Talbot talent so lightly.

LET'S HOPE Guy Kibbee is no Samson. And that Mrs. Kibbee doesn't turn out to be a Delilah.

Anticipating the start of his next picture, "Big Business," the rotund comedian, who had grown a beard for "Captain January," had planned a quiet evening at home with his wife and his barber.

Mrs. Kibbee, however, saw possibilities in the affair and staged a surprise party, with members of the cast as guests.

The genial Mr. Kibbee was agreeably surprised. June Travis, Warren Hull, Dick Foran and Marie Wilson gave the comedian several razors, strops and face lotions, while Guy reciprocated with a wisp of beard.

As usual, the barber looked non-committal, but he was heard to remark sotto voce: "Movin' pitcher people are sure crazy!"

"Flies—where are the flies?" inquired Director Frank Lloyd, ready to shoot a scene in the Algerian market place for "Under Two Flags."

Great consternation on the part of the property man, who had been having a terrible time trying to find some flies.

"Right here, sir," he said, removing the top from a jar and letting a couple of hundred flies loose to lend realism.

"But don't ask me for any more," he urged. "I'll have to go to the barnyards of the dairy in Van Nuys and it is 15 miles away!"

Since "Petrified Forest," all the girls are asking me if I know Humphrey Bogart, the killer. Slinking under the table, I have to admit I don't. I'm afraid to, if you want the truth. I know my limits. The Humphrey Bogarts of this world exceed them.

Just the same, I'm disappointed. It turns out that Mr. Bogart is innocent of all wrong intentions. In fact, he appeared at the Screen Actors' Ball in the role of an autograph collector. Good heavens, can you imagine that menacing guy mincing up to some young thing and asking her to sign his autograph book? I'm discouraged.

LEO CARRILLO tells this one. Believe he is ribbing the leading characters or that he is telling the truth, just as you please. From his bland expression, I can't tell. Anyway it's a sad, sad story.

Leo made a trip with Clark Gable and Jack Conway, as guests of the Mexican Government.

"We went to a hacienda," he says, "to shoot. Gable and Conway found themselves a swell spot, their guns popping merrily. An overseer came with a polite request. They were shooting away at a piece of statuary, a replica of a cougar that crouched, life-like, in the shrubbery of the hacienda."

When Jean Arthur and Bill Powell met to go to work in "One to Two," for RKO-Radio (both of them are on loan from their own studios) they looked at each other and burst out laughing.

"Gee whiz," exclaimed Powell, "I haven't worked with you since the Philo Vance days for Paramount."

"That's right," replied Jean, noted for her snappy comebacks, "but I see you're still doing detectives. I've been a wife and mother since then."

(Needless to say, she meant on the screen.)

Charles Rosher, who photographed "Little Lord Fauntleroy," is not sure Freddie Bartholomew isn't the greatest actor in Hollywood. "He never blew up in a single line, seems to know instinctively what to do about camera angles and is an angel to work with," declares Rosher, whose experiences in Hollywood would make a book.

Living Up to Myths

by Ronald Colman

FOR MORE than 10 years now, I have been observing the neglect accorded a group of men who deserve better of Hollywood. I refer to the publicity men or press agents.

Being paid to publicize producers, directors and stars, they are given no extra emolument for reporting their own good deeds in a town of superlatives. They never write of their talents in relieving the boredom of countless players, yet the players are extremely grateful, whenever they think of it.

Imagine, if you can, a dull, foggy day in Southern California. Actors and actresses not actually engaged in making a picture find themselves wandering about aimlessly, seeking excitement, reading magazines or light literature and fighting boredom that eventually catches up with them.

On such days as this, the genius press agent springs to life. It takes a fog, a heavy rain or a good wind to send him leaping into action. As long as the sun shines, he confines himself to his various literary labors, but on a stormy day, he becomes dramatic. A wild idea comes to him and he carries it out—on someone.

THE "SOMEONE" usually turns out to be a player and more often than not the very player who is looking for excitement. Fireworks follow and when I happen to be their victim, they manage to bring a synthetic sun into my living room and to make me feel that at last I am due for some sort of recognition heretofore denied me.

Mind you, I have no illusions about press agents, necessary as they are in a film player's career. I don't, for instance, believe these facile gentlemen can make a star more important than his actual worth. Eventually he will shake down to his own level, no matter how many adjectives are used to boost him.

For the sake of putting some sense into this article I wish to relate several incidents which have affected me recently. It all started on one of those dark, cheerless days when the publicity men come to life with a bang.

THE morning after I had started work in "Under Two Flags," for Twentieth Century-Fox, I read an item in my breakfast paper which informed me I had generously volunteered my time between scenes to the coaching of Miss Rosalind Russell in Arabian and Algerian customs.

"That was a very nice thing for you to do," said my housekeeper, who always manages to get to the morning paper before I do. "Always helping people, you are, Mr. Colman, and kind it is of you, indeed."

Now there was a situation, my friends. I couldn't tell this dear old person that I had never thought of volunteering my time between scenes to the coaching of Miss Russell, for this would have shattered her illusions. Neither could I tell her that I knew nothing of Arabia or Algiers. So I dismissed the matter very expertly—for me. I mumbled something indistinguishable, finished my coffee and departed hastily for the studio.

The item, however, had preceded me. Director Frank Lloyd, who should have known better, congratulated me and offered to put such a sequence into the picture, with me actually shown explaining to Miss Russell all there was to know about Arabian customs and people.

Shortly I found myself forced into justifying what had been written about me, press agents exerting some sort of mystic influence on everything and everybody. Feeling conscious all the time that I was under observation, I took the earliest opportunity to sit next to this delightful actress, while both of us were awaiting a change of camera position.

"HAVE you read the morning paper?" I asked as casually as possible.

Give a press agent a rainy day, says Ronald Colman, and he is in his glory. At such times his spirit soars, and his fertile brain hatches fictions which make the stars forget boredom and discomfort at once.

"Yes," answered Miss Russell, "and I appreciate your thoughtfulness very much. Shall we start right now?"

I wanted to tell her it was a publicity story, but again I lacked the courage. You see, an actor hates to explode romantic illusions about himself, however trivial they may be. So I cleared my throat, made ample gestures with my hand and proceeded to give the young and lovely lady a highly romanticized picture of life among the natives.

"That is nice," she said, "but perhaps you had better let me tell you all I know about the Arabs, then you can fill in with the things you think I have missed."

That, of course, exploded the nice gesture attributed to me, and I confessed to her privately that I was merely living up to what the press agents expected of me.

A few days later I read that, as another demonstration of my democratic tendencies, I had refused a suite in the hotel at Yuma. (We are there for three weeks of work in the desert.) I was supposed to have chosen instead a humbler home among the tented technical workers and extras. This story was a little harder on my person as well as my disposition.

I HATE tents. They are draughty, cold and disagreeably damp. Too, they are havens for tarantulas and Gila monsters. The very thought of a tent makes me shiver. Just the same, the story got round that I would put up in a tent and it looked as if a tent it would be for me. Victor McLaglen was the first to reproach me, while the multitude of technicians approved heartily.

"You had better change your mind," said Victor. "I don't like tents and if you volunteer to live in one, I'll have to do the same."

"I am extremely sorry," I said, "but I consider we players should set an example for the lower-pay workers. I have committed myself."

Victor went off, shaking his head.

I hoped something would turn up to change my mind and very soon it did. Frank Lloyd came to me with protest in his face and voice. McLaglen had spoken to him, I learned later.

"What is this foolish business of living in a tent while on location?" asked Lloyd in annoyance. "Don't you know that you might catch a cold and seriously delay our production? Don't you know we are using 2,000 people on the sets and that we can't stand a delay with such an expense going on?"

"Mr. Lloyd," I replied, "you realize, of course, that I would do nothing to hinder the smooth progress of this great production, nor would I allow my own quixotic ideas to conflict with the duty of every actor to hold himself secondary to the primary needs of production. Very happily, therefore, I bow to your wishes. I shall take up my quarters in a steam-heated hotel suite."

"Thank you," said Mr. Lloyd, "I knew you would see the sense in my argument."

Then the next day I read a stirring account of how the entire executive personnel of the studios, battling desperately for two days, had finally induced me to sleep in a hotel suite!

--to the Press Agent

ODDLY enough, publicity men take all these things in their stride. When I object to having to live up to their imaginations, they laugh lightly and say off-hand, "Oh, don't let that bother you, Mr. Colman. You're in the paper, aren't you?" They care nothing about our feelings in the matter.

But today I feel that I have an opportunity for once to square away at them. This is giving me a chance at a pay-off which I imagine will cause a slight flurry in certain quarters. The next time it rains, they probably will not come bringing cheer into my living room and departing with an idea for something that will come home to roost — on my shoulders.

Still, I have no complaint. So far, they haven't married me off to someone I don't know.

BRIDGE ACCORDING TO CULBERTSON

By ELY CULBERTSON.

PREFERENCE BID MEETS STANDARD SITUATION.

CORRECT bidding is so completely logical in both a direct and an implicit sense that it is strange there should be general misconception of several standard situations. One of these is the so-called choice bid, where the responding hand, unable to raise or bid a suit of its own, can simply show a preference for one of two or three suits bid by the partner. A typical situation is this:

South has dealt and bid one spade. West overcalls with two clubs. North has the miserable holding of ♠ Q 9 8 ♥ 5 6 ♦ 8 7 5 3 2 ♣ J 8 6 and naturally passes. East also passes, and South now bids two hearts. West again overcalls, bidding three clubs; again North and East pass. South bids three hearts and West passes. Now, as almost all players know, North should show his preference for the first bid suit by bidding three spades—he does not raise the contract and is in effect making no bid at all. This latter fact must be clearly understood before the companion bid to the “preference bid” is discussed.

Change the North hand to four spades and a singleton heart and a very different picture presents itself. Now, in conjunction with the excellent two-suiter indicated by South's rebids, North can see that a game is highly probable. So, rather than make a completely passive preference response to the three heart bid, it is incumbent on North to show “better than a preference” by bidding not three but four spades! Remember that he has twice passed when he could have made a free bid. South can, therefore, not expect any particular honor strength and should recognize the jump for what it must be.

Certainly none of the foregoing is difficult to digest. It must be that those deluded and timid souls who would be afraid to give a “jump raise” with only one queen and one jack in the hand, fearing partner might leap to six, have not given the inherent logic of “better than a preference” bidding much thought.

With I. Q. and other mystic-symbol intelligence tests the order of the day, it occurs to me that my readers might enjoy a bridge questionnaire. So here it is. Place a cross after each question in the proper space, true or false, and check your answers from the list you will find at the very end of this article.

1. All pre-emptive bids are foolish, shutting out the partner rather than the opponents.

TRUE [] FALSE []

2. An opening two bid in a suit is forcing for only one round.

TRUE [] FALSE []

3. If an opening one bid is doubled by the next hand, the partner of the doubler must take out.

TRUE [] FALSE []

4. If the bidding goes:
North, 1 heart; East, 2 hearts;
South, pass; West, pass. Double.
North wants South to take out the double.

TRUE [] FALSE []

5. Most cross-ruff hands are very easy to play.

TRUE [] FALSE []

6. Many grand slams can be made by an elimination and throw-in play.

TRUE [] FALSE []

The general caliber of bridge has improved so greatly in the last few years that every experienced player, given half a chance, can execute the much publicized throw-in play. What is not so well known is the defense against this very type of coup.

(3) Another asking bid.
(4) Answer shows second-round heart control.

If declarer realizes that the penalty double must have been based on trump tricks, how must he play the hand to make his contract? Opening lead, club queen. See solution below.

SOLUTION: Club ace wins first trick. Heart ace and small heart to king. Heart ruffed by South. Club to king and club ruff. Diamond five to ace and diamond to king. Diamond queen ruffed in dummy. Heart queen ruffed and spade nine led. West must win and lead up to trump tenace.

On South's urgent call for a diamond lead—both of his doubles had this meaning—North, despite his singleton, thought he had better obey orders. The diamond queen was allowed to hold the first trick, and the queen of spades was laid down. Next came a small heart, South winning the ace and exiting with a club. Dummy's king won, and another heart to the king put West on lead. He played the ace, king, and another spade. South took the jack, and it was at this point that many players would have made a fatal error. Had he again exited with a club he would have cooked his own goose. Declarer was hoping for this very play. He would have won the club ace, cashed the good spades, and then led his remaining diamond. South, with nothing but diamonds left, would have been hopelessly caught. He would have taken his ace and jack but would have had to concede the last two tricks to dummy's diamonds.

All this South could and did anticipate. So he promptly abandoned the notion of winning two diamond tricks, preferring to gamble that his partner could take care of hearts and clubs. He laid down the ace of diamonds and then exited with the club!

Obviously declarer was now helpless. Dummy had no entry left, and

The Planets---Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON

Bernice Denton Pierson, eminent astrologer, has prepared this forecast in brief for a handy reference convenient to Constitution readers. This guide will aid you, for it indicates the most auspicious time to begin any new endeavor, whether it be business, social or domestic.

MARCH 15—SUNDAY: Before 10:22 a. m. is a period of explosiveness. You and everyone around you will want movement, but you should guard against nerves and high temperament. Between 10:22 a. m. and 10:29 p. m. is a favorable period for affairs of a practical nature, as well as for pleasures and or taking life in a leisurely way. After 10:29 p. m. associates are either trying or disappointing.

MARCH 16—MONDAY: Throughout the entire day, several favorable influences are working, making this a propitious time for financial dealings, news, communications, moves, literary and educational works. Be certain that the things you undertake are of a practical nature, for a determination to take on affairs that are not solid fundamentally are likely to result in an undesirable way. This is not an auspicious day for liquids, chemicals and matters pertaining to the sea.

MARCH 17—TUESDAY: Before 2:30 p. m. you should make every effort to get conditions set in motion for progress. Hard work will be rewarded, and you will make greater progress with people who are thought of as “hard-boiled.” This period favors general business activities, real estate transactions, liquids, drugs and work that is generally regarded as highly artistic.

MARCH 18—WEDNESDAY: The morning hours and until 8:48 a. m. will be filled with influences that bring strain. Your mind will be divided between two forces, causing you to be either too erratic, too forceful, or too combative. Therefore, more can be accomplished by sticking to routine matters. Between 8:48 a. m. and 1:25 p. m. is the best part of the day, when you will have greater personal appeal, and the things you are attempting will progress along a steady trend. Ordinary business matters, financial affairs, social matters, and agreements and contracts started at this time should result profitably. The remainder of the day calls for caution, especially in land transactions, electrical ideas, drugs and chemicals.

MARCH 19—THURSDAY: Today may be called a treacherous day, for a feeling of resentment and opposition himself could cash only his ace of clubs and fifth spade for an eight-trick total.

TODAY'S QUESTIONS.

Question: Kindly bid the following North and South hands. Nobody vulnerable, and the opponents do not enter the bidding.

NORTH [dealer]	SOUTH
♠ K Q J 9 8 7 5	♠ 10
♥ A 7 4	♥ K 10 9 8 6 4
♦ A 5 3	♦ K Q 8 3
♣ A 5 3	♣ 1 4

NORTH	SOUTH
1 spade	2 hearts
3 spades	4 diamonds
4 spades	5 clubs
6 spades	Pass

It should be noted that, since no suit has been agreed on, South's five-club bid is not an asking bid, but merely an obvious slam invitation, which North accepts.

Question: I held the following hand and opened with a two-spade bid. Was I correct?

♠ A K 8 2 ♥ A K 7 4 ♦ A K 3 6 5

Answer: No. You had no more honor tricks than you did losers—six of each. One spade was the proper opening bid.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONNAIRE.

tion surrounds new beginnings. You may want to throw tact to the winds, and this is not a favorable day to take a definite stand on anything. You should do your utmost to be diplomatic and reserved.

MARCH 20—FRIDAY: Today is the beginning of the New Year, astrologically speaking, and for the next 30 days the world will have greater enthusiasms—whether directed for good or bad. People born the latter part of March and the first 20 days of April will especially have renewed energy and vigor. The best part of today is before 1:19 p. m. when you should attend to necessary matters and begin new plans. After 1:19 p. m. only the most ordinary things should be attended to.

MARCH 21—SATURDAY: The entire day is unfavorable for starting off on new ventures. Progress will be attained by attending to routine, and keeping a calm attitude, for the most trivial matters are apt to become involved in a most unexpected manner.

DID JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

By PETER LEVINS.

BILL COSTELLO, popular captain in the Peabody, Mass., fire department, didn't come down to breakfast on the morning of Friday, February 17, 1933.

Mrs. Jessie B. Costello, attractive 31-year-old wife of the fireman, had arisen, got two of her three children, Marie and Jessie, off to school, and then prepared breakfast for her father-in-law, John Costello Sr., who occupied a downstairs room in the house on Way avenue. She carried the food to Costello Sr. at about 8 o'clock.

"Why you bringing breakfast to me so early?" the old man asked in surprise.

"I thought you'd like to get an early start for Mike O'Neill's funeral," she replied.

Mr. O'Neill's son was a close friend of Bill Costello. Bill had been to the wake the night before and would be a pallbearer at the funeral. His father had planned to go with him.

"There ain't no hurry, Jessie," he said. "We got lots of time. Bill ain't even up yet, is he?"

"Bill can't go to the funeral. He was sick all night."

"What's the matter with him? He seemed all right when he came in this morning at 2:30," Costello started to get out of bed, saying he had promised Bill he'd wake him up.

"No. I didn't want him disturbed," said Jessie, her thin, sulky lips setting determinedly.

Now John Costello had a deep respect for his beautiful daughter-in-law's fiery temper, and he usually went out of his way to avoid arousing her. But here was something he felt he should insist upon. Surely Bill must be well enough to attend the funeral. Why, everybody was going to be there, including the mayor.

"To hell with the mayor," said Jessie. "Bill's health comes ahead of everything else and he's not going."

The father-in-law said if Bill was so sick why hadn't the doctor been called? She replied that she would call the doctor when she thought it necessary. Costello said then that he'd go upstairs and have a look at Bill. She repeated she did not want him disturbed. When Costello tried to get out of bed she forcibly detained him.

"I made the children wash in the bathroom downstairs, just so he wouldn't be disturbed," she said. "Besides, I've already phoned Tip O'Neill that Bill is sick and can't go to the funeral."

John Costello ate his breakfast slowly, got into his clothes, and waited around in the hope that his son would come down. At about 8:30, as he started out alone for the funeral, a neighbor dropped in. She left soon afterward. Jessie continued with her household duties, assisted by her young son, Bobby.

At 9:15, Mrs. Katherine Simbolist, who always came on Fridays to help clean and scrub, arrived, and Mrs. Costello suggested that they begin by cleaning the kitchen boiler. As she said this she took down a gray and red coffee can which she said contained some stuff Bill had mixed up from cyanide of potassium and oxalic acid. Mrs. Simbolist was not tall enough to reach the top of the boiler, so Jessie started to do the cleaning herself.

She interrupted her housework at about 10 o'clock when an elderly woman called with candy for sale. Mrs. Costello said she did not want any, but young Bobby pleaded with her, so the mother went upstairs for her pocketbook.

Immediately, a long, piercing scream sounded. Mrs. Simbolist stood petrified. The candy woman hastily gathered up her wares and fled as Jessie Costello rushed downstairs crying that Bill was dead and was lying on the floor upstairs. The cleaning woman hastened upstairs, and returned almost at once.

It was true. Bill Costello was dead.

Jessie first tried to get Dr. Harris S. Pomeroy, the family physician, but he was out. Then she called Dr. John F. Walsh. Also a priest. And then a friend who lived just across the street, Mrs. Marie Purcell. As it happened, Mrs. Purcell's husband, John, a member of the police force, was also at home. They said they'd be right over.

Then Mrs. Simbolist heard Mrs. Costello call another number.

"Hello, is that you, Eddie?" said the widow. "Something terrible has happened! Come over as soon as you can!"

The cleaning woman was somewhat shocked. She realized that Mrs. Costello was summoning Eddie McMahon, handsome 26-year-old police officer, whom the people of the neighborhood were calling Jessie's lover.

Now the Purcells arrived. Jessie said that Bill had come home late, and that when he got into bed he complained of terrible pains in the stomach. She had offered him a glass of ginger ale but he had refused it. He had walked the floor until 5 o'clock, and at 6 he'd gone into Bobby's room, got the youngster out of bed, and brought him in with him.

"Jack, would you mind going upstairs and bringing down Bill's trousers?" Jessie asked Purcell. He did so, and then watched her as she went through the pockets. She drew out a rosary, a handkerchief and about $3 in change. Visibly disappointed, she gave her husband's pants a vigorous shake. A bunch of keys dropped to the floor. She picked them up and put them in her pocketbook.

Eddie McMahon arrived and tried to console her. She asked him to tell the boys at the firehouse and also send some telegrams. Dr. Walsh arrived, and went upstairs with John Purcell, Thomas Prendible, another police officer and brother of a neighbor, Mrs. Hoffman, who had come over.

Dr. Walsh found Bill Costello, clad in medium weight gray underwear, lying on the floor in the hall. His head lay toward the bathroom, his feet toward the bedroom where he had slept. The left arm lay parallel to the body, the right arm rested across the abdomen. In his examination the doctor noticed a red mark on the right side of the chest, spreading under the arm. Nobody seemed able to account for these marks. The body lay on the left side.

"I shall have to notify the medical examiner," said Dr. Walsh.

Jessie told the doctor that Bill had complained of pains in his left side and arm when she saw him shortly after 8 o'clock. Dr. Walsh said that such symptoms probably meant that the fire captain had suffered from angina pectoris (heart disease). However, he would leave the cause of death to be defined by Medical Examiner S. Chase Tucker. The latter, after talking to the widow, seemed inclined to agree with Dr. Walsh, and granted Leonard Conway permission to prepare the body for burial.

Next, Andrew Fyfe, Jessie's father, arrived. He drew Eddie McMahon to one side and told him somberly that he considered him responsible for all this. McMahon became indignant. He admitted that he did not blame Fyfe a bit, but at the same time swore that there'd never been anything between him and Jessie, that there was nothing between them but a true, clean and pure friendship.

It was reported later that Andy Fyfe ordered McMahon off the premises and that Jessie told her father to mind his own business.

Rumors that Bill Costello had committed suicide were quickly ridiculed by his friends. Edward Brawley, teacher and grid coach at the high school and a former All-American end at Holy Cross, stated that he had driven Bill home from the wake, that Bill had been in high spirits, and apparently in the best of health.

There was more talk in the neighborhood when it was learned that, a few hours after the tragedy, Mrs. Costello appeared at the firehouse, unlocked her husband's strong box, and examined his insurance policies. From the firehouse she had gone to see Leonard Conway, the undertaker. Moreover, all the gossip about Jessie and Edward McMahon was revived and given new significance. Jessie and Eddie . . . and now the husband was strangely dead.

The neighbors remembered how she used to call for Eddie in her car when he worked nights. . . . The Costello car had been seen night after night parked on Hogg's hill, a popular petting spot. . . . Bill Costello had let Eddie use his car when he was soliciting money for the Peabody Police Relief Association, and Jessie, always interested in relief work, had helped Eddie in his collection work. . . .

Then there was the time when McMahon underwent an operation at the J. B. Thomas Memorial hospital. Dr. Pomeroy, the Costello is a 1936 Juliet.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle

It's a Costume Season by Sara Day

At a big party recently she set fashion-conscious Hollywood agog by appearing in a modernized version of a Juliet costume. It became apparent that she was discarding modern clothes and creating a style all her own. How long it will be just her own is a question; it looks as though a costume season were on the way.

I finally caught this very busy first lady of the screen for a few minutes in her dressing room on the M-G-M lot, between scenes of "Romeo and Juliet."

"Playing in costume pictures effects a change in your fashion psychology," she said in answer to my question as to why she was wearing costume dresses. "You begin to feel out of place in modern clothes and therefore you incorporate costume details into your personal wardrobe."

"I HAVEN'T made a modern picture since 'Riptide,' she continued. "I wore costumes in 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street,' which was my last picture, and now that I am playing Juliet it just seems fitting to wear costumes. Perhaps it is because when you are playing a part you enter into it so wholeheartedly. At least I do. You dress your hair like the character you are portraying and you wear her clothes. As time goes on you really take on the feeling that you are that person. And even when the picture is over you find yourself carrying that psychology into your personal life."

"Then too," she laughed as if at herself, "I guess most every woman, whether she is an actress or not, likes to dramatize herself, and one can do it so readily in a costume dress. It gives you, too, a chance to change your personality and that is a good thing for every woman to do occasionally. Get a new haircut, wear different clothes. I know that I have changed personalities with my pictures."

"I'm not the only one who feels that way about it. Garbo, for instance, has appeared in so many costume pictures that she likes costumes much better than modern clothes. Maureen O'Sullivan, who played with me in 'Barretts,' feels the same and I have noticed that she has many costume touches in her clothes. Of course that plan is not in keeping with street clothes. For myself I like tailored things and spectator sports wear for daytime, but I do think that in afternoon and evening clothes costume details may be introduced with very charming results."

NORMA made such a lovely picture as she sat there in her citron colored dressing room that I couldn't help but agree with her. She is wearing her Juliet hairdress now, parted in the middle, short on the sides and going into a long curled bob in back.

In her hostess town of plum red velvet, with very full sleeves and long skirt, contrasted against the dull gold of her chair, she looked like a painting of some medieval princess. The wide shaped belt of her gown was heavily embroidered in gold, which was reflected in the decoration of the room. The carpet is gold color, the mirrors on the walls and on the top of the natural colored wood tables are backed in gold. Along one side of the room are window seats upholstered in citron colored damask. The table lamps are banded in copper.

"I have a few of my own clothes here and perhaps you'd like to see some of them," Norma said. Her maid first brought out the much talked of Juliet adaptation. It is a dinner dress of stiff black velvet featuring a very full gathered skirt, tight bodice and leg of mutton type sleeves, long and full at the top. The only trimming is a pleated starched chiffon ruff edged with rhinestones. Adding to the picturesque effect is a tiny back velvet bonnet which sits back on the crown of the head, with a veil hanging around the shoulders.

THEN there was a Spanish dress which I had seen her wearing before she started her Juliet vogue. It is a lovely thing, of white crepe. The Spanish feeling is accentuated by a shawl scarf edged with fringe which is thrown over one shoulder. When Norma wears this she puts a bunch of red silk flowers in her hair, giving a very Carmenesque effect.

A formal which possesses that dramatic quality she spoke of and which makes her look like a young Greek goddess is fashioned of sky blue suede crepe. This dress is molded to the figure by rows of shirring in the bodice and skirt.

Norma is very fond of black velvet, because it is flattering and dramatic. One of her favorite afternoon costumes is a wrap-around coat dress with V side fastening and high neck. With this she wears a large upturned Breton sailor of the same material. Another afternoon dress is a very simple short sleeved affair of black dull finish crepe with which she wears a large halo hat of black trimmed in blue velvet and a wisp of veiling comes down over the forehead. I noticed that she favors high necked dresses.

IN THE few moments that were left before her call to return to the set, we discussed the costume trends in spring styles. Norma feels that women are being made more conscious of the intriguing quality of costume clothes and that we are going to see more of them. Substantiating that idea is the news that costume designers on both sides of the Atlantic are all a-dither about the costumes which Lanvin and Karinska have designed for "Margot," a play about Mary Stuart, last Queen of Scotland, which is having a long run in Paris. Ruffs, such as Norma wears on her black velvet gown, are used on these costumes. Other influences of "Margot" you'll see in the broadshouldered, wasp waist silhouette, which was last in vogue in the Gay Nineties. These costumes have also influenced spring color combinations such as violet and blue, bright green or red with black, chocolate brown and saffron yellow. Capes, which were an important part of the fashions of those days, will see a vogue.

Regardless of whether you agree wholeheartedly with Norma in her ideas for costume dress, she exemplifies perfect grooming, which is something which every woman should work for. I have never seen her when she didn't look as though she had just stepped out of a fashion page. There is a clean fresh look about her skin and her hair is shiny and smooth as though it had just been shampooed. Her nails and skin bespeak care. Every woman can have that well groomed look with just a little extra time and care. And it is just as important, if you want to look your best, as the proper clothes.

Ride Your Hobby Says Reginald Denny

Brydon B. Baker, manager of Denny's plane factory, shows Robert Montgomery one of Denny's flying models. It has a small gasoline engine and will fly at 50 miles an hour.

When Screen's Farce Favorite Lost His Hold in Pictures, He Turned to Model Planes and Made Hobby into Big Business

By David Arlen

HIGH over the battle-scarred fields of the Argonne there flew, during the World War, a youthful member of His Majesty's Royal Air Corps. He was but a youngster thrilled by the beauty of that glorious, star-spangled night, to which the screaming shells, following their trails of death below, seemed only to add more glamour.

The young flyer thought, ecstatically: "Some day everyone will know the glory of winging through these cloudless skies like monster birds. And if my luck holds, I'll be somebody in this flying game."

But when the war was over, Reginald Denny—for that was the youthful aviator's name—drifted back to his first love, the theater. For a while he played leading roles on the English stage, then he came to America, where he laid the foundations of his career in the motion picture world.

"It's an odd happenstance," reminisced Denny, "but in England I'd played Shakespearean roles and sung baritone leads in light opera. Yet at Universal, where I was contracted, they could only see me as the dumb prizefighter in H.

C. Witwer's pug-ugly series entitled 'The Leather Pushers.'

Denny, however, fought his way to stardom as the leading farce king of the screen. Fans will be quick to remember "Oh, Doctor!" "The Cheerful Fraud," "Skinner's Dress Suit," "The Reckless Age," "Sporting Youth," "What Happened to Jones," "The Fast Worker," "I'll Show You the Town," and many other hilarious comedy farces.

OH, DENNY enjoyed a long and lucrative reign. But finally there came the inevitable lapse of contract and one of lesser importance at M-G-M, where he was promptly forgotten by the executive who had signed him. Two years of idleness, punctuated by weekly drawings of unearned pay checks. It was killing the pride of an actor who had been for years the outstanding farceur of the films.

"I was desperate," Reginald declared soberly. "Until one day I met a very prominent banker and he told me a story. It seems he had enjoyed many years of high social position and financial affluence but he lost his wealth in the stock crash of 1929. His magnificent yacht was the last means of making money. In a curious accident, it burned to the water's edge. Then this man, utterly licked, decided to commit suicide.

"That night he carried his little son upstairs and tucked him into bed. He fully intended to go down to his library afterwards and blow out his brains. But the little child clung to him and pleaded: 'Daddy, couldn't you make me a little boat just like the big one we had? I want to sail it in the bath tub tomorrow.'

"There was a well-equipped workshop in the lower part of the house. The man decided to make his son a present of this boat before stepping off into the void. He went down there. At 4:30 the next morning he had finished. He looked at the boat he'd just finished carving and exclaimed to himself, 'Gosh, it's beautiful! Life's beautiful! Who wants to die, anyway?'"

REG DENNY took this man's tip and started to carve little ships and planes from precise blue-print models of his own designing. As a sort of antidote, you know, to the desperate thoughts which creep unbidden into the brain when one's spirits are low. He discovered that Rod La Rocque and several other of his friends were interested in the same thing. They used to get together nights over the workbench in Reg's cellar and toil away, fashioning slender spars, the hulls and wings.

Reg made small boats and planes for all the youngsters in the neighborhood. Strange kids who saw these models used to ring his doorbell and plead, "Gee, Mr. Denny, couldn't you make me one, too?" One kid said, "I'll give you my week's allowance for a plane like the one you made for Jimmy."

So the idea was born. Reg founded a factory, put one of his friends, a former ace cameraman named Brydon B. Baker, who designed and built the first licensed glider in this country, in charge on a partnership basis. Orders began to pour in. All types of planes were designed, from a light wood model motored by a twisted rubber band and selling for 10 cents, to a powerful gasoline-motored number, capable of doing 50 miles per hour and selling for $150.

This last plane is the pride of the Dennyplanes factory. It is a scale model of a Fairchild monoplane, equipped with a one-fifth horsepower engine that gives the plane a speed of 50 miles per hour and a ceiling of 9,000 feet. Special construction features make the ship almost proof against damage in crack-ups. The fuel tank holds gasoline sufficient for flights of 24 minutes.

RECENTLY, Reg signed a contract to deliver the entire output of his factory to a single distributing concern in the East. The deal will net him a minimum of $120,000 a year with the possibility of twice that much. The actor is thrilled to his toes. It's not the money so much as the sense of achievement, of a job grandly done.

"Model airplanes are a great educational force," Denny affirmed in concluding the conversation. "Youngsters will learn aviation principles as they have learned the technicalities of the mysterious radio. One never fears what he understands and in eradicating fear of the air from the minds of our youth, I think I'm doing a distinct service for the future progress of aviation."

PERHAPS it has nothing to do with this story, but since Reginald Denny has scored this success his screen career has leaped forward with brilliant new emphasis. From a featured role in "Here's to Romance," Denny has essayed the stellar lead in "Rest Cure," an all-natural-color feature for Regal Pictures. This has been followed by the lead in "Preview" for Paramount. Now Reginald Denny is essaying one of the best roles of his career, the character of Benvolio in "Romeo and Juliet" for M-G-M. Yes—it's a new lease on life for a gallant and charming actor.

WHAT about your face?

Do you think it beautiful? Are your eyebrows done like those of Marlene Dietrich? Your hair like Jean Harlow's? Your mouth like Joan Crawford's?

And your figure—are you as slender as Katharine Hepburn or as luscious as Mae West?

Can you wear clothes with the chic of Kay Francis or Carole Lombard? Have you the charm of Norma Shearer? Do you dress according to screen styles originated by Adrian, Will Lambert, Travis Banton or Orry Kelley?

Do you, by any chance, want to appear on the screen?

If your answer to all these questions is "YES!", it's too bad. You may as well settle down to your customary routine and forget it.

You may be as beautiful as Helen of Troy, as glamorous as Garbo, but it won't do you a bit of good in Hollywood. Out here we already have Garbo and too many Helens of Troy.

THIS is the story of a caravan as adventurous as any camel train that ever set out across the desert loaded with precious jewels and priceless perfumes.

In many ways, it is a sad story of disappointed hopes and tearful defeat, but there is comedy in it and it proves a strange and uncanny fact:

Girls of today are so much alike, talent scouts do not dare send them to Hollywood for screen tests!

Out of nearly 100,000 contestants for screen fame, out of a canvas of 38 states, 2,500 cities and innumerable smaller towns visited in 240,000 miles of travel in the United States, only nine prospects were found. These nine possessed personalities different enough, individual enough and interesting enough to warrant sending them to the film capital as picture possibilities.

At the present moment, two of the nine are appearing in pictures!

Is that a record of which to be proud or isn't it?

That monster motor, built like a train of cars, which probably passed through your city or town was in reality the eye of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios in Culver City. That eye was looking for you or you or you, Oh, Bright Young Things—peering everywhere for a girl who might leap into fame and fortune as another spectacular find, another unique and dazzling creature to set the world reaching for new adjectives.

C EDWARD CARRIER, talent scout extraordinary, who led the strange caravan, just told me all about it and proceeded to prove what may have been lurking in the minds of many of us for some time. Namely:

Girls of today look alike, act alike, dress alike, think alike and follow some leader who happens to appeal to them, thus thwarting their own chances for being individuals.

"The reason for this state of affairs," said Mr. Carrier, "is directly traceable to moving pictures. Films are cutting the girls of the nation to the same pattern, a composite of screen stars. The result is a strange medley of women, with painted mouths, hair of unnatural colors, skins out of cold cream jars and rouge pots, and the figures of mannequins." Carrier glanced at me as if expecting me to challenge him.

"It is this standardization of looks, manners, personalities and general appearance that sends us out of each town and city with blank looks at each other," he said, puffing on a cigaret and shuffling a stack of photographs.

"Our record for interest everywhere is 100 per cent; our record for securing actual talent is almost nil. We are a great success, except we practically never have to wire the studio for transportation for a new and startling screen possibility. The contest goes great guns; girls by the hundreds from every walk of life send in their photographs; we never have any trouble picking out 25 that may screen well. The trouble is, when they are made up, coached, given lines to read and finally put before the camera, they all look and act alike.

"WE HAVE observed many amazing things about the young women of America," continued Carrier. "Certainly there are no social distinctions. The daughter of the butcher often is more attractive than the daughter of the rich banker. Unfortunately, they are not only sisters under the skin; they get their complexions out of the same sort of box or jar.

"We saw thousands of girls, all about alike. Eventually we classified them, to a certain extent. Girls of the northern and eastern states are what the former Prince of Wales called snappy. Those in the Midwest are vivacious, have assurance and are independent. Those from the South are the last word in femininity, but they are not as pretty as their northern sisters. Their manners and voices are pleasant and agreeable and they have style, poise and grace. But they are not as a rule so eager and ambitious as girls from other parts of the country.

"WE ARE always looking for that girl who has that something which distinguishes her from all the others," he explains. "That something used to be called IT, but no more. It is vastly more than sex appeal; it is an arresting personality, a quality which no school can teach them.

"The screen is a stern taskmaster. A girl may be intelligent, clever, versed in all the accomplishments; she may have charm, beauty and an interesting voice and still not make the grade. The eight girls and one child we sent out from our journeyings have been put through the M-G-M school, presided over by Oliver Hinsdel. They are given three-month contracts and makeup artists and designers study them to bring out their best. They are appearing in photographs.

"One of them, her name is... appeared in 'Robin Hood of El Dorado' of 1936. I believe she has a course, h-their best points. Two girls have remained and are appearing in pictures." He exhibited their photographs with pride.

"One of them is now known as Ann Loring. Her name is Anita Kurtin and she was discovered in our New York City contest. Miss Loring has appeared in 'Escapade,' 'Broadway Melody of 1936' and has the lead in 'Robin Hood of El Dorado.' Studio executives and Mr. Hinsdel believe she is one of the real finds of 1936. We, of course, hope they are right.

"The other girl is Eleanor Stewart, who won in our contest in Chicago. She was a student of Northwestern University. She has a contract at the studio and we have hopes that she may prove another sensational discovery."

THEN, with a sigh, Carrier settled back in his chair and told of some of the others who came to Hollywood, were put through the laboratory, didn't make the grade and returned home.

"Again," he said, "we are confronted with standardization. Five of the girls who came to Hollywood just couldn't quite qualify.

"Others who came to Hollywood and returned home or went into plays in Los Angeles were Agnes Anderson, of Detroit, who had a brilliant future on the screen, but who took on too many pounds and is having a struggle taking them off; Margaret Barr, of Cleveland, who went back to her home for further coaching; and little Celia Murray, of New York, who was for a time a member of Hal Roach's 'Gang.' She is a gifted child, but her eyes troubled her under the lights and her parents took her home."

THE morning after talking to Carrier, I picked up my paper and read a few pertinent remarks from Darryl Zanuck, of Twentieth Century-Fox, along these very lines:

"Young actresses should realize that every step of great popularity today owes her ascendancy to her individuality," Zanuck said. "Yet Hollywood today is a world of rubber stamps. In some cases you can't tell a feminine player from her stand-in."

"It's the same outside the films. The one noticeable fact in visiting a public place today is the number of girls who are trying to approximate the appearance of some star who has started a vogue. The only ones who stand out in a crowd today are those who try to be themselves, and they are all too few."

So there you are, girls. Only nine possible screen personalities out of ninety-nine thousand. And only two of those actually in pictures.

Vallee and Radio Put Frank Fay Back at the Top

Frank Fay is announced as the star of a new program to begin next July and in the meantime you can still hear the red-headed humorist on Rudy Vallee's Variety Hour on NBC every week. The announcement completes the story of another Man Who Came Back.

All the time that Frank Fay was in Hollywood he was on the sidelines. He saw screen stars go up, then come down like a 1936 blizzard. He saw brave souls try to regain their lofty positions in show business and fail. It started Frank to thinking.

Vaudeville fans (Editor's note: Vaudeville was a bill of variety acts, once a popular form of entertainment; it is now practically extinct.) remember Frank Fay as the man who started a new trend. He was the first bigtime master of ceremonies. The salary he made in the big theaters from coast to coast was up in the thousands a week.

Vaudeville collapsed and Frank Fay went to Hollywood. He never took pictures very seriously, and consequently the picture producers never took Frank seriously.

For several years the public did not see or hear much from Frank Fay, but he was the kind of a man they couldn't forget. Last November he made a business trip to New York and while he was in town did a guest spot on the Vallee hour. The first led to another and then another. And when a fellow plays six consecutive guest star bookings on the Vallee hour, there's something in it.

About the third or fourth time he was on the program Frank breezed into the rehearsal one day all excited. He had a great idea. Frank wanted to tell a real tear-jerker story about a down-and-outter whom he met on the way to the studio. Rudy advised him to stick to comedy. Frank tried it anyway. It must have touched a lot of hearts because the letters started to pour in.

Frank gets an enormous pleasure out of life; trifling incidents that most people pass by furnish him with ideas for fantastic radio sketches. The name of a shirt salesman was enough to provide Frank with private enjoyment for a week, and later was incorporated into part of his radio material.

Little things like this add a whimsy and appeal to Frank Fay's air material that other humorists do not have. He is definitely not a gag man.

Noble to Travel

Ray Noble, brilliant young English composer and maestro of dance music, is finally ready to show American theater audiences the reason for the fame of his music and his own songs in this country.

Not long ago America heard his songs—"Goodnight Sweetheart," "Love is the Sweetest Thing," among others. Then Noble's fame grew when America heard his "Mayfair Dance Orchestra" on records.

Naturally Noble had to come to America, and when he did his audience grew by millions, thanks to a CBS coast-to-coast network program.

Now America wants to see him. So Ray Noble will start a stage tour of the country on April 10. His first stop is Boston.

'Street Singer' Tracy Comes Home

"Marta, rambling rose of the wildwood—"

Radio listeners with good memories can easily identify that lyric with the dreamy voice of "The Street Singer." Many a night over CBS Arthur Tracy sang his soft ballads to the accompaniment of an accordion.

Then domestic trouble hindered his progress. Bad breaks followed.

Arthur went to England to change his luck.

He has just returned. His head is high. He is healthy, wealthy and very happy. But he doesn't talk too much. He lets his London press clippings tell the story of the star who went up and down and then up again. "Street Singer Captures London." "Arthur Tracy Goes From Triumph to Triumph."

Peggy Proves There's No Rest for the Talented

No rest for the talented would seem to be the moral of Peggy Allenby's life. Peggy is the gifted young actress whose radio engagements are so numerous that she appeared before the microphone two days before her baby was born, and two weeks afterward. She is now heard in the recently inaugurated CBS program, "Rich Man's Darling."

Yet with all this unending activity, Peggy never gives the appearance of hurrying. Although her time is always limited, instead of fidgeting when kept waiting by interviewers, Peggy calmly picks up the nearest magazine and apparently becomes completely oblivious to the passing of time.

I used to see Peggy at the old "Beauty Box Operetta" programs, calmly knitting while singers and musicians blared away. She was used for the dramatic portions.

Peggy plays a wide variety of roles, but her favorite part, away from the microphone, is that of Mrs. John McGovern, mother of Eleanor John McGovern, aged two.

Peggy was born on St. Valentine's Day at 10 E. Fiftieth St., New York, just a stone's throw from the CBS main studios. Her grandfather, John Fox, became her guardian when her parents died.

Ballyhoo Finds Place in Radio, and that is News

Barkers have finally crashed the dignified gates of radio. Responsible for this new and noisy development, flagrantly contrary to all the rules of the air castles, whose walls are decorated with "Quiet Please" signs, and where uniformed pages run around with fingers to lips, are Jack Benny and Paul Whiteman.

It all began on a recent Sunday night. The Benny broadcasts and the Whiteman shows do their repeat editions for Western stations at the same time. Their studios are across the third floor corridor from one another in Radio City.

Visitors pouring out of the elevators just before airtime were amazed one night to find the usually quiet and serene Benny standing on one side yelling at the top of his voice:

"This way to the Jack Benny program. What a show, folks! There'll be Mary Livingstone, radio's famous poetess; Kenny Baker, the timid tenor, and lots of stellar attractions. Come one, come all!"

The crowd gaped. Then across the hall they heard the booming tones of husky Paul Whiteman.

"Everybody's going to the Whiteman show, folks. Come and get your money's worth. It's the greatest entertainment value in the country. See your radio favorites!"

Jack was quickly reinforced by Don Wilson and Johnny Green. Then the King's Men came to the aid of Whiteman. The impromptu scene was approaching a good imitation of a riot, what with the crowds standing by and clogging the aisles. NBC's proud pages blushed, but alas, they were helpless. After all—Mr. Benny and Mr. Whiteman.

It all came to a sudden end when Tom Harrington, who directs the Benny programs, and the Whiteman production chief rushed out almost simultaneously to shout: "Boys, we're on the air!"

Winifred Cecil

On the Showboat

The Showboat is still puffing along.

Perhaps no weekly radio program has more ardent followers than this NBC chronicle. Thousands sit by their loudspeakers each Thursday night to hear Lanny Ross and his sweetheart, Mary Lou.

No longer is red-cheeked, white-haired Charles Winninger head man. No longer are there two Mary Lous. Rosaline Green, who was the talking Mary Lou, has been off the program many months. Just recently Rosaline married a newspaper man. Muriel Wilson, once the singing Mary Lou, is also absent.

Now Lanny Ross predominates and Cap'n Henry has been pushed into the background. However, those two faithful comics, Molasses and January, still "run 'em on" twice a performance. And a new star shines. Her name is Winifred Cecil.

A few years back, while touring England for concert experience, Winifred agreed to sing at an Italian benefit. Consternation reigned, however, when the native-born Italian entertainment committee heard her at rehearsal. She sang beautifully, the committee agreed, but her Italian pronunciation was not accurate enough for her to sing Italian songs before an Italian-speaking audience. Finally it was arranged for her to be introduced as "Olga Ranzabov, the Russian soprano." Winifred sang what passed for Italian songs with Russian dressing, and was acclaimed a huge success.

On the Showboat, fortunately, she uses no such camouflage.

Poetic Justice

Lawrence Tibbett calls this poetic justice. He spent a considerable sum to have a sound-proof practice room built, but unfortunately he doesn't sleep there. His bedroom is on the other side of the apartment. Napping before a recent broadcast, the great baritone was awakened by a noisy neighbor in the apartment below—a singer, it seems, and a tenor. Mrs. Tibbett phoned the manager and asked him to see if the people would please be quiet. Larry returned to bed, but not to sleep. The singing continued. Again Mrs. Tibbett called the manager.

"I'm sorry but I can't seem to locate that singer," he said.

"Why not?" she asked. "Well, every apartment I call says if it's loud singing, it must be Mr. Tibbett. Are you sure it isn't?"

Paging Senior Ponce de Leon

By Grace Grandville

I ONCE heard a famous lady say with a naughty twinkle in her eye:

"It must be something about the climate. Motion picture actresses in Hollywood just don't get past 30."

If she can manage to stay looking young I daresay any woman is justified in forgetting the birthdays. On the other hand why be ashamed of their record if you've been clever enough to keep that girlish figure and at least the ghost of the complexion you had in your teens. The point is to keep them.

Would you like to ask one motion picture actress how she did it? I know a Hollywood actress who has passed 40 and admits it with the greatest unconcern. She looks about 30.

TAG ALONG and we'll go frolicking over to RKO and onto the set where "The Puzzle of the Briar Pipe" is being solved in the best culluloid tradition. That svelte creature in the stunning blue suit who is picking holes in Detective Jimmie Gleason's deductions is Helen Broderick. She's the lass we've come to see. Here's a lull in the proceedings and now's our chance.

"Hello, Miss Broderick. We want a beauty interview, please."

"Don't make me hysterical," she comes back. "I'm no beauty. I never was. I didn't worry much about it until I got into pictures. Now, by heaven, I'm face conscious. They can find more things the matter with a face. Maybe your eyes aren't mates. Nature is sure to be in error about your eyebrows. And you'd never believe how a nose can invert in places where it ought to extravert, according to these Hollywood experts."

We brush aside fine points of physiognomy with a gesture.

"But you have a twenty-three-year-old son."

"Twenty-four," she corrects. (She has been married to Lester Crawford, prominent stage actor, for a quarter of a century. Their son, Broderick Crawford, is also an actor.)

"Well, you don't look it. And that's what we want to talk about."

"I guess the figure is most important," she muses obligingly. "Once that matronly thickness has settled in there's nothing much to do about it. So you've got to ward it off. The biggest help is what you might call mirror honesty. I know the temptation to kid yourself when what you see in your looking glass is on the acid side. What woman doesn't? You can sort of squint your eyes until the vision goes into soft focus and then hope all the world is a little blind."

"Only it isn't. Everybody sees you as you are and with darn little mercy. Be merciless in your own judgment of the lines that make you or break you. For years I've watched like a hawk for the beginnings of that middle-aged hump on the back of my neck. It is easy to conquer beginning with strict attention to carriage."

"With the same painful zeal I've scanned my mirrored reflection for a thickening waist and widening hips. When Helen Broderick says she is no beauty, but she can give a lot of points to many a girl less modest. At left she is shown with her twenty-four-year-old son, Broderick Crawford, who is following his parents on the stage.

I observe a tendency to bulge in either place I start right in with corrective exercises and I keep at them until they correct. I also go to a masseuse and get myself good and well pounded. It is much easier to take off a little than a lot.

"I watch my weight carefully, too, applying the same principle. Catch the pounds before they add up to too many. Never let yourself get more than five pounds heavier than the weight you have decided is right for you to look your best. When I need to I can diet with the best of them. The rest of the time I eat what I want."

Helen Broderick uses very little make-up away from the screen. She claims she is not the type. Her idea is that women often make themselves look older than they really are by using cosmetics with a heavy hand. She says if those who do would take a searching look at themselves in a strong light at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of a busy day they'd never risk that effect again.

HELEN insists her face is unlined because it is a "dead pan." "I've a soul devoid of emotion," says the comedienne, who steals pictures with the ease born of perfect technique and long training on the stage. The gleam in her eyes makes a liar of her and we might as well tell her so.

"Well, what a feel I keep bottled up inside. That's the nature of the beast. And it is probably just as well for the face."

"All right, that's that." I wouldn't argue that point. Haven't you noticed? The women who can't carry on an ordinary conversation without expressing all the gamut of emotion with the contortions of their facial muscles do seem to go to pieces early.

"But over and above all this, what do you consider the one thing most essential to keep a woman looking young?" we ask.

"Interesting work to do. Something to keep the spirit and enthusiasm from going flat." Helen Broderick has it and she makes the most of it. Refreshing person, Helen.

DID JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

family doctor, had performed the operation. Eddie's wife, Margaret, had also been ill at the time, and Jessie Costello had opened wide her home and insisted that Mrs. McMahon and their little girl be her guests. Mrs. Costello had visited the hospital day and night. . . .

Was there any truth to the rumor, the gossipers wondered, that Bill Costello had gotten wise and beaten his wife for going around with Officer McMahon?

Soon the community had a lot more to talk about. Dr. Tucker informed Chief of Police Dave Pierce that the fire captain had not died of heart failure, but there were other phases of the fatal illness which needed explaining. Chief Pierce got in touch with Hugh A. Gregg, district attorney of Essex county, and asked for an autopsy. Gregg said that autopsies were expensive and seldom amounted to anything, but finally gave his consent.

Chief Pierce felt justified in his insistence upon an autopsy, for he had done a little investigating. One of the first persons he had questioned was Eddie McMahon. Without mentioning the death of Bill Costello, he had asked the officer for a report on the money—$360—which he had collected and never turned into the Police Relief Association. McMahon replied that he had given this money to Mrs. Costello to keep for him when he went to the hospital.

"I asked her for it several times, but each time she put me off," said McMahon. "Finally, she said she'd pay me the money on the 18th."

"The 18th," echoed Pierce. "That's tomorrow."

The chief questioned McMahon further about the widow and finally got some important admissions about the relationship.

McMahon said he had first met Jessie while doing traffic duty on election night the previous November. One meeting led to another, and before long they were having frequent trysts at Hoggs hill. She had confessed to him, he told Pierce, that she'd had no relations with her husband for two years because he wanted more children and she did not.

For a time while Costello was working nights McMahon had lived at the captain's home, he continued, and night after night he would find her waiting for him at 2 o'clock, upon his return from his nightly tour of duty. While he was at the hospital she had come in three or four times, both day and night, defying all rules. He had protested about their seeing so much of each other, that their intimacy was becoming common talk, and that he didn't think Bill was getting a square deal.

To which she replied: "Don't be silly!"

Chief Pierce had a talk with the widow the next morning at his office. She seemed perfectly willing to tell him all she knew about Bill's death. However, she told little not already known, but her statement that she had slept with her husband was later disputed by John Purcell and Officer Prendible, who declared that only one side of the bed was rumpled. They also said they saw no glass of ginger ale, nor were the window shades down. (She told Pierce she had drawn the shades so Bill could get some sleep.)

On this same day, Saturday the 18th, an extremely puzzling incident happened.

Fireman Fred Sherry delivered an envelope to Chief Pierce from Mrs. Costello. It contained $360. Mrs. Costello told Sherry that she had taken the envelope with this money from Bill's pocket after his death. Pierce knew that this was not true, for he had already learned that the widow had borrowed the money from Undertaker Conway. She had cashed Conway's check that morning at a local bank.

Two state detectives now came into the case—Lieutenant-Detectives William F. Murray and Richard J. Griffin, acting under orders from District Attorney Gregg. Chief Pierce, of course, continued his own investigation of the events in the house on Way street.

Reconstructing at least a portion of the picture, the authorities learned that Costello had driven off with his wife immediately after supper, leaving the children in the care of Eddie McMahon's sister, Catherine, who was a guest at the house. Mrs. Costello had visited Dr. Pomeroy, gone on several errands, then Bill had driven her home and himself gone to the wake.

One of these errands had been to a drug store to purchase some oxalic acid and potassium of cyanide "for cleaning."

Officers learned, moreover, that Costello had written his insurance agent only a day or so before his death and tried to reduce his policy from $5,000 to $2,000. (Incidentally, the beneficiary was not Jessie, but John Costello Sr.)

The funeral was held, then the body was secretly returned to Conway's. There Dr. J. Stewart Rooney, state pathologist and an eminent Harvard toxicologist, performed the autopsy, assisted by Dr. Tucker. Soon the doctors made known to Pierce their preliminary findings—Bill Costello had died from cyanide poisoning.

On Tuesday, February 21, Jessie Costello received two visitors. They were Detectives Murray and Griffin. One of the first questions they asked the attractively gowned widow concerned Eddie McMahon. She readily replied that Eddie had been a good friend of her husband, and that Bill had invited him to the house. She told about Eddie's operation, and about Mrs. McMahon coming to live with them.

She denied that Bill had ever been melancholy. He had complained of pains in his stomach some time before and Dr. Pomeroy had given him some pills. She denied all knowledge of the insurance, saying that her husband had always kept his policy and the children's policies at the fire station.

"Have you ever had poison in the house?" asked Griffin.

"Never!"

"Did you ever buy any cyanide of potassium?"

Her dark eyes, set under thick brows, showed surprise.

"Why, yes—if you call that poison?"

She had bought some recently, planning to use it to clean the boiler in her kitchen. She had made a similar purchase a year before. She cleaned the boiler once a year, she said, with a polish which Bill mixed up for her from a recipe furnished by a neighbor, Mrs. Hoffman. She said she had seen this same recipe in the "Good Housekeeping" column of the Boston Globe.

Didn't she know that cyanide of potassium taken internally would cause death? No, she hadn't known that.

After Bill drove her home, following her purchase at the drug store, she had placed the package on the table, but he had told her not to leave the stuff around where the kids might get it. He had put the package on top of the piano.

Then he had gone to the wake, and the next time she saw him was about 2:30 a. m., when he came in and informed her that he had mixed the cleaning stuff.

Where was the mixture now? She

Reviews of New Films

By The Boulevardier

Freddie Bartholomew, who started his characterizations of famous children with David Copperfield, continues with Little Lord Fauntleroy, an M-G-M picture

"Little Lord Fauntleroy"

Freddie Bartholomew in the role and Dolores Costello Barrymore as the mother give distinction to this old favorite. The supporting cast is excellent. Recommended. M-G-M.

Not the dandified creature of yesterday, with curls and lace cuffs, but a regular he-boy even if his slightly longish hair does wave a trifle. This is the Ceddie portrayed by Freddie Bartholomew in the David Selznick production of Francis Hodgson Burnett's beloved story, "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

In its modernized version, interpreted by a distinguished cast and given settings of high quality, this film ranks with the "David Copperfield" in which the youthful Bartholomew won conspicuous success. More success, by the way, is won in the present picture not only by the young star but also by Dolores Costello Barrymore, who comes back to the screen as "Dearest," the mother of Ceddie. Miss Barrymore's appearance in the film was greeted with prolonged applause by the preview audience and it was a tribute which her subsequent acting justified.

The cast has been chosen with infinite care. Guy Kibbee is perfect as the lovable and pathetic Brooklyn grocer, Mister Hobbes, who is Ceddie's best friend. C. Aubrey Smith as the grouchy old Earl of Dorincourt, gives a remarkable performance. And it would be hard to better the Havisham of Henry Stephenson, the Bootblack Dick of Mickey Rooney, the Sir Henry and Lady Lorinda of E. E. Clive and Constance Collier, the Minna of Helen Flint and the meanis bogus heir Tom of Jackie Searl. Credit is due Hollywood for taking this story out of the mothballs and re-furnishing it so cleverly that the joys and woes of Fauntleroy become important to both the men and women members of the theater-going family as well as to the juniors.

In spite of its modern air the romantic plot has not been changed in essentials. Dearest and Ceddie still live forlornly in Brooklyn after the death of Ceddie's father, the son of the English Earl. Ceddie still suffers when the old earl, declining to receive Dearest, banishes her to a cottage on his English estate until the threat of a bogus heir opens his eyes to the worth of his despised American daughter-in-law. Dick and Mister Hobbes still unmask the pretenders to the estate and the story still stands as a record of mother and son devotion.

The film is also distinguished by the beauty of its mounting. There are some scenes which, for artistic arrangement and execution, are as fine as anything the cinematographer has yet achieved.

"Follow the Fleet."

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, with music by Irving Berlin. Recommended, of course. R-K-O-Radio.

They need more men like Fred Astaire in the United States Navy.

True, there might be less gun practice than dancing practice and possibly the admiral about whom Astaire sings so blithely might not recognize the deck drills, but still there'd be a certain joie de vivre about the service which it will forever lack until the sailors know their tap steps. "Follow the Fleet," indeed. Try and keep up with it!

Not that the plot matters, and not that it's especially good, but it seems that Bat (Astaire) and Sherry (Ginger Rogers) were a dancing team until Bat joined the navy. Here he is back in port now, and with his friend Bilge—something of a rat, though Randolph Scott does his gentlemanly best for the role—he visits the dance hall where Sherry has a job as entertainer and where Bilge becomes interested in Connie, Sherry's sister. Harriet Hilliard, who plays the part of Connie, was recently recruited from radio; she seems likely to make a hit on the screen. The story wanders onward to include vampire Iris (Astrid Allwyn), and gets to be about what you'd expect in a musical comedy.

But in the interim Astaire and Miss Rogers dance a generous number of times, and they have never danced better. Astaire drills his fellow sailors, in tap rhythm; with Miss Rogers he does a dramatic dance about the perils of Monte Carlo, and the two also do a burlesque dance which is perhaps their best number. There are nearly as many songs as dances, and while the Irving Berlin contributions are not so catchy as others he has composed, they include "I'm Putting All My Eggs in One Basket," "Where Are You?" (sung by Miss Hilliard), "We Saw the Sea" and "Let's Face the Music," ditties which should become popular.

With a background of dance hall instead of the erstwhile drawing-room, Astaire and Miss Rogers contrive to be as debonair as ever, even if the film by comparison is a trifle lacking in glamour. The direction by Mark Sandrich is smooth and rapid, the dialog is bright, and the mood is gay.

"Gentle Julia"

Hollywood overdoes the situations taken from the Booth Tarkington novel. Marsha Hunt, a newcomer, is the most creditable character. Acceptable. Twentieth Century-Fox.

Exaggeration is the curse of Hollywood. When this town ceases to think in terms of the colossal, the celluloid world will be a more beautiful and blithe domain. Particularly a more blithe, for the knowledge will spread that humor can seldom be served in colossal portions, that a joke emphasized beyond a certain point ceases to entertain.

In the translation to the screen of Booth Tarkington's novel "Gentle Julia," there is hardly a comedy situation that has not been played up for more than it is worth, hardly a character that does not more or less burlesque the original. The result is broad and sometimes lethargic farce.

Perhaps the character nearest to reality is Marsha Hunt's Julia Atwater, a dressy young coquette who elopes with the natty villain, Mr. Crum (George Meeker).

Jane Withers and Jackie Searl have some nice passages at arms over the management of their "newspaper" with its exposure of the duplicity of Mr. Crum.

For people who especially like Booth Tarkington characters, however, and do not especially dislike obvious tries at humor, the film may be rated as acceptable.

Recent pictures which have been reviewed and recommended in Screen & Radio Weekly are as follows: "Ah, Wilderness" (M-G-M); "The Story of Louis Pasteur" (Warner Bros.); "Chatterbox" (RKO-Radio); "Professional Soldier" (Twentieth Century-Fox); "Ceiling Zero" (Warner Bros.); "The Petrified Forest" (Warner Bros.); "Rose Marie" (M-G-M); "Anything Goes" (Paramount); "The Lady Consents" (RKO-Radio); "Milky Way" (Paramount); "Desire" (Paramount); "Love On a Bet" (RKO-Radio); "Next Time We Love" (Universal).

DID JUSTICE TRIUMPH?

had thrown it out, she said, but the coffee can container and the two bottles of cyanide of potassium and oxalic acid were down in the cellar. Officer Murray went down and got them, and then the two detectives returned to the police station to talk the matter over with local officers. They soon found that Mrs. Costello's story did not check with the stories of other witnesses, notably Charles Wells, in charge of the Curtis Drug Store.

Mrs. Costello had first approached a clerk and asked for the cyanide and oxalic acid. The clerk had gone to the rear of the store to report the matter to Wells, who then went out front and talked to the customer. Wells insisted he had warned her of the deadliness of cyanide. (He had, of course, reported the purchase to the authorities, as required by law.)

Detective Murray visited all the drug stores in Peabody and adjoining towns, but was unable to discover that Mrs. Costello had ever made any previous purchases.

The widow next faced her interrogators at police headquarters February 24. During this interview she admitted that she had asked Dr. Pomeroy for a prescription to get the cyanide. (Dr. Pomeroy denied this. He said she asked for a prescription for oxalic acid and he had told her that a prescription was not necessary.)

As for Mrs. Hoffman giving her neighbor a recipe for cleaning the boiler—Mrs. Hoffman denied this.

As for the recipe in the Boston Globe—detectives searched the "Good Housekeeping" column of the Globe for 15 years and found no such formula.

Informed of this, the suspect changed her story. She said that it must have been the same mixture which was used at the firehouse. But the authorities knew that it was not the same mixture—the firemen used Kimball's police.

Further examination of the body of Bill Costello showed traces of poison in the brain, liver and kidneys. A substance, consistent with that of a gelatine capsule, was found in the stomach, substantiating the police theory that the poison had been introduced in this manner.

Questioning of Mrs. Costello continued. Finally, she hired a former district attorney of Essex, William G. Clark, of Gloucester, to protect her interests. Dr. Pomeroy also got himself a lawyer. Detectives located the candy woman, Nellie Ayers, of Lynn, but she could contribute nothing new.

Finally, it was discovered that Mrs. Costello had purchased a box of empty capsules a short time before the tragedy. She denied this, and the matter was not made public.

The attractive suspect was indicted March 17, and was immediately placed under arrest by Chief of Police Pierce. The bad news did not ruffle her in the slightest. She asserted that she was innocent, that she had never been intimate with McMahon, and that a jury would surely vindicate her.

The case went to trial on July 27, 1933, and we shall reverse the usual process in stories of this kind and report a fact already well known to newspaper readers, and most particularly to newspaper readers of Peabody, Mass. Mrs. Jessie Costello was acquitted.

Jessie's trial attracted widespread attention, a special press room being needed for the reporters, special writers, authors, novelists and philosophers who covered the event for papers all over the country.

Judge Frederick W. Fosdick presided; Cregg was assisted by Charles A. Green and John A. Ryan; and the defense was ably represented by Francis E. Rafter, assisted by former District Attorney Clark and William E. O'Brien.

The jury, which was selected almost immediately, soon became known as the "Singing Jury," for when out of the courtroom they broke into harmony at the slightest provocation. (They got to be such good pals that they now meet on anniversaries of Acquittal Day, August 14.)

The state contended in its case against the fair defendant:

1. That she slew her husband by giving him a capsule filled with cyanide of potassium.
2. That medical testimony showed he did not die where he was found in the hallway.
3. That he did not commit suicide, for he had been in excellent spirits as late as 2:30 a. m.
4. That Jessie bought cyanide and oxalic acid at the Curtis Drug Store.
5. That she knew how to fill capsules.
6. That the motive for the crime was that her husband stood between her and her affair with McMahon.

The defense asserted they would establish the following:

1. That Costello killed himself and that the state had no proof of murder.

2. That Jessie was an ideal mother greatly in love with her children.

3. That McMahon's story was a tissue of lies.

4. That the defendant could not gain from the insurance policies because they were made out to John Costello.

5. That Bill Costello had been morose ever since the death of an infant son, William, and particularly so during the O'Neill wake.

6. That Bill might have died from inhalation or absorption of cyanide.

The prosecution called about 50 witnesses, and the high point came when Eddie McMahon faced an unfriendly court and told his story. A great many of the writers who covered the trial seemed to think this was not quite sporting of the officer. He was branded "the kiss-and-tell cop."

A medical expert for the state testified that the red spot on Costello's right breast indicated that the body found lying on its left side had been moved after death as the blood had congealed to form that mark while on its right side.

Mrs. Costello took the stand herself on August 2 and endured three days of cross-examination. She came through with flying colors, and topped off her performance with a dramatic plea to the melodious 12 in the jury box. This came after Cregg had finished shouting that this was murder and that the jury should doom her as she had doomed her devoted mate.

"Mr. Foreman and gentlemen of the jury," she began in her rich contralto voice. "The district attorney has spoken. The district attorney said I didn't love my husband and I ask you is to send me home—back to my three children.

"I loved my husband and I didn't kill him, as he (Cregg) said."

They sent her home after three hours and 23 minutes' deliberation. Later, Jessie was signed up for a theatrical tour, but public feeling was so strong against her—despite the buildup by the sob sisters and brothers—that the project had to be abandoned. Then she joined up with Aimee Semple McPherson, the evangelist, but this also fell through. Lately she has been suing her father-in-law in an effort to get some of the insurance money.

She has not remarried.

A One-Man Menagerie

A Crooked Tooth
Put Purv Pullen
on Air and Screen

By Donald Hayworth

PURV PULLEN has had enough lucky breaks to satisfy half a dozen aspiring radio artists. A few years ago he lowered his lance, charged Manhattan's towers, and within a week was broadcasting over a network of 42 stations—all because a celebrity fell down stairs on his way to the studio.

At another time station KDKA needed a special program. The manager sent a telegram across the continent to Purv to find out whether or not he was free to do the program. But Pullen, not knowing the telegram had been sent, sauntered into the studios less than an hour later just to visit the station. His program was sold to the sponsors that afternoon and put on the air the next day.

Purv Pullen's racket literally is one of the queerest in radio or motion pictures. John Hix called him "The One-Man Menagerie." He can imitate accurately any animal or bird which he has been able to hear. He even has a number of insects on his list.

"Purv," I asked him, "why do the newspapers put the number of your animal and bird calls at 125? It seems to me I've heard you do more than 300 myself."

"Well," he answered, "years ago I did have only 125, and I've just let it stay at that as far as publicity is concerned. Then, too, I've always been afraid somebody'd challenge me, and if that ever happens I want to be able to reel off 125 without stopping to think."

WHEN the average radio act needs a dog bark, somebody gives a few yips or growls over the microphone and then calls to the director, "Did that sound like a dog?" After a few minutes of experimenting the effect is considered satisfactory and thus it goes on the air.

Pullen doesn't work that way. Every one of his imitations comes from real life. He spends days at a time out in the woods giving bird calls—calling to them and getting their answers. He can entice birds by their calls until they come to sit on the same log with him or even eat out of his hand.

Needless to say, he didn't get the lion's roar nor the tiger's snarl from listening to them in their native haunts. Purv makes a point of visiting zoos, especially at feeding time.

WE USUALLY think most birds have only one call, but Purv says that they all use several calls, and he whistled for me the mating call of a sparrow, the call it uses when in danger, the one used when eating, and still another which may be heard while it is in flight. The domestic chicken has a vocabulary of a dozen or 15 sounds. It seems that the chicken's contact with civilization has increased its vocabulary.

Every one of his calls is done by the organs of speech, and without the use of his fingers or artificial whistles. After hearing him do a number of calls I asked him cautiously if he would teach me some of them. I thought I might be able to tell readers how to do them. He was glad to show me everything he could, but after some rather awkward and fruitless struggling to manipulate my stubborn tongue I decided to give up my ambition to become a bird imitator.

Pullen's mouth and throat are entirely normal except for one of his lower front teeth, which is slightly out of line—about a sixteenth of an inch. It is this little opening which enables him to warble and twitter in those extremely high notes.

He makes the lion's roar with his mouth wide open and very close to the microphone. When the sound goes into the microphone it is not loud enough to be heard across the studio, but it comes out of your loud speaker a terrifying roar.

I asked him if he used any psychological "set" when he did his imitations.

"Sure, when I do a canary, I imagine myself sitting on a little perch, twittering away to my heart's content. When I am imitating a horse, I snort and whinny, imagining myself prancing up and down a pasture. Sounds foolish, but it helps." He said this with a straight face, so he may have meant it.

PULLEN'S first big break was so unusual that it must be told. After he had done some broadcasting over small stations he decided to make a try for the networks. The first thing he did was to call on Carveth Wells, the explorer, who in addition to radio work was doing an act in a Broadway theater. Wells listened to a few imitations and told Purv to sit in the audience that evening.

While giving his program Carveth Wells told the audience there was an extraordinary imitator in the house and invited him to the stage. Purv got a big hand for a few minutes of wise cracks and imitations; and Wells told him to work up two minutes of imitations of animals whose names began with "H," and to come to his broadcast a few days later.

Pullen was at the studio an hour before the broadcast. Half an hour before the program was to begin, Carveth Wells hadn't arrived, and NBC officials were worried. They began telephoning. He couldn't be found. Minutes wore on. When only two minutes were left they asked Pullen if he could open the program. And, of course, he could.

Purv Pullen (right) can sound like 300 animals, birds and insects. Before his first Hollywood job he spent two years with Ben Bernie (left) whistling "Let's All Sing Like the Birdies Sing."

When the zero hour approached, the announcer stepped to the microphone and announced, "Mr. Wells probably is lost in one of his African jungles," and then introduced Pullen, who even then had no idea he would do the whole program. Finally he ran out of all the "H's" he could think of. He had imitated horses and horseflies, hogs and hippopotamuses, hens and hyenas.

After he had dragged these out as long as he could he looked up desperately at the clock and saw he still had two minutes to go. He reached down into his portfolio, grabbed a sheet of music, threw it at the pianist, held up two fingers to indicate he wanted two choruses, and announced, "Now to close the program I want to whistle a little song for you. I'm sorry I don't have one that begins with H." And he finished the program exactly on time.

The results of the broadcast were astounding. Fan mail flooded in. And Purv Pullen was signed to appear for eight months on all the Carveth Wells programs. It turned out that Mr. Wells had suffered a slight heart attack and fallen down stairs.

ALMOST as unusual was the way Purv happened to join Ben Bernie. The Old Maestro was at College Inn in Chicago. Purv had a letter of introduction to him. Bernie said, "Come around this evening and I'll let you do a number."

"Without rehearsing?" asked the perturbed Pullen.

"Sure," responded Bernie, "Tell us what number you want, and just ad lib your whistling."

Bernie was right. "Let's All Sing Like the Birdies Sing" made a real hit, and Pullen did that same number with Bernie's orchestra for two years—not varying a note nor adding a single warble.

Then Bernie went to Hollywood to make a picture, and Purv got another break. He arrived there a couple of weeks ahead of the orchestra, and happened to see in a newspaper that M-G-M was having a lot of trouble with the animal cries in "Tarzan and His Mate." After sitting six hours in the casting rooms, he finally got half a minute with Douglas Shearer, the recording director. Shearer seemed doubtful, but asked, "Could you make monkey cries?"

For six months M-G-M had been teasing monkeys in order to get the right kinds of cries. But Purv Pullen demonstrated that he could do the whole job in a few hours—providing he got a good-sized check. Which he did.

PULLEN has also been used in feature pictures by Paramount, R-K-O, and Fox. Some of the recent features for which he has provided sound effects and animal calls have been, "Sequoia," "Jalna," "The Crusades," "Tarzan and His Mate," and he has worked with Walt Disney, Aesop's Fables, Leon Schlesinger and Betty Boop. He has recently finished 26 fifteen-minute episodes for a Hollywood recording company which sells records to radio stations all over the country.

Pullen's birds and animals have been heard from more than 300 individual radio stations and over both networks. All the major film studios have had him make sound tracks which they can fit into any situation they wish. When you see a canary in a picture and hear it warbling so beautifully, the chances are that the sound originally came out from behind that peculiar front tooth of Purv Pullen.

Questions and Comments from the Mail Bag

PLEASE tell me something about the life of Jean Arthur, such as when and where she was born, and how long she has been in pictures? Also a list of her pictures if possible?

GAY DAUPHIN.

Born in New York City, Oct. 17, 1908, and educated there. Her first screen experience was in small parts for Fox and Paramount. Since 1929 she has appeared in "Brotherly Love," "The Green Murder Case," "Here Comes the Band Wagon," "Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu," "Saturday Night Kid," "Sins of the Fathers," "Stairs of Sand," "Halfway to Heaven," "Paramount on Parade," "Return of Dr. Fu Manchu," "Street of Chance," "Young Eagles," "Past of Mary Holmes," "Whirlpool," "Defense Rests," "Most Precious Thing in Life," "The Whole Town's Talking," "Public Menace," "If You Could Only Cook," "A Gentleman Goes to Town," the latter not yet released.

What was Shirley Temple's name in the picture "Our Little Girl" and who played her father and mother? Will you please name all the cast? What is Shirley's next picture to be?

HER ADMIRER.

Molly Middleton. Her father and mother were played by Joel McCrea and Rosemary Ames. Others in the picture were Lyle Talbot, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Margaret Armstrong, Poodles Hanford, Rita Owin, Leonard Carey, J. Farrell MacDonald, Jack Baxley. Shirley's next picture will be "Captain January."

ELMER D.

Joan Bennett.

WHAT was the name of the picture in which Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles appeared as man and wife and staged a domestic quarrel before their children to teach the latter a lesson? As I remember the picture, their scheme was a failure and brought them a lot of headaches.

GEORGE M.

"People Will Talk" was the title of the comedy.

Please tell me the address of S. S. Van Dine, famous author.

TIM MILLS.

S. S. Van Dine is the name of the author of Willard Huntington Wright. Address him in care of Charles Scribner's Sons, 597 Fifth Ave., New York City.

Where was John Boles born, and what is his next picture? Is that his real name, and is he married?

HOPE.

Greenville, Tex. "Message to Garcia" is Boles' next picture. Boles is his real name, and he is married.

What was Richard Barthelmess' last picture? Did Joe Morrison appear in that picture? Who played the leading feminine roles?

GINGER.

"Four Hours to Kill." Morrison was in the cast. The women were Helen Mack, Gertrude Michael, Dorothy Tree and Bodil Rosing.

What is the age, height, weight of Wendy Barrie, Rochelle Hudson, Ann Dvorak, Margaret Sullivan?

D. M. B.

In the order requested: Twenty-four, 5 feet 5 inches, 110 pounds; 20, 5 feet 4 inches, 100 pounds; 25, 5 feet 3 inches, 109 pounds.

I read the mail bag every week but have never seen anything about William Cagney. How long has he been in pictures? How old is he? Is he married? Is he James Cagney's brother? What pictures has he played in? Where can I write to him?

A. H. H.

William was born in New York City, 26 years ago. Married. Brother of James Cagney. His pictures include "Ace of Aces," "Palooka," "Lost in the Stratosphere." He is now in business as an agent for players. As his last picture was made at Monogram Studios mail addressed to him there probably will be forwarded.

I RECENTLY saw a story to the effect that one of P. G. Wodehouse's "Jeeves" stories was to be made into pictures. Has anyone been selected to play the title part? While there are plenty of good American comedians in Hollywood, it seems to me a British actor would be particularly suited to the part, which is so distinctively English. A man, say, like Charles Laughton, who did such a splendid job with "Ruggles of Red Gap."

BRITISH BORN.

Arthur Treacher, British actor, who has won distinction for his butlers and other roles on the screen, has been selected to play the stellar role in "Jeeves."

Where is Gene Autry at present? How old is Gary Cooper? These two are my favorites.

MARY KRISTIN.

Autry is not currently working in pictures according to our present information. His last serial was made at Mascot Studios. If you write directly to that studio in Hollywood you may learn where he is, what doing, and where to address him. Cooper is 35.

Where can I obtain pictures of James Cagney, Stan Laurel, Boris Karloff and George Raft?
